Baby boom

It happened in the late '40s and has been having a considerable effect on the U.S. lifestyle ever since. The baby boom. The consequences of the population bulge it created are only now being fully appreciated. Page A-8.

Want to get away from the rat race? Anxious to try some of that easy-paced country living? Well, don't rush it. The rural life can give you ulcers, too. Page A-11.

Watch that blonde?

... Who, me?

Ad researchers seeking reaction to a TV commercial featuring a lithe blonde in a bikini, called a phone number at random. "What did you think of that commercial we just ran?" they asked. "Boring," said the guy, whose wife was listening maybe. But a voice-pitch analysis nailed the lie. "It jumped all over the place," said a researcher. It's the new thing with ad men... finding the truth about consumer reaction. Page A-13.

The image of Scotland Yard, home of the British super sleuths, has become somewhat tarnished. Kickbacks and bribes, and all that sort of stuff. Rotten show, really. A new broom is now sweeping out the Yard. Page A-14.

They come to the Southland from all over the country. Young and old. Seeking the sun and a new life. And, sadly, there's no place for them to stay while they look for jobs. Girl, 8, desert heroine

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Heading toward the bright sky over Las Vegas, an 8-year-old girl led her dazed older brother to safety through eight miles of rugged desert terrain from an airplane crash that killed their mother and the pilot, authorities said Saturday.

The girl, Richelle Krumpeck of San Jose, then told searchers how to find the wreckage of the single-engine Piper Cherokee, which crashed into a hillside about 20 miles from here.

The two killed, who were sitting in the front seats of the craft, were identified as Ruth Krumpeck, 35, and Ron Griffin, 31, both of San Jose. The children had been in the back of the four-seater plane.

"I heard this beeping noise about three times and then I blinked and all of a sudden the next thing I know I look around and Ron was on Randy's lap with his head all bleeding," the youngster told authorities. "And my mom was on the seat with her face all bleeding. I climbed out the window and I told him (Randy) to climb out the window too."

Richelle said she helped her 18-year-old brother, Randy, from the wreckage Friday evening and urged him on to Las Vegas because she was concerned about her mother and Griffin.

'Koreagate' expands 50 congressmen targets of House probe

By Richard Halloran
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — As President Carter accused South Korea of impeding justice in the United States, informed sources on Capitol Hill disclosed Saturday that the House Ethics Committee had winnowed its list of suspects in the Korean investigation to about 50 sitting congressmen.

In addition, congressional and diplomatic sources said, the committee, after a long dispute with the Korean embassy, has reached an agreement under which its investigators are being given access to embassy bank records.

President Carter, in a report required by the foreign aid bill, reiterated the Justice Department's contention that "truthful testimony" from Tongsun Park, who allegedly was Seoul's principal political agent here, is "essential to the full investigation and successful prosecution of illegal acts by U.S. officials."

The president recited the administration's efforts to obtain that testimony from Park, a fugitive in Seoul from an indictment for conspiracy and bribery here. Those efforts included Carter's message in August to President Park Chung Hee of South Korea, expressing "grave concern" over the lack of cooperation by the Seoul government, and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's expression of "strong disappointment" to Foreign Minister Park Tong Jin a month later. The Parks are not related.

In his message Saturday, Carter said: "The Korean government's failure to persuade Mr. Park to return to the United States was not the response expected of a close ally. His absence was impeding the course of justice in the United States."

Carter also referred to the proposal, made known earlier by the Justice Department, that the department would seek dismissal of the charges against Park if he returned to the United States and testified truthfully.

The president's letter was the latest in increasingly strong expressions of criticism of South Korea coming from American leaders, including the House speaker, Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts; the Senate majority leader, Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia; the chairman of the ethics committee, Rep. John J. Flynt Jr., D-Ga., and the special counsel to the ethics committee, Leon Jaworski.

Carter vetoes atom reactor

By James Gerstenzang
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Carter used his first veto Saturday, rejecting a bill that would have authorized $80 million for a breeder reactor that would produce weapons-grade nuclear material.

Carter said the reactor project, located on the Clinch River in Tennessee, would imperil his effort to stop the spread of nuclear weapons and technology.

The president indicated he would consider impounding funds for the project if his veto is overridden "to ensure that no further unnecessary expenditures on this facility are made."

Carter said the government-industry venture at Oak Ridge, Tenn., designed to demonstrate the feasibility of breeder reactors, would be "technically obsolete and economically unsound."

THE BILL cleared Congress on Oct. 20, winning 366-52 approval in the House and passage by voice vote in the Senate. It would take 67 votes in the Senate to overturn the veto and 290 in the House.

"There are now on the drawing boards better technologies," said Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's assistant for domestic affairs and policy.

Eizenstat said Carter was confident the House and Senate would sustain the veto.

The measure authorized funding for fiscal 1978, which began Oct. 1, for the Energy Department's nuclear and non-nuclear energy research, development and demonstration projects. New legislation for projects other than the Clinch River project would have to be passed if the veto is sustained.

Breeder reactors produce more nuclear fuel, plutonium, than they consume. The fuel can be converted for use in atomic bombs, and Carter has stated that his efforts to end the project were part of his program to halt the spread of weapons-grade nuclear material.

The federal government's share of the project had increased from $250 million, when it was first authorized in 1970, to $2 billion.

"THAT IS $2 billion we feel will be spent on technology that, by the time the project is built, may not be the best technology," Eizenstat said.

Carter said in his veto message that his administration is committed to "a strong research and development program for advanced nuclear technologies" but that the Clinch River project was not needed.

The bill, Carter said, was "inconsistent with my strong belief that proceeding beyond completion of the systems design phase of the Clinch River facility would imperil the administration's policy to curb proliferation of nuclear weapons technology."

Rep. George Brown, D-Calif., who sponsored an unsuccessful House amendment to cancel the project, said Carter's veto was "sound on economic, political, scientific, environmental and national security grounds."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the energy research and development subcommittee, said the veto was wrong.

"By refusing to build a breeder reactor while other nations proceed to do so, we... retreat from reality," he said. "Other nations have already crossed the threshold of the plutonium age."

CARTER HAD to veto the bill Saturday or it would have become law automatically.

Congress has yet to act on a separate measure containing an $80 million appropriation for the same project.

Congress usually funds each federal program with two bills: an authorization bill setting a ceiling on how much money can be appropriated and the conditions for how the money is to be spent, and an appropriations bill releasing the money.

Advocates of the reactor program had considered the $80 million a compromise to keep the project roughly on schedule without actually beginning construction.

Originally, the House had authorized $150 million, enough to start construction. The Senate approved $75 million, and a conference committee settled on the $80 million.

Q and A

Norwalk chief sees help near

Metropolitan State Hospital executive director Mal Towery was given until Thursday to "shape up or ship out" by Gov. Brown last week following the worst crisis in Towery's year-long administration of the mental hospital in Norwalk.

In the past week, the county Board of Supervisors voted to sue the state to compel correction of substandard care at Metropolitan; the district attorney has been asked to investigate pre-signing of blank conservatorship requests, and Towery was forced to close admissions to three acute wards because of resignations by staff psychiatrists.

A state licensing team cited the hospital two weeks ago for 177 violations of state and federal regulations, and Assemblyman Bruce Young, D-Norwalk, has charged that "tragic conditions and treatment" at the facility require an emergency legislative investigation. Young said there have been five homicides and six rapes on the hospital grounds this year.

Towery, who said he does not expect to be fired by the governor, was interviewed Saturday in his office by Independent Press-Telegram reporter Bob Keefer.

Q. What do you think is going to happen here in the next week?

A. I'm looking forward to dramatic changes. I think that for the very first time, there will be a very clear, loud voice stating what is in fact needed, without any other considerations.

Q. Why has it taken this kind of crisis to bring out a "clear, loud voice?"

A. Well, simply stated, the budget has always been a relatively secret process. What the governor writes in the budget and goes to the Legislature has always been sort of an in-house process.

But what the governor did the other night was set up so all that process takes place here, Monday and Tuesday. With the amount of concern expressed by the media and others, it's going to be a relatively public document, as to what is in fact determined is needed by

Murder reveals crime labyrinth

By Larry LaRue
Staff Writer

Early on the morning of Oct. 22, two mistakes and nine bullets killed Stephen John Bovan.

He was hot — too hot to be on the streets of Newport Beach, let alone in his favorite restaurant there. For weeks he'd been in hiding, staying away from his Fountain Valley home.

He told friends he was hiding from "the mob" — that someone wanted to kill him. Shortly after 3:30 a.m. Oct. 22, someone did.

The shooting itself was not front page news. Soon, however, it became apparent that the death was a climactic end to a complex web of crimes that included kidnapping, embezzlement and drug trafficking.

As investigators unraveled the evidence, they found connections — some tenuous, some indisputable — linking the case to organized crime, an international drug ring and the Hare Krishna religion.

Six days after the shooting, investigators had in custody four men — and the case was so complex that it took the officers more than two hours to brief officials from the Orange County district attorney's office.

They began by discussing Bovan, and why someone put a contract on a man who one detective called "a second-rate hood."

The original crime was simple, and Orange County investigators say Bovan and two friends believed it foolproof — a kidnapping that would go unreported to law enforcement agencies and bring in a small fortune.

The victim of the alleged kidnapping was to be Alexander Kulik, a 27-year-old Newport Beach business executive. Kulik and three associates ran Prasadam Distribution International (PDI), an investment firm, and Bovan knew in August what authorities learned this week: PDI funneled hundreds of thousands of dollars into legitimate businesses throughout Orange County.

Bovan and his friends didn't think the money being invested was clean. They believed it came through a drug trafficking syndicate, and Bovan apparently thought Kulik was the top man.

In August, Bovan and his friends — police believe the two were Robert Shea and Stan Kieffer — allegedly kidnapped Kulik at gunpoint and demanded $100,000.

Newport Beach police, who learned of the incident months later, say PDI officers paid the ransom. Kulik was freed. Bovan and his friends dropped out of sight.

Soon after, Kulik met with his three PDI partners, Joseph Davis, Joseph Federowski and Roy Rich-

Heyerdahl Indian crew balk at sails

Combined News Services

Three Indian sailors hired by Thor Heyerdahl for his latest research expedition walked out on the Norwegian explorer as soon as they discovered the reed boat he is using has no engine.

In a report from Iraq Saturday, where the reed boat Tigris is being readied for departure, an Oslo newspaper said the Indians were to have been members of a 14-man international crew assembled by Heyerdahl for his latest expedition.

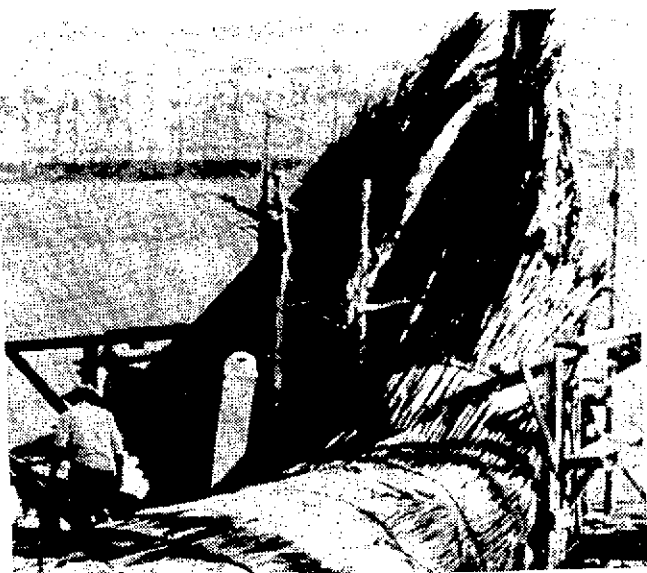

Heyerdahl, who became famous 30 years ago with his Kon-Tiki balsam raft trip across the Pacific, plans to sail the copy of an ancient Sumeri reed boat from Iraq into the Indian Ocean.

The paper said the Indian crew members claimed they had received "the shock of our lives" when they saw the almost finished 30-ton "heap of reed" that Heyerdahl plans to sail from the mouth of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers.

Heyerdahl intends to prove that the Sumeri people of ancient Mesopotamia knew navigation and sailed as far as India and southern Africa with the kind of reed boat he has built near Qurna, Iraq.

The paper reported that the three Indians claimed they were ordinary sailors who had applied for jobs in Bombay. They said they were told they would be working on a 500-ton cargo vessel for a trip around Africa at $150 a month.

$1 million sought in baby-mixup suit

Catherine Thornton believes a Detroit hospital gave her the wrong baby after she gave birth eight years ago. Now, the mother of 13 is awaiting a verdict on her $1 million suit against the hospital.

The case went to a Detroit jury Friday after officials of Crittenton Hospital denied there had been any mixup. The jury recessed for the weekend without reaching a verdict.

Mrs. Thornton, 47, and her husband, Claude, said she delivered a 5-pound, 2-ounce baby Oct. 7, 1969, and that the infant was palm-printed, tagged and taken to the nursery.

The mother said she never saw that baby again. Instead, she said, a nurse brought her a baby with a lighter complexion, a lower forehead, a quieter nature and a different identification number than the baby she delivered.

During the trial, hospital personnel testified the change in identification number tags was made to correct a misspelling in the mother's name.

Police investigators testified that while the palm prints were too poor to allow for absolute confirmation, they were convinced the baby was Mrs. Thornton's.

Another hospital official testified that it is common for the shape of a baby's head and its complexion to change substantially in the first 15 hours after birth.

As for the child's quiet personality, defense attorney Philip Aber charged the Thorntons had rejected the baby. He said, "That is why it is quiet and withdrawn ... that is why the real tragedy in this case is the child."

Mrs. Thornton insisted that, "I've always treated him as my son and loved him as my own son."

Mrs. Thornton told reporters she would like to find her "real son" and bring him up but conceded she has no idea where he is.

Joe Louis

A spokesman for Baylor College of Medicine in Houston said Saturday that former heavy-weight champion Joe Louis' condition had improved to very satisfactory.

It was the best report on the 63-year-old former fighter since he underwent heart surgery earlier this week.

Late Friday night Louis was listed in satisfactory but stable condition. But early Saturday a hospital spokesman said Louis' status had "improved to very satisfactory and he is progressing quite well."

Alumnae hail 'idiot' Hepburn

In Philadelphia Friday night, actress Katharine Hepburn, whose marks almost kept her from graduating from Bryn Mawr College in 1928, said she felt "like an absolute idiot" when she received the M. Carey Thomas award for outstanding achievement.

"Everyone thinks I was fascinating," Miss Hepburn told an audience of about 1,000. "I wasn't. I was gaunt, pathetic and kind of dumb."

The award is given by the school's alumnae association.

Labor hero dies

Alexei Stakhanov, the coal miner whose feats of labor in the 1930s are still cited in Soviet campaigns for productivity, died Saturday at the age of 71.

Moscow's repeated drives for increased output by workers have their roots in the Stakhanovite Movement created around the stock young miner by Soviet propagandists in 1935.

That year, Stakhanov and his team of workers mined 102 tons of coal in a single shift, 14 times the norm at that time. He was hailed as a national hero.

Charles royally wiped out

In Sydney, Australia, Prince Charles took the "wipeouts" — a surfers' term for being dumped from a surfboard — in good spirits here during an attempt to ride the waves Saturday, aides reported.

"This water is bloody cold," said the heir to the British throne, after being dumped several times in the 57-degree water during 45 minutes of surfing.

A lifeguard, Greg Smith, who cracked waves with the prince, said: "The prince told me he was disappointed at the small waves."

New German terror threat

Combined News Services

BONN — West German terrorists threatened Saturday to blow up three Lufthansa aircraft, one each in memory of three of their comrades who were found dead in a Stuttgart prison Oct. 18.

Meanwhile, suspects in the kidnapping and murder of German industrial leader Hanns-Martin Schleyer were seen in Beirut recently, according to security officials here.

Some of the six prime suspects in the Schleyer case are known to have been in the Middle East before, for guerrilla training.

The threat against Lufthansa came in a letter received by the French news agency in Paris Saturday, signed by "the Red Army Faction." It said the aircraft would be blown up beginning Nov. 15, to commemorate the deaths of faction members Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe.

German tank deal

BEIRUT — West Germany is in the process of entering the Middle East armaments market with a deal to sell an undisclosed number of Leopard tanks to Saudi Arabia. The Leopard, one of the most advanced tanks in the West, has been sold only to NATO members. Although West Germany has refused to sell weapons to countries in regions of tension, it apparently has softened its restrictions in appreciation of the Saudis' help in the rescue of the hijacked Lufthansa airliner last month at Mogadishu, Somalia.

Blackouts continue

LONDON — Cold cuts and salad will probably replace the traditional Sunday roast for many Britons because of power cuts caused by a wildcat work slowdown at generating plants. The government, which operates the plants, balked at a conciliatory gesture from the power workers Saturday, and hours-long blackouts hit one-tenth of the nation's 19 million homes Saturday night.

City without water

CARACAS — A pump breakdown in the water system in the capital of Venezuela closed schools and hospitals Saturday and left many of the city's two million people without a bath or shave. Tank trucks accompanied by military guards distributed water in some poorer neighborhoods. Officials said full service will be restored Thursday.

Busts won't denude touring 'Calcutta'

ATLANTA — A spokesman for the touring company of "Oh! Calcutta!" said Saturday the show with its nude acts will go on in spite of Friday night's arrest of the nine cast members on charges of public indecency. The nine actors were booked and later released on $1,000 bond each.

Performances were to resume Saturday night and continue today, when the show is scheduled to leave town. The play opened here Tuesday.

Friday night's raid caused cancellation of a scheduled second performance.

The play has toured 44 cities in the United States. Atlanta and Cincinnati are the only cities in which the play was forced to close.

Russian amnesty

MOSCOW — Citing "the principles of socialist humanity," the Soviet Union declared an amnesty Saturday for many categories of imprisoned criminals, but not for political dissidents. The amnesty was declared in honor of the 60th anniversary Monday of the Bolshevik revolution. Observers expect the amnesty to involve many thousands of people.

Ganges fight ends

DACCA, Bangladesh — India and Bangladesh signed a five-year agreement Saturday for the sharing of Ganges River water, thereby ending a decades-old dispute. The two nations have quarreled over Ganges water rights since shortly after the British pulled out of the Indian subcontinent 30 years ago.

Famine hits islands

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Three months of drought has wiped out much of the rice harvest on the islands of Lombok and Sumbawa, about 750 miles east of here, and more than 400,000 persons are suffering from famine, government officials said Saturday.

Troops clash

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Rhodesia reported Saturday that its forces exchanged fire with troops in neighboring Zambia and Mozambique and that 12 black guerrillas were killed inside Rhodesia. The fighting came as leaders of the white-minority government were conferring with British and United Nations envoys on proposals to halt the five-year guerrilla war and transfer political power to the nation's black majority.

10 die in fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Violence ranging from a gunbattle north of Beirut to artillery shelling along the Israeli border killed 10 persons and wounded 15 others Saturday. Six died in the Christian district of Koura, 60 miles north of Beirut, in fighting that pitted right-wing Christians against leftists trying to return to their hometown, from which they were driven during Lebanon's civil war. Three other persons were reported killed when 22 pounds of dynamite exploded in a plush apartment building in Beirut's Muslim sector. A Moslem lawyer who writes columns in several rightist Christian newspapers in Beirut was the apparent target of the blast.

Property rights

Is there a new law in California stating that all property purchased by common-law couples must be divided equally between the two? My mate and I have been living together for 10 years and have bought property as joint tenants, but he has never divorced his wife. What are her rights of inheritance? E.W., Long Beach.

Common-law marriages are not recognized in California, and there are no laws defining division of community property acquired by unmarried couples. In a couple of precedent-setting court cases, however, in which considerable amounts of money and property were involved, common-law couples have been treated the same as legal families in dividing community property.

Although your friend has not divorced his wife, any property he has acquired since he separated from her would be considered separate, not community, property, and she would have no legal claim to it as long as he is alive, according to an attorney. But if he dies without leaving a will specifying otherwise, his wife automatically would receive all his property except that in which you are a joint tenant. The property you hold in joint tenancy with him would automatically go to you if he died.

Two books which might be helpful to you are "The People's Guide to California Marriage Law" and "Sex, Living Together and the Law, A Legal Guide for Unmarried Couples," written by California attorneys Carmen Massey and Ralph Warner and available from Nolo Press, P.O. Box 544, Occidental, Calif. 95465, for $6.30 and $5.45 respectively, including tax and postage.

Could you settle an argument between my sister-in-law and me? She says Cissy King of the dancing team on the Lawrence Welk Show is a member of the well-known King Sisters family. I say she isn't. Who's right? A.S., Long Beach.

You are, King, 31, grew up in Albuquerque, N.M., and started taking dancing lessons at the age of 3. She appeared in semi-professional productions in New Mexico while in high school and college and joined the Welk show in 1967.

Former Mousketeer Bobby Burgess, who has appeared with the Welk band since 1961, competed against John King, Cissy's brother, in dance contests in the 1950s. When Burgess' dance partner, Barbara Boylan, got married and left the show, Burgess asked John King to suggest a replacement. He recommended his sister and she got the job. Cissy King, who is single, has appeared on the Welk show ever since.

Ballance

My favorite daytime radio program was Bill Ballance on KABC. All of a sudden, he is no longer on the program. I am wondering what happened to him. B.A.D., Long Beach.

Ballance, who hosted KABC's 1-3 p.m. talk show, was fired by the station Oct. 11 and replaced by Chuck Ashman, co-anchor of KTTV's Metro News. Bruce Marry, program director for KABC, said they were not dissatisfied with Ballance's work, but wanted to attract a broader-based mid-afternoon audience.

Ballance went to work for KABC in November 1974, after spending the previous five years as host of the controversial women's talk show, Feminine Forum. During the '50s and '60s, he was one of Los Angeles' top rock disc jockeys on radio station KFWB.

A spokesman for Wood-Freeman Business Management in Los Angeles, Ballance's managers, said, "We can only hope Bill will be on another radio show soon," but added they have not had any firm offers so far. You can write to Ballance in care of Wood-Freeman, 6233 Hollywood Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90028.

REACTION

I work for the Long Beach School District as a cafeteria employee and I have some thoughts on the selling of leftover school cafeteria food. Although it was allowed by the district, until this year, to sell leftover cafeteria food, most school supervisors refused to sell it to their employees and this is why only 10 schools out of the 77 were doing this. We employees would love to buy the leftover food which is thrown away at every school every day. It seems to me that instead of putting this good food down the garbage disposal, they should revise their paperwork to make it easier. Something should be worked out so we could buy it. It's terrible to go to the grocery store after work to buy food at such high cost knowing we have just put plenty down the drain. M.M., Long Beach.

Auto theft fails, but $15,600 cash taken

A Kaiser Medical Center manager was robbed of $15,600 in Carson early Saturday after a youth who unsuccessfully tried to steal the victim's car instead took a briefcase which contained the cash, sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputies said George Deegan, 32, manager of the center in Hollywood, was getting into his car when the theft occurred at 2:30 a.m.

Deegan had just completed a kidney dialysis treatment at Bio-Medical Co., 1123 W. Carson St.,

when he was approached by the young man, deputies said.

They said he pulled Deegan from his 1977 Porsche. He attempted to start the auto, when a delayed burglar alarm sounded, panicking the suspect.

He grabbed the briefcase from the automobile seat and fled through the parking lot.

The briefcase contained $15,600 in cash that Deegan said he planned to use this weekend to purchase property, deputies said. Deegan was unhurt.

Men aiming at 2 officers shot

Two off-duty Los Angeles policemen opened fire early Saturday on a carload of young Long Beach men — wounding two — after one of the car's occupants pointed a B-B gun at the officers, Long Beach police said.

Wounded were Arthur Richard Valdez 24, and Jose Louis Gomez Garcia, 22, both of 1426 Chestnut Ave., Apt. 1.

Police gave this account of the incident:

As Metro Division officers John Stier, 38, and Jimmie Allen, 32, were traveling westbound on Pacific Coast Highway shortly before 1 a.m., a car containing five young men pulled alongside. The occupants were making obscene gestures.

One of the men pointed a rifle at the two officers as both cars stopped for a traffic signal at Canal Avenue.

The officers pulled their service revolvers and fired nine rounds into the other auto, hitting two of the occupants before the auto sped away.

After Stier and Allen reported the incident to Long Beach police, four men and a 16-year-old boy were taken into custody at 11th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

They were booked for assault with a deadly weapon.

Valdez and Garcia were taken to St. Mary's Hospital for treatment of minor wounds prior to transfer to Los Angeles County Jail.

Also arrested were Santiago Benavidez Medina, 23, of 742½ Daisy Ave., and Elpidio Davila, 20, of 741 Daisy Ave.

Police said the gun was not immediately recovered, but was found later when the 16-year-old suspect led police to the weapon, which was a B-B gun — a commemorative replica of a Model 94 Winchester .30-caliber carbine.

Neither officer was injured.

Governor won't air drug data

Associated Press

Gov. Brown said Saturday it would be up to the state attorney general to decide whether to release a report dealing with the alleged misuse of funds in East Los Angeles drug programs.

The comment came in response to a reporter's question after Brown addressed a luncheon of the California Federation of Black Leadership in Los Angeles.

Brown said he has not seen the report.

Brown's comments followed a November Reader's Digest article about alleged infiltration of Mexican Mafia gangs into government-sponsored drug programs.

The magazine described reports related to the Ellen Delia slaying and investigations that linked the prison-based gang to state and federally financed convict rehabilitation and drug programs.

Mario Obledo, Brown's health and welfare secretary, had requested the report from Attorney General Evette Younger's office to investigate the use of funds in those programs after Mrs. Delia's slaying.

At the time of her death, Mrs. Delia was reportedly on her way to a meeting with state officials at which she intended to describe the misuse of state funds in East Los Angeles programs.

Michael Delia, her estranged husband, and three others are awaiting trial in Sacramento on murder charges.

News accounts early in the week quoted Brown's legal aide, J. Anthony Kline, as telling Reader's Digest in a letter that law enforcement officials had found "no evidence whatever to warrant the claim that Mr. Obledo is supportive of or is in any way linked to the Mexican Mafia."

When Brown was asked if he had any knowledge that Obledo had any links to the prison gang, he replied "No, nor does the attorney general. He's looked into it."

Heyerdahl Indian crew balk at sails

Combined News Services

Three Indian sailors hired by Thor Heyerdahl for his latest research expedition walked out on the Norwegian explorer as soon as they discovered the reed boat he is using has no engine.

In a report from Iraq Saturday, where the reed boat Tigris is being readied for departure, an Oslo newspaper said the Indians were to have been members of a 14-man international crew assembled by Heyerdahl for his latest expedition.

Heyerdahl, who became famous 30 years ago with his Kon-Tiki balsam raft trip across the Pacific, plans to sail the copy of an ancient Sumeri reed boat from Iraq into the Indian Ocean.

The paper said the Indian crew members claimed they had received "the shock of our lives" when they saw the almost finished 30-ton "heap of reed" that Heyerdahl plans to sail from the mouth of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers.

Heyerdahl intends to prove that the Sumeri people of ancient Mesopotamia knew navigation and sailed as far as India and southern Africa with the kind of reed boat he has built near Qurna, Iraq.

The paper reported that the three Indians claimed they were ordinary sailors who had applied for jobs in Bombay. They said they were told they would be working on a 500-ton cargo vessel for a trip around Africa at $150 a month.

$1 million sought in baby-mixup suit

Catherine Thornton believes a Detroit hospital gave her the wrong baby after she gave birth 18 years ago. Now, the mother of 13 is awaiting a verdict on her $1 million suit against the hospital.

The case went to a Detroit jury Friday after officials of Crittenton Hospital denied there had been any mixup. The jury recessed for the weekend without reaching a verdict.

Mrs. Thornton, 47, and her husband, Claude, said she delivered a 5-pound, 2-ounce baby Oct. 7, 1959, and that the infant was palm-printed, tagged and taken to the nursery.

The mother said she never saw that baby again. Instead, she said, a nurse brought her a baby with a lighter complexion, a lower forehead, a quieter nature and a different identification number than the baby she delivered.

During the trial, hospital personnel testified the change in identification number tags was made to correct a misspelling in the mother's name.

Police investigators testified that while the palm prints were too poor to allow for absolute confirmation, they were convinced the baby was Mrs. Thornton's.

Another hospital official testified that it is common for the shape of a baby's head and its complexion to change substantially in the first 15 hours after birth.

As for the child's quiet personality, defense attorney Philip Aber charged the Thorntons had rejected the baby. He said, "That is why it is quiet and withdrawn... that is why the real tragedy in this case is the child."

Mrs. Thornton insisted that "I've always treated him as my son and loved him as my own son."

Mrs. Thornton told reporters she would like to find her "real son" and bring him up but conceded she has no idea where he is.

Joe Louis

A spokesman for Baylor College of Medicine in Houston said Saturday that former heavyweight champion Joe Louis' condition had improved to very satisfactory.

It was the best report on the 63-year-old former fighter since he underwent heart surgery earlier this week.

Late Friday night Louis was listed in satisfactory but stable condition. But early Saturday a hospital spokesman said Louis' status had "improved to very satisfactory and he is progressing quite well."

Alumnae hail 'idiot' Hepburn

In Philadelphia Friday night, actress Katharine Hepburn, whose marks almost kept her from graduating from Bryn Mawr College in 1923, said she felt "like an absolute idiot" when she received the M. Carey Thomas award for outstanding achievement.

"Everyone thinks I was fascinating," Miss Hepburn told an audience of about 1,000. "I wasn't. I was gaunt, pathetic and kind of dumb."

The award is given by the school's alumnae association.

Labor hero dies

Alexei Stakhanov, the coal miner whose feats of labor in the 1930s are still cited in Soviet campaigns for productivity, died Saturday at the age of 71.

Moscow's repeated drives for increased output by workers have their roots in the Stakhanovite Movement created around the stocky young miner by Soviet propagandists in 1935.

That year, Stakhanov and his team of workers mined 102 tons of coal in a single shift, 14 times the norm at that time. He was hailed as a national hero.

Charles royally wiped out

In Sydney, Australia, Prince Charles took the "wipeouts" — a surfers' term for being dumped from a surfboard — in good spirits here during an attempt to ride the waves Saturday, aides reported.

"This water is bloody cold," said the heir to the British throne, after being dumped several times in the 57-degree water during 45 minutes of surfboarding.

A lifeguard, Greg Smith, who cracked waves with the prince, said: "The prince told me he was disappointed at the small waves."

New German terror threat

Combined News Services

BONN — West German terrorists threatened Saturday to blow up three Lufthansa aircraft, one each in memory of three of their comrades who were found dead in a Stuttgart prison Oct. 18.

Meanwhile, suspects in the kidnapping and murder of German industrial leader Hanns-Martin Schleyer were seen in Beirut recently, according to security officials here.

Some of the six prime suspects in the Schleyer case are known to have been in the Middle East before, for guerrilla training.

The threat against Lufthansa came in a letter received by the French news agency in Paris Saturday, signed by "the Red Army Faction." It said the aircraft would be blown up beginning Nov. 15, to commemorate the deaths of faction members Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe.

German tank deal

BEIRUT — West Germany is in the process of entering the Middle East armaments market with a deal to sell an undisclosed number of Leopard tanks to Saudi Arabia. The Leopard, one of the most advanced tanks in the West, has been sold only to NATO members. Although West Germany has refused to sell weapons to countries in regions of tension, it apparently has softened its restrictions in appreciation of the Saudis' help in the rescue of the hijacked Lufthansa airliner last month at Mogadishu, Somalia.

Blackouts continue

LONDON — Cold cuts and salad will probably replace the traditional Sunday roast for many Britons because of power cuts caused by a wildcat work slowdown at generating plants. The government, which operates the plants, balked at a conciliatory gesture from the power workers Saturday, and hours-long blackouts hit one-tenth of the nation's 19 million homes Saturday night.

City without water

CARACAS — A pump breakdown in the water system in the capital of Venezuela closed schools and hospitals Saturday, and left many of the city's two million people without a bath or shave. Tank trucks accompanied by military guards distributed water in some poorer neighborhoods. Officials said full service will be restored Thursday.

Busts won't denude touring 'Calcutta'

ATLANTA — A spokesman for the touring company of "Oh! Calcutta!" said Saturday the show with its nude acts will go on in spite of Friday night's arrest of the nine cast members on charges of public indecency. The nine actors were booked and later released on $1,000 bond each.

Performances were to resume Saturday night and continue today, when the show is scheduled to leave town. The play opened here Tuesday.

Friday night's raid caused cancellation of a scheduled second performance. The play has toured 44 cities in the United States. Atlanta and Cincinnati are the only cities in which the play was forced to close.

Russian amnesty

MOSCOW — Citing "the principles of socialist humanity," the Soviet Union declared an amnesty Saturday for many categories of imprisoned common criminals, but not for political dissidents. The amnesty was declared in honor of the 60th anniversary Monday of the Bolshevik revolution. Observers expect the amnesty to involve many thousands of people.

Ganges fight ends

DACCAR, Bangladesh — India and Bangladesh signed a five-year agreement Saturday for the sharing of Ganges River water, thereby ending a decades-old dispute. The two nations have quarreled over Ganges water rights since shortly after the British pulled out of the Indian subcontinent 30 years ago.

Famine hits islands

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Three months of drought has wiped out much of the rice harvest on the islands of Lombok and Sumbawa, about 750 miles east of here, and more than 400,000 persons are suffering from famine, government officials said Saturday.

Troops clash

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Rhodesia reported Saturday that its forces exchanged fire with troops in neighboring Zambia and Mozambique and that 12 black guerrillas were killed inside Rhodesia. The fighting came as leaders of the white-minority government were conferring with British and United Nations envoys on proposals to halt the five-year guerrilla war and transfer political power to the nation's black majority.

10 die in fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Violence ranging from a gunbattle north of Beirut to artillery shelling along the Israeli border killed 10 persons and wounded 15 others Saturday. Six died in the Christian district of Koura, 80 miles north of Beirut, in fighting that pitted right-wing Christians against leftists trying to return to their hometown, from which they were driven during Lebanon's civil war. Three other persons were reported killed when 22 pounds of dynamite exploded in a plush apartment building in Beirut's Moslem sector. A Moslem lawyer who writes columns in several rightist Christian newspapers in Beirut was the apparent target of the blast.

Ex-CIA officers pay Helms' fine

By Thomas Wells
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former CIA director Richard Helms, fined $2,000 for not being truthful with a Senate committee, will be able to pay the debt with money collected in wastebaskets at a meeting of retired CIA employees.

The retired CIA workers, meeting after Helms was sentenced Friday, put two wastebaskets atop a piano and tossed in checks and money to pay the former spy chief's fine.

Helms, who appeared at the scheduled meeting at a suburban country club, got a standing ovation from the more than 400 former CIA officers.

It wasn't known how much money was collected, but one member of the organization of retired CIA employees said: "The baskets were filling up fast when I left. I think it is safe to say there was more than enough contributed to pay the $2,000 fine."

Other CIA and retired CIA employees said they contributed for weeks to a defense fund to help defray Helms' legal costs.

In a statement later, retired U.S. Army Brig. Gen. Richard G. Stillwell, president of the Association of Former Intelligence Officers, strongly praised Helms.

"I admire Helms for choosing that course of action which had minimum adverse impact on the national security and its external relations — and the more so because he knew that course placed his career and his reputation in jeopardy," Stillwell said.

Stillwell said the Helms case also raised serious questions about the executive branch's future dealings with Congress.

"If an official of the executive branch can be forced to disclose to a committee of Congress, in open session, the most sensitive secrets of national security on pain of prosecution, then the president may well be denied the capability to insure an adequate national defense," he said.

In addition to the fine, Helms also got a two-year suspended sentence after pleading no contest to two counts of failing to fully answer questions put to him during a 1973 Senate hearing.

The Justice Department and Helms claimed that government secrets would have come out and national security would have been jeopardized if Helms had gone to trial on the charges.

He claimed his oath of secrecy to the CIA prevented him from making a full disclosure to Congress about spy activities that led to the downfall of Chile's elected socialist government and the death of President Salvador Allende in a Sept. 11, 1973, military coup.

"You can pick up any book on Western civilization and find this same defense," said U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker, who sentenced Helms.

"At the Nuremberg trials, we had that threat running through there, and more recently in the Watergate trials," the judge said.

WASHINGTON — Most members of the Senate and House are escaping Washington until early December, when they hope to take final action on energy legislation that may become the standard for judging the performance of the first half of the 95th Congress.

House and Senate members trying to resolve differences between the energy bills passed by the two bodies will continue their work while most of their colleagues are scattered around the globe.

With the Panama Canal treaty certain to be a major issue next year, several members of Congress plan to visit the Central American country. Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and eight or nine other senators plan to head for Panama on Wednesday. Assistant Majority Leader Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he hopes to go in January.

Lawmakers flee, work stays

Several House and Senate members also plan to go to China in January, a trip arranged by the White House.

The Senate was in session until early Saturday morning to complete work on legislation providing for major increases in Social Security taxes to bring in the additional revenue needed to restore the financial stability of the system, which pays retirement benefits to 33 million Americans. There are significant differences between the Senate bill and the measure passed by the House. They will have to be resolved by a conference committee.

A third major issue left pending for action in December is the volatile question of the use of federal funds for abortions. So far, a conference committee has been unable to reach a compromise on the issue. The House has taken a hard-line anti-abortion position, but the Senate supports federal payment for abortions under government medical programs in cases of rape or incest or when a woman would suffer "severe and long-lasting physical health damage" because of pregnancy. The House would permit abortions only when essential to save the life of the woman.

For the first time, Congress will have to deal with a Carter veto. The president used his first veto Saturday to turn down a bill that would have authorized $80 million for the Clinch River breeder reactor project in Tennessee.

He said the project was "technically and economically unnecessary."

With large Democratic majorities in the House and Senate, the 95th Congress convened last January in an atmosphere of heavy anticipation over the prospect of working with a Democratic president after eight years of Republican control of the White House.

But the traditional honeymoon began on a sour note when some of Carter's choices for Cabinet posts and other key jobs ran into outspoken criticism on Capitol Hill.

And it took Carter, a newcomer to Washington and its political protocol, a long while to adjust to dealing with the egos and sensitivities of congressional leaders.

At his last news conference, Carter acknowledged that his popularity has dropped in recent public opinion polls, but he attributed the decline to his determination to propose ways of dealing with the major problems facing the nation. He said he was confident his standing in the polls would rebound.

Property rights

Is there a new law in California stating that all property purchased by common-law couples must be divided equally between the two? My mate and I have been living together for 10 years and have bought property as joint tenants, but he has never divorced his wife. What are her rights of inheritance? E.W., Long Beach.

Common-law marriages are not recognized in California, and there are no laws defining division of community property acquired by unmarried couples. In a couple of precedent-setting court cases, however, in which considerable amounts of money and property were involved, common-law couples have been treated the same as legal families in dividing community property.

Although your friend has not divorced his wife, any property he has acquired since he separated from her would be considered separate, not community, property, and she would have no legal claim to it as long as he is alive, according to an attorney. But if he dies without leaving a will specifying otherwise, his wife automatically would receive all his property except that in which you are a joint tenant. The property you hold in joint tenancy with him would automatically go to you if he died.

Two books which might be helpful to you are "The People's Guide to California Marriage Law" and "Sex, Living Together and the Law, A Legal Guide for Unmarried Couples," written by California attorneys Carmen Massey and Ralph Warner and available from Nolo Press, P.O. Box 544, Occidental, Calif. 95465, for $8.30 and $5.45 respectively, including tax and postage.

Could you settle an argument between my sister-in-law and me? She says Cissy King of the dancing team on the Lawrence Welk Show is a member of the well-known King Sisters family. I say she isn't. Who's right? A.S., Long Beach.

You are, King, 31, grew up in Albuquerque, N.M., and started taking dancing lessons at the age of 3. She appeared in semi-professional productions in New Mexico while in high school and college and joined the Welk show in 1967.

Former Mousketeer Bobby Burgess, who has appeared with the Welk band since 1961, competed against John King, Cissy's brother, in dance contests in the 1950s. When Burgess' dance partner, Barbara Boylan, got married and left the show, Burgess asked John King to suggest a replacement. He recommended his sister and she got the job. Cissy King, who is single, has appeared on the Welk show ever since.

Ballance

My favorite daytime radio program was Bill Ballance on KABC. All of a sudden, he is no longer on the program. I am wondering what happened to him. B.A.D., Long Beach.

Ballance, who hosted KABC's 1-3 p.m. talk show, was fired by the station Oct. 11 and replaced by Chuck Ashman, co-anchor of KTTV's Metro News. Bruce Marry, program director for KABC, said they were not dissatisfied with Ballance's work, but wanted to attract a broader-based mid-afternoon audience.

Ballance went to work for KABC in November 1974, after spending the previous five years as host of the controversial women's talk show, Feminine Forum. During the '50s and '60s, he was one of Los Angeles' top rock disc jockeys on radio station KFWB.

A spokesman for Wood-Freeman Business Management in Los Angeles, Ballance's managers, said, "We can only hope Bill will be on another radio show soon," but added they have not had any firm offers so far. You can write to Ballance in care of Wood-Freeman, 6233 Hollywood Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90028.

REACTION

I work for the Long Beach School District as a cafeteria employee and I have some thoughts on the selling of leftover school cafeteria food. Although it was allowed by the district, until this year, to sell leftover cafeteria food, most school supervisors refused to sell it to their employees and this is why only 10 schools out of the 77 were doing this. We employees would love to buy the leftover food which is thrown away at every school every day. It seems to me that instead of putting this good food down the garbage disposal, they should revise their paperwork to make it easier. Something should be worked out so we could buy it. It's terrible to go to the grocery store after work to buy food at such high cost knowing we have just put plenty down the drain. M.M., Long Beach.

Auto theft fails, but $15,600 cash taken

A Kaiser Medical Center manager was robbed of $15,600 in Carson early Saturday after a youth who unsuccessfully tried to steal the victim's car instead took a briefcase which contained the cash, sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputies said George Deegan, 32, manager of the center in Hollywood, was getting into his car when the theft occurred at 2:30 a.m.

Deegan had just completed a kidney dialysis treatment at Bio-Medical Co., 1123 W. Carson St.,

when he was approached by the young man, deputies said.

They said he pulled Deegan from his 1977 Porsche. He attempted to start the auto, when a delayed burglar alarm sounded, panicking the suspect.

He grabbed the briefcase from the automobile seat and fled through the parking lot.

The briefcase contained $15,600 in cash that Deegan said he planned to use this weekend to purchase property, deputies said. Deegan was unhurt.

Men aiming at 2 officers shot

Two off-duty Los Angeles policemen opened fire early Saturday on a carload of young Long Beach men — wounding two — after one of the car's occupants pointed a B-B gun at the officers, Long Beach police said.

Wounded were Arthur Richard Valdez 24, and Jose Luis Gomez Garcia, 22, both of 1426 Chestnut Ave., Apt. 1.

Police gave this account of the incident:

As Metro Division officers John Stier, 38, and Jimmie Allen, 32, were traveling westbound on Pacific Coast Highway shortly before 1 a.m., a car containing five young men pulled alongside. The occupants were making obscene gestures.

One of the men pointed a rifle at the two officers as both cars stopped for a traffic signal at Canal Avenue.

The officers pulled their service revolvers and fired nine rounds into the other auto, hitting two of the occupants before the auto sped away.

After Stier and Allen reported the incident to Long Beach police, four men and a 16-year-old boy were taken into custody at 11th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

They were booked for assault with a deadly weapon.

Valdez and Garcia were taken to St. Mary's Hospital for treatment of minor wounds prior to transfer to Los Angeles County Jail.

Also arrested were Santiago Benavidez Medina, 23, of 742½ Daisy Ave., and Elpidio Davila, 20, of 744 Daisy Ave.

Police said the gun was not immediately recovered, but was found later when the 16-year-old suspect led police to the weapon, which was a B-B gun — a commemorative replica of a Model 94 Winchester .30-caliber carbine.

Neither officer was injured.

Governor won't air drug data

Associated Press

Gov. Brown said Saturday it would be up to the state attorney general to decide whether to release a report dealing with the alleged misuse of funds in East Los Angeles drug programs.

The comment came in response to a reporter's question after Brown addressed a luncheon of the California Federation of Black Leadership in Los Angeles.

Brown said he has not seen the report.

Brown's comments followed a November Reader's Digest article about alleged infiltration of Mexican Mafia gangs into government-sponsored drug programs.

The magazine described reports related to the Ellen Delia slaying and investigations that linked the prison-based gang to state and federally financed convict rehabilitation and drug programs.

Mario Obledo, Brown's health and welfare secretary, had requested the report from Attorney General Evelle Younger's office to investigate the use of funds in those programs after Mrs. Delia's slaying.

At the time of her death, Mrs. Delia was reportedly on her way to a meeting with state officials at which she intended to describe the misuse of state funds in East Los Angeles programs.

Michael Delia, her estranged husband, and three others are awaiting trial in Sacramento on murder charges.

News accounts early in the week quoted Brown's legal aide, J. Anthony Kline, as telling Reader's Digest in a letter that law enforcement officials had found "no evidence whatever to warrant the claim that Mr. Obledo is supportive of or is in any way linked to the Mexican Mafia."

When Brown was asked if he had any knowledge that Obledo had any links to the prison gang, he replied "No, nor does the attorney general. He's looked into it."

Ex-CIA officers pay Helms' fine

By Thomas Wells
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former CIA director Richard Helms, fined $2,000 for not being truthful with a Senate committee, will be able to pay the debt with money collected in wastebaskets at a meeting of retired CIA employees.

The retired CIA workers, meeting after Helms was sentenced Friday, put two wastebaskets atop a piano and tossed in checks and money to pay the former spy chief's fine.

Helms, who appeared at the scheduled meeting at a suburban country club, got a standing ovation from the more than 400 former CIA officers.

It wasn't known how much money was collected, but one member of the organization of retired CIA employees said: "The baskets were filling up fast when I left. I think it is safe to say there was more than enough contributed to pay the $2,000 fine."

Other CIA and retired CIA employees said they contributed for weeks to a defense fund to help defray Helms' legal costs.

In a statement later, retired U.S. Army Brig. Gen. Richard G. Stillwell, president of the Association of Former Intelligence Officers, strongly praised Helms.

"I admire Helms for choosing that course of action which had minimum adverse impact on the national security and its external relations — and the more so because he knew that course placed his career and his reputation in jeopardy," Stillwell said.

Stillwell said the Helms case also raised serious questions about the executive branch's future dealings with Congress.

"If an official of the executive branch can be forced to disclose to a committee of Congress, in open session, the most sensitive secrets of national security on pain of prosecution, then the president may well be denied the capability to insure an adequate national defense," he said.

In addition to the fine, Helms also got a two-year suspended sentence after pleading no contest to two counts of failing to fully answer questions put to him during a 1973 Senate hearing.

The Justice Department and Helms claimed that government secrets would have come out and national security would have been jeopardized if Helms had gone to trial on the charges.

He claimed his oath of secrecy to the CIA prevented him from making a full disclosure to Congress about spy activities that led to the downfall of Chile's elected socialist government and the death of President Salvador Allende in a Sept. 11, 1973, military coup.

"You can pick up any book on Western civilization and find this same defense," said U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker, who sentenced Helms.

"At the Nuremberg trials, we had that thread running through there, and more recently in the Watergate trials," the judge said.

WASHINGTON — Most members of the Senate and House are escaping Washington until early December, when they hope to take final action on energy legislation that may become the standard for judging the performance of the first half of the 96th Congress.

House and Senate members trying to resolve differences between the energy bills passed by the two bodies will continue their work while most of their colleagues are scattered around the globe.

With the Panama Canal treaty certain to be a major issue next year, several members of Congress plan to visit the Central American country. Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and eight or nine other senators plan to head for Panama on Wednesday. Assistant Majority Leader Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he hopes to go in January.

Lawmakers flee, work stays

Several House and Senate members also plan to go to China in January, a trip arranged by the White House.

The Senate was in session until early Saturday morning to complete work on legislation providing for major increases in Social Security taxes to bring in the additional revenue needed to restore the financial stability of the system, which pays retirement benefits to 33 million Americans. There are significant differences between the Senate bill and the measure passed by the House. They will have to be resolved by a conference committee.

A third major issue left pending for action in December is the volatile question of the use of federal funds for abortions. So far, a conference committee has been unable to reach a compromise on the issue. The House has taken a hard-line anti-abortion position, but the Senate supports federal payment for abortions under government medical programs in cases of rape or incest or when a woman would suffer "severe and long-lasting physical health damage" because of pregnancy. The House would permit abortions only when essential to save the life of the woman.

For the first time, Congress will have to deal with a Carter veto. The president used his first veto Saturday to turn down a bill that would have authorized $50 million for the Clinch River breeder reactor project in Tennessee.

He said the project was "technically and economically unnecessary."

With large Democratic majorities in the House and Senate, the 95th Congress convened last January in an atmosphere of heady anticipation over the prospect of working with a Democratic president after eight years of Republican control of the White House.

But the traditional honeymoon began on a sour note when some of Carter's choices for Cabinet posts and other key jobs ran into outspoken criticism on Capitol Hill.

And it took Carter, a new-comer to Washington and its political protocol, a long while to adjust to dealing with the egos and sensitivities of congressional leaders.

At his last news conference, Carter acknowledged that his popularity has dropped in recent public opinion polls, but he attributed the decline to his determination to propose ways of dealing with the major problems facing the nation. He said he was confident his standing in the polls would rebound.

Metro. for Metro. (This) then puts the Department of Finance in the position of having to semi-publicly say what they're going to buy or not buy or what it's going to cost or not cost.

Q. What has brought on the crisis of the past week?

A. It's been said by some that I did the whole thing . . . by telling L.A. County I was going to close the wards.

It's a variety of things, it really is. I had been in contact with (the county) several weeks, say two or three weeks (ago) by phone, saying it was probably going to happen. Then I returned from a meeting and found we had had five more psychiatrists resign. That was the bottom line as far as I was concerned, and I notified the county what we were going to do — which kicked off a whole chain of events. I was fully aware that when I did that, all hell would break loose, (there) would be a lot of people trying to find out who did what to whom. I was reasonably sure that I'd find the governor back down here again, because I knew his commitment to getting the place cleaned up.

I'm hesitant to be that frank with you, because I don't want to compromise what's been accomplished . . . I don't want it to look like it's a temper tantrum on my part. But none of it was accidental.

Q. What's the problem at Norwalk?

You can't really say it's a problem — it's a series of problems. It goes back many years . . . it involves funding . . . but even more basic is the problem, the question, as to the role of the state hospital.

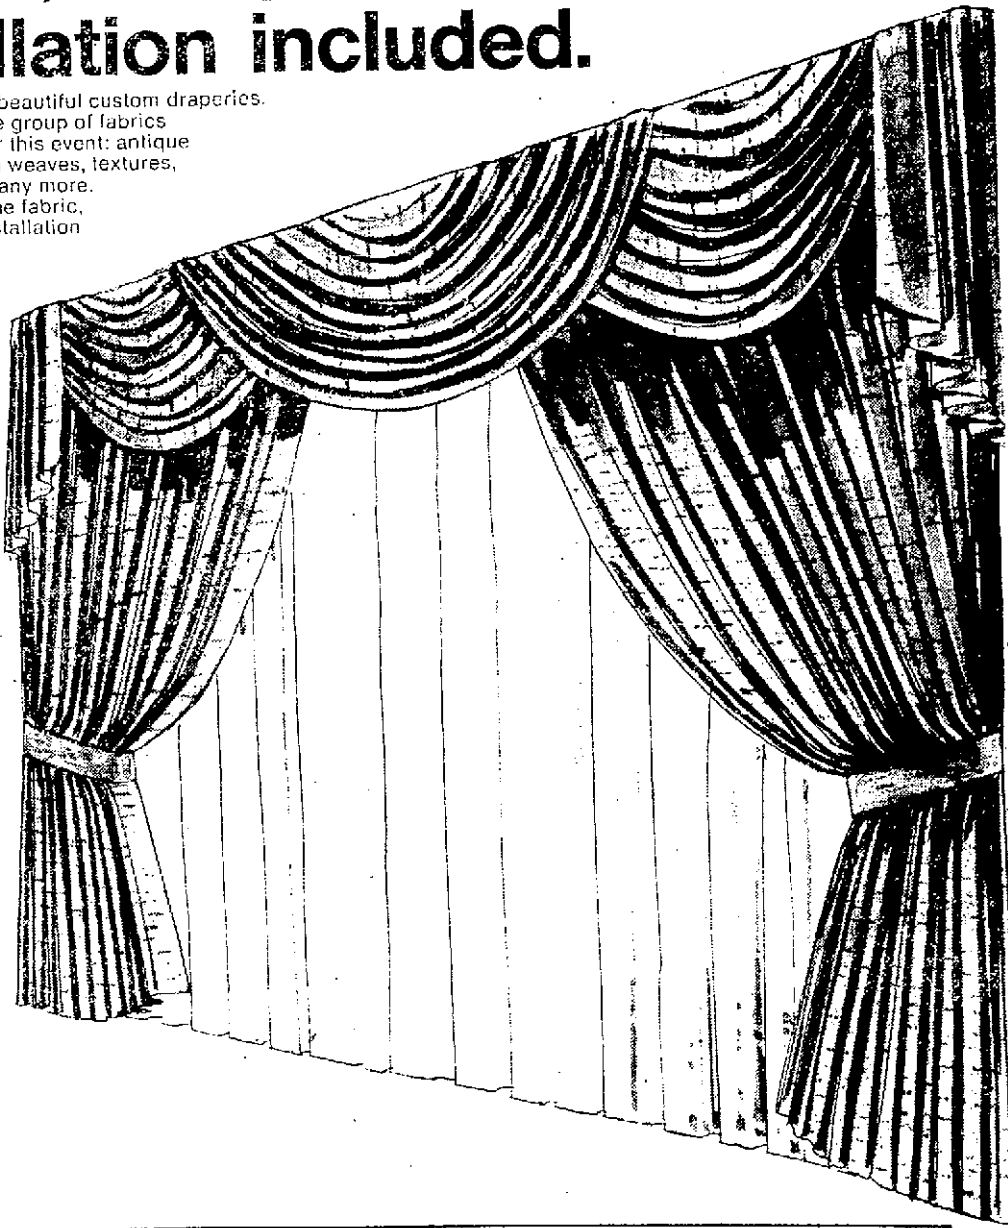

The avowed policy has been that mental health is a community responsibility. State hospitals, wherever they may be geographically, are to serve only as a backup system for community systems. So therefore, L.A. sees Metropolitan as an overflow facility for their own. (But the county) will say there are insufficient funds for it to mount the sort of community program that's required . . . to deal with L.A. County.

A conference of mental health directors has gone on record as wanting state hospitals phased out totally in three years; the exception being L.A. County, and (we'll get) an additional year. Within four years we would be out of business. That has a severe, debasing impact on our facility, in terms of people wanting to come to work here, their views of themselves and their careers, the amount of money that is invested in maintaining the structures, the amount of money that's put into the system in order to keep people abreast of what's going on in their profession. A lot of things begin to stop. And this goes back to prior administrations.

Q. What is the possibility the state will close Metropolitan now?

A. I can give you my personal feeling, based upon what I know — I'd say absolutely zero. Absolutely, no chance. L.A. County indicated its plan to phase out Metropolitan is based solely on the request of the Department of Health to develop such a plan.

Q. What are the problems cited in the recent licensing review of Metropolitan?

A. There were a variety of them. Some of them, in fact, the bulk of them, speak to the adequacy of the number of staff.

Q. What does that mean in terms of numbers of patients and staff members?

A. They didn't give us a number. This is what we'll be developing on Monday, and on Monday afternoon we'll be having a press conference (where) we will sit down and say, "This is what's been agreed upon."

None of us in this facility have worked in the enriched setting of a community facility, so what I'm asking for is professional input from the various professions as to how they see... what are the community standards.

Now those figures will be presented to licensing Monday morning, to see if in fact licensing will agree to them. If licensing says that's adequate, then Tuesday I sit down with the Department of Finance and hammer it out. What the governor said was, he wanted to see on Thursday what it is I'm asking for and what finance says they will buy.

Q. What are the specific problems Metropolitan was cited for?

A. Going over real quick, most of them had to do with adequacy of staff, numbers of staff, or related issues such as documentation — if I don't have enough staff to begin with, obviously the record-keeping is going to be lousy.

There were some deficiencies that were clearly related to inappropriate licensing. We were licensed as a general hospital — we are a psychiatric hospital, so we will be requesting a formal change of license. For instance, we were given a deficiency because we have doors locked. In a general hospital you don't lock somebody's door — in an acute psychiatric hospital, it can be very appropriate to lock someone's door.

There were some things like food containers (that) weren't clean, or laundry hampers (that) weren't labeled whether they were clean linens or dirty linens. There were about six or eight deficiencies that I closed up the day I got the notice, things we were just not aware of, where in an organization this size, someone blew it somewhere.

Q. What about patient abuse?

A. I don't think that's a systemic problem at this point. I don't know any way we can 100 percent prevent some form of abuse, if you look at abuse in the broad context.

For example, I had one not long ago where some patient cursed an employee and the employee cursed the patient back. This wasn't a nursing employee, this was a support service employee. And we called him on the carpet and told him this was totally unacceptable behavior.

You hire a craftsman, who's worked 10, 15 years doing his trade, in sheet metal work, or plumbing or whatever, it takes more than just an orientation and that sort of thing to prevent him from his usual response... whereas a trained psychiatric technician or trained psychiatric nurse I would probably fire for that kind of behavior.

As far as physical abuse of the kind that Metro was in the media for a couple years ago, this I think we've pretty well eliminated. Again, of course, with hundreds of people in the organization you're going to have one come through that had a bad day, had a fight with his wife and comes in and just blows. We've put all the staff through an intensive training program on how to deal with the physically assaultive patient — which is where many of the former alleged abuses came from.

Many times, we have patients brought in in leg iron chains and the whole thing, with six police officers. (The police) take all that stuff off and they go back out the door and we have a couple of little old ladies standing around to meet this monster — delete the word monster, to meet this really aggressive patient. It takes very highly trained, skilled people to deal with people who are pretty confused and pretty combative.

Q. What about the recent report that there have been five homicides here at the hospital this year?

A. You'd have to ask the man that said it, because I have tracked that down everywhere I can. I've talked to people from the local sheriff's department, and none of us are aware of any homicides occurring here, period. We've had a number of deaths. Automatically all deaths become coroner's cases, and are reviewed by the (district attorney's) office. I have a senior special investigator, which means almost anything that even has the slightest question automatically goes to the sheriff's department. That's his fulltime job.

No one in that whole system — the coroner, the district attorney, the sheriff's department — is aware of any homicides. I don't know where that came from. I flat don't understand it.

About... why there has been an increase in complaints brought to the sheriff's department. Again, it has to do with my effort to make Metropolitan an open facility, with no possible taint of cover-up. Anything that occurs on the grounds — a patient who says she was raped, whereas from a clinical point of view we may have very good reason to feel she's hallucinating, or whatever — to make sure there's absolutely no chance of a cover-up, those reports are automatically given to the senior special investigator.

He doesn't pay any attention to clinical aspects. He looks at it strictly as a law enforcement problem — he calls out the rape squad.

So there are more complaints going to the sheriff's department, to make sure that there is nothing brought out six months after the fact.

That would give the appearance, however, that the place is going to the dogs.

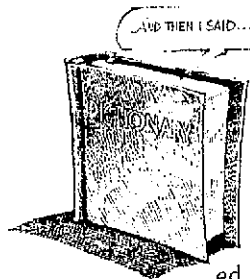

Q. Why have so many doctors walked out recently?

A. I keep reading in the media about groups of physicians that are going to do this, and groups of physicians that are meeting with this one or that one, or complaining and so forth. I'm not aware of any conspiracy or any planned move on behalf of the medical staff here. I've talked to several of the psychiatrists who have resigned. They seem, for the most part, to be resigning for very personal reasons.

Our dictionary speaks.

"To dress," our Funk & Wagnall's tells us, can mean "to prepare for use or sale". It can also mean "to prepare for cooking". When we talk about fresh dressed pork, both of the above would be our choice of meaning... just as fresh pork is our choice of a dish this week. Being fresh dressed also means this pork wasn't frozen for transportation to market, but instead was brought in live to be prepared days fresher than it might otherwise be. And we think that makes a flavor difference worth thinking about.

Choose your pick.

We have a selection... up to 14 different cuts of fresh pork that you might find in our meat case this week... all are real values, and real savings.

Time & Temperature Readings:

The easiest way to prepare fresh pork roast is oven roasting at 325-350°F, with a sprinkling of salt, pepper and your favorite spices. Rosemary or marjoram or sage come to mind. Here's a guide from the Pork Industry Group to help you judge cooking time. If you use a cooking thermometer, when it registers 170°F, the roast is ready to serve. Remember that our suggestions here are based on meat taken directly from the refrigerator.

Metro, for Metro. (This) then puts the Department of Finance in the position of having to semi-publicly say what they're going to buy or not buy or what it's going to cost or not cost.

Q. What has brought on the crisis of the past week?

A. It's been said by some that I did the whole thing . . . by telling L.A. County I was going to close the wards.

It's a variety of things, it really is. I had been in contact with (the county) several weeks, say two or three weeks (ago) by phone, saying it was probably going to happen. Then I returned from a meeting and found we had had five more psychiatrists resign. That was the bottom line as far as I was concerned, and I notified the county what we were going to do — which kicked off a whole chain of events. I was fully aware that when I did that, all hell would break loose, (there) would be a lot of people trying to find out who did what to whom. I was reasonably sure that I'd find the governor back down here again, because I knew his commitment to getting the place cleaned up.

I'm hesitant to be that frank with you, because I don't want to compromise what's been accomplished — I don't want it to look like it's a temper tantrum on my part. But none of it was accidental.

Q. What's the problem at Norwalk?

You can't really say it's a problem — it's a series of problems. It goes back many years . . . it involves funding . . . but even more basic is the problem, the question, as to the role of the state hospital.

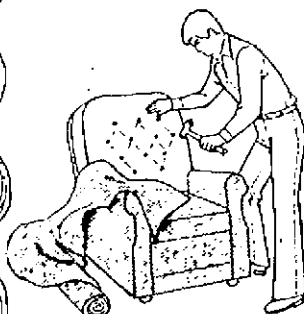

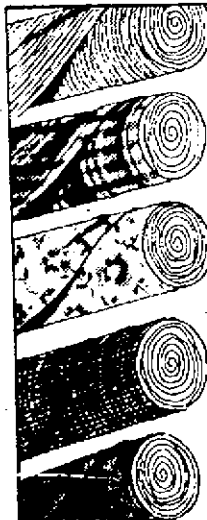

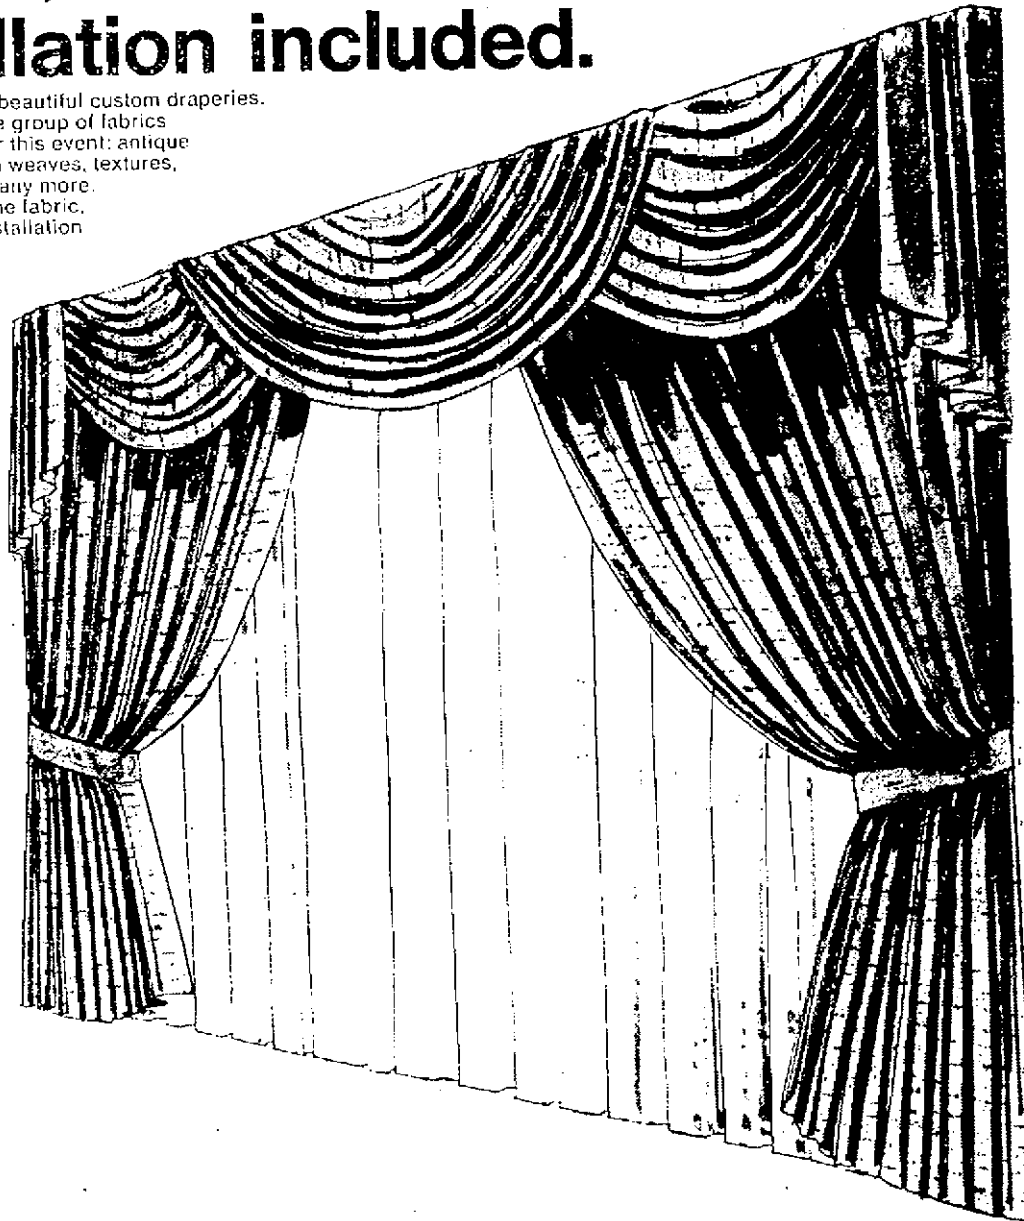

The avowed policy has been that mental health is a community responsibility. State hospitals, wherever they may be geographically, are to serve only as a backup system for community systems. So therefore, L.A. sees Metropolitan as an overflow facility for their own. (But the county) will say there are insufficient funds for it to mount the sort of community program that's required . . . to deal with L.A. County.

A conference of mental health directors has gone on record as wanting state hospitals phased out totally in three years; the exception being L.A. County, and (we'll get) an additional year. Within four years we would be out of business. That has a severe, debasing impact on our facility, in terms of people wanting to come to work here, their views of themselves and their careers, the amount of money that is invested in maintaining the structures, the amount of money that's put into the system in order to keep people abreast of what's going on in their profession. A lot of things begin to stop. And this goes back to prior administrations.

Baby boom's over, but effect lingers

The great postwar baby boom is just a page of social history now. But the population bulge it created still travels on through the decades, and the full consequences are only now appreciated. Here's the intriguing story of what this generation, through sheer numbers, did to itself and the rest of us.

By Terry Kirkpatrick
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It began in 1946 with the notion that things were finally looking up, a national euphoria released by the end of depression and war. By 1961, as though some intangible limit had been reached, it was over.

It was a wave of child-bearing, and it produced a generation so large that it was called the Postwar Baby Boom. Nothing like it ever happened in the United States before.

Slowly and inexorably, this generation rearranged the country: first the maternity wards weren't big enough, then new elementary schools had to be built, later more high schools and colleges. Through sheer numbers, the postwar children set new standards, rediscovering bicycles and baggy pants, marching on Washington and retreating to Vermont, flooding colleges and then flogging them as irrelevant. Everything they touched became a trend or a national problem.

World War II is history now and the babies have grown up. But, if less visible, they are a no less potent group. Everywhere they turn, they still find too many of themselves, trying to buy a house, looking for a job, hoping for a promotion in mid-career, expecting security in retirement.

THIS CROWD of people, today 16 to 31, shows up in double-digit unemployment rates for teen-agers, the housing crunch, the crime rate, debate over a later retirement age, doctors of philosophy driving taxicabs. It will manifest itself in the future in unpredictable ways.

"In the past five years, we have come to recognize much more fully the scope of this baby boom," says Peter Morrison, a population analyst with the Rand Corp. "We could see the obvious effects but not the subtle effects, as in the labor market. Demographers are discovering that its effects run far deeper than we recognized."

"It was a monumental episode in American history. The consequences are there and will be there."

The baby boom was an aberration in the historical decline in fertility, an interruption of the gradual graying of America. Sixty million babies were born in the 15 boom years from 1946 to 1961. In the preceding 15 years, only 40 million had been born, and in the 15 years after 1961, just under 54 million.

So on a chart of the total population, the 60 million postwar babies will always appear as a bulge, even as they age. You can compare it with what a python looks like as it swallows a pig. It is a convulsive process for both a snake and a population.

THE BABY BOOM affected everybody. The whole society had to reorient itself to feed, clothe, educate and find jobs for it. But the mere size of the baby boom generation also affected those in it in many subtle ways.

Attitudes of this generation toward itself and the world were molded by unique events. It was the first generation to grow up with the television, the transistor and the polio vaccine, the first to sit in the family room and watch men walk on the moon.

Just as important is the way it developed great expectations, nourished by education and prosperity, then saw them trampled in its constant elbowing for position. There were too many people expecting too much. The baby boom will be remembered as the generation that stood in line.

The difference between the aspirations of a child and his experiences as an adult has long intrigued sociologists, and some have statistically linked the difference to such things as divorce rates and fertility. For the baby boom generation, it is the difference between steady economic growth and optimism, and economic difficulty and pessimism.

"BY REASON of their experience, this generation is much more sophisticated, cynical, much more willing to challenge traditions, more willing to accept changes," says Philip Houser, director of the Population Research Center at the University of Chicago. "We may be in for some basic changes that this generation will insist upon."

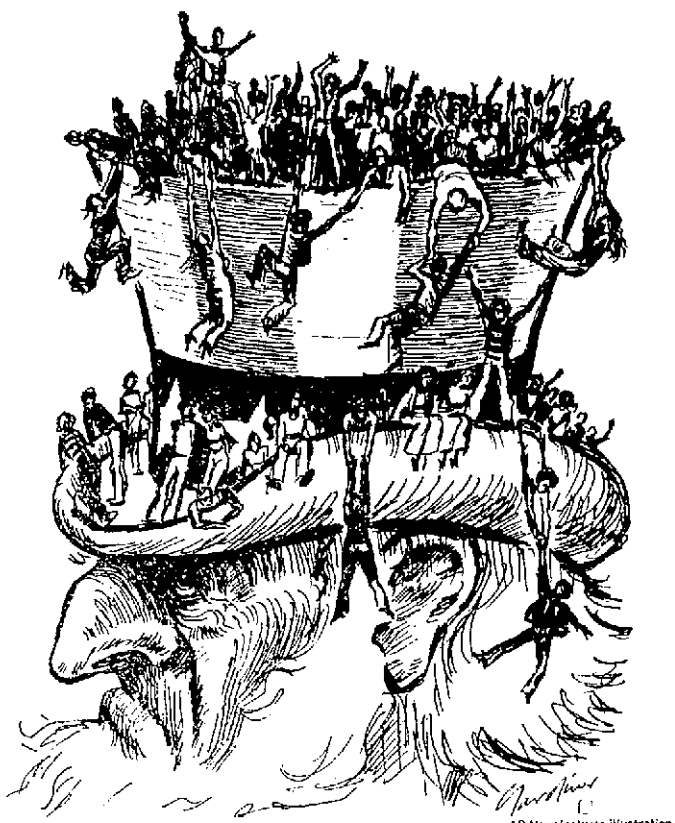

The postwar generation already is carrying into its middle-aged years new ideas about family life, the value of work, education, leisure time, food and neighborhoods.

In 1944, Cole Porter's "Don't Fence Me In" was released, and the millions of servicemen who returned the next year seemed to take it as a theme. They moved out into what had been farm fields — where their children would be bigger than the trees they wanted to climb — and built homes with money guaranteed by the GI bill.

The number of marriages jumped from 1.6 million in 1945 to 2.3 million in 1948. The number of births jumped from 2.9 million to 3.4 million.

Owning a car was not an accepted fact in 1946 as it is today, but two cars in the garage became a dream, then a goal, then a symbol of the new prosperity in which these babies grew up.

"THE BABY BOOM is probably the first generation raised in middle class affluence, and they have taken it for granted," says Denis Johnston, a demographer in the U.S. Office of Management and Budget. "I was 35 when I first bought an automobile. That's unknown in this generation."

rather dramatic "baby bust," an unexpected occurrence that magnified the impact of the baby boom.

Demographers supposed that another population surge would happen when the postwar children reached child-bearing age in the 1960s. But it didn't.

THE RATE at which women were bearing children at the peak of the boom in 1957 — which implied nearly 3.8 births for each woman over her lifetime — was a record for modern times. By 1973, the rate had dropped to 1.9 births per woman, an all-time low.

Demographers don't know for sure why birth rates go up and down. But one widely quoted theory, developed by Dr. Richard Easterlin, a University of Pennsylvania economist, holds that fertility rates are determined by how a young couple perceives its material well-being.

Easterlin has put together unemployment and income figures to show how young people in recent decades were faring compared with the prosperity of their parents. When birth rates for the same year are placed alongside, a correlation appears.

By this reasoning, the baby boom was in part the result of the prosperous times in which its parents lived. Likewise, the baby bust developed when the baby boom generation ran into trouble finding jobs and starting its own households.

Whatever its causes, the unprecedented swing from boom to bust had immense consequences.

THE ENROLLMENT in elementary and secondary schools rose from 48 million in 1964 to 51 million in 1973, then slipped back to 50 million in 1975. And the National Center for Education Statistics projects that it will drop to 46 million by 1985.

This means difficult decisions not only for school districts but for those of the postwar generation who chose teaching as a career. Nearly half of those who received degrees in 1975 qualifying them to teach and who looked for a job didn't find one, the center estimates.

The same expansion occurred at colleges and universities as the baby boom generation entered. Enrollment rose from 1.5 million in 1952 to 6.3 million in 1972. Not only were there 11.6 million more people of college age in 1972, but the proportion of them going to college had risen from 11 percent to 25 percent, the Census Bureau says.

Because more people were going to college, more people were entering society with high aspirations that often couldn't be satisfied.

"They grew up at a time when education was a royal road to success, they were told," says Dr. Gerald Bachman, a social psychologist at the University of Michigan. "But it simply wasn't possible to deliver on it. It's like telling everybody where the good fishing hole is."

Q. What is the possibility the state will close Metropolitan now?

A. I can give you my personal feeling, based upon what I know — I'd say absolutely zero. Absolutely no chance. L.A. County indicated its plan to phase out Metropolitan is based solely on the request of the Department of Health to develop such a plan.

Q. What are the problems cited in the recent licensing review of Metropolitan?

A. There were a variety of them. Some of them, in fact, the bulk of them, speak to the adequacy of the number of staff.

Q. What does that mean in terms of numbers of staff and staff members?

A. They didn't give us a number. This is what we'll be developing on Monday, and on Monday afternoon we'll be having a press conference (where) we will sit down and say, "This is what's been agreed upon."

None of us in this facility have worked in the enriched setting of a community facility, so what I'm asking, for as professional input from the various professions as to how they see... what are the community standards.

Now those figures will be presented to licensing Monday morning, to see if in fact licensing will agree to them. If licensing says that's adequate, then Tuesday I sit down with the Department of Finance and hammer it out. What the governor said was, he wanted to see on Thursday what it is I'm asking for and what finance says they will buy.

Q. What are the specific problems Metropolitan was cited for?

A. Going over real quick, most of them had to do with adequacy of staff, numbers of staff, or related issues such as documentation — if I don't have enough staff to begin with, obviously the record-keeping is going to be lousy.

There were some deficiencies that were clearly related to inappropriate licensing. We were licensed as a general hospital — we are a psychiatric hospital, so we will be requesting a formal change of license. For instance, we were given a deficiency because we have doors locked. In a general hospital you don't lock somebody's door — in an acute psychiatric hospital, it can be very appropriate to lock someone's door.

There were some things like food containers (that) weren't clean, or laundry hampers (that) weren't labeled whether they were clean linens or dirty linens. There were about six or eight deficiencies that I cleaned up the day I got the notice, things we were just not aware of, where in an organization this size, someone blew it somewhere.

Q. What about patient abuse?

A. I don't think that's a systemic problem at this point. I don't know any way we can 100 percent prevent some form of abuse, if you look at abuse in the broad context.

For example, I had one not long ago where some patient cursed an employee and the employee cursed the patient back. This wasn't a nursing employee, this was a support service employee. And we called him on the carpet and told him this was totally unacceptable behavior.

You hire a craftsman, who's worked 10, 15 years doing his trade, in sheet metal work, or plumbing or whatever, it takes more than just an orientation and that sort of thing to prevent him from his usual response... whereas a trained psychiatric technician or trained psychiatric nurse I would probably fire for that kind of behavior.

As far as physical abuse of the kind that Metro was in the media for a couple years ago, this I think we've pretty well eliminated. Again, of course, with hundreds of people in the organization you're going to have one come through that had a bad day, had a fight with his wife and comes in and just blows. We put all the staff through an intensive training program on how to deal with the physically assaulting patient — which is where many of the former alleged abuses came from.

Many times, we have patients brought in in leg irons and chains and the whole thing, with six police officers. (The police) take all that stuff off and they go back out the door and we have a couple of little old ladies standing around to meet this monster — delete the word monster, to meet this really aggressive patient. It takes very highly trained, skilled people to deal with people who are pretty confused and pretty combative.

Q. What about the recent report that there have been five homicides here at the hospital this year?

A. You'd have to ask the man that said it, because I have tracked that down everywhere I can. I've talked to people from the local sheriff's department, and none of us are aware of any homicides occurring here, period. We've had a number of deaths. Automatically all deaths become coroner's cases, and are reviewed by the (district attorney's office). I have a senior special investigator, which means almost anything that even has the slightest question automatically goes to the sheriff's department. That's his fulltime job.

No one in that whole system — the coroner, the district attorney, the sheriff's department — is aware of any homicides. I don't know where that came from. I flat don't understand it.

About... why there has been an increase in complaints brought to the sheriff's department. Again, it has to do with my effort to make Metropolitan an open facility, with no possible taint of cover-up. Anything that occurs on the grounds — a patient who says she was raped, whereas from a clinical point of view we may have very good reason to feel she's hallucinating, or whatever — to make sure there's absolutely no chance of a cover-up, those reports are automatically given to the senior special investigator.

He doesn't pay any attention to clinical aspects. He looks at it strictly as a law enforcement problem — he calls out the rape squad.

So there are more complaints going to the sheriff's department, to make sure that there is nothing brought out six months after the fact.

That would give the appearance, however, that the place is going to the dogs.

Q. Why have so many doctors walked out recently?

A. I keep reading in the media about groups of physicians that are going to do this, and groups of physicians that are meeting with this one or that one, or complaining and so forth. I'm not aware of any conspiracy or any planned move on behalf of the medical staff here. I've talked to several of the psychiatrists who have resigned. They seem, for the most part, to be resigning for very personal reasons.

Our dictionary speaks.

"To dress," our Funk & Wag-nall's tells us, can mean "to prepare for use or sale". It can also mean "to prepare for cooking". When we talk about fresh dressed pork, both of the above would be our choice of meaning... just as fresh pork is our choice of a dish this week. Being fresh dressed also means this pork wasn't frozen for transportation to market, but instead was brought in live to be prepared days fresher than it might otherwise be. And we think that makes a flavor difference worth thinking about.

Choose your pick.

We have a selection... up to 14 different cuts of fresh pork that you might find in our meat case this week... all are real values, and real savings.

It's quite a dish!

This week, it's quite a buy as well!

Time & Temperature Readings:

The easiest way to prepare fresh pork roast is oven roasting at 325-350°F, with a sprinkling of salt, pepper and your favorite spices. Rosemary or marjoram or sage come to mind. Here's a guide from the Pork Industry Group to help you judge cooking time. If you use a cooking thermometer, when it registers 170°F, the roast is ready to serve. Remember that our suggestions here are based on meat taken directly from the refrigerator.

| Pork Cut | Approx. 3-4 lbs. (approx. 10-12 lbs.) | Approx. 4-5 lbs. (approx. 12-14 lbs.) |
|--|---------------------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| Loin Center | 3 to 5 | 30 to 35 |
| Hall | 5 to 7 | 35 to 40 |
| Blade loin or sirloin | 3 to 4 | 40 to 45 |

| Picnic shoulder, bone in | 5 to 8 | 30 to 35 |
| Leg (bone in) | 12 to 16 | 22 to 26 |

Fresh pork, the care and storage of...

Wrapped just as it comes from our store, fresh pork will keep in the refrigerator a couple of days. In the freezer it'll keep a couple of weeks. If you plan to freeze it for a longer period, open the package and wrap the meat in aluminum foil tightly. Any leftovers? Wrap them and pop them in the fridge within two hours after cooking. Now, look at our prices below, and make out your shopping list.

Older mothers may be creating a baby boomlet

By Brian Sullivan
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — Some products of the post World War II baby boom may be contributing to a baby boomlet.

They are women in their early 30s who are deciding to start families. Their child-bearing years are dwindling, their professions are secure, their marriages seem stable and their financial future appears adequate if not rosy.

Postponement helped to contribute to the so-called baby bust — the dramatic drop in the U.S. birth rate in recent years. But there are statistical signs that the birth rate may be on a slight increase, partially because of late first pregnancies.

Early this year, the birth rate was up six percent over the same period last year. And the National Center for Health Statistics has reported that the rate of first births to women 30-34 was up to 8.1 per thousand in 1975, from 7.3 per thousand in 1970.

The subject is explored in a new book, "You're Not Too Old to Have a Baby," by Jane

Price, a research associate in the East Asian Institute at Columbia University who waited until she was nearly 32 to have her first child. Much of the book is devoted to the medical aspects of late pregnancy.

"Medically, the risks of waiting to have children past the biological prime have been exaggerated," she writes. "With recent advances in genetics and obstetrics, most mothers over 30, 35, and 40 have an excellent chance of bearing a healthy child."

But it is still true that older parents have a statistically greater chance of having a child with birth defects, especially a child with mongolism, known medically as Down's syndrome.

Price notes that the chances of having a mongoloid baby are only one in 2,500 for a mother under 20, about one in 1,500 for a mother in her 20s, and for mothers 30 to 34 about one in 850. But for mothers 35 to 39, the chances climb to one in 280, for the woman between 40 and 44, one in 100 and after 44 to one in 40.

The author, however, says that a medical procedure called amniocentesis can detect such defects shortly after conception so the woman can have an abortion. The procedure involves the insertion of a needle through the abdomen to withdraw a sample of amniotic fluid surrounding the fetus.

Cells from the fetus are in the fluid and can be analyzed in a laboratory to see if there is an abnormal chromosome makeup indicating a severe genetic defect.

In this country, fewer than 10 percent of high risk women are given the test, doctors at the meeting said, for various reasons, including lack of awareness that the test exists among some women at risk, and reluctance sometimes on the part of the doctor to alarm the woman, unfounded doubts about dangers of the procedure and the preference that the procedure be performed in a medical center.

Shock waves of baby boom still reverberate

NEXT YEAR, the last of the baby boom group will be at the typical college enrollment age. Each year after, paralleling the declining births in the 1960s, the number of potential college freshmen will drop sharply.

"Our colleges are already in trouble," says Fabien Linden, director of research for The Conference-Board, a research organization. "In fact, their troubles have not yet begun. It will be next year that the demographic trauma of the colleges will really begin to be felt."

A lot of colleges are going to close. The same thing would happen if people quit drinking milk — a lot of cows would be out of work."

The traditional timetable of going to college, then going to work may be outmoded. It's possible that formal education in the future will continue over a person's lifetime. Colleges are already looking at continuing adult education as a way to blunt the impact of declining births.

"My own guess is that it would partly fill the gap left by the absence of young people," says Homer Kempfer, executive director of the Continuing Education Council.

HE THINKS it's likely that more people will begin their career right out of high school, continuing their education at night.

"We know that for some few years continuing education has been the fastest growing segment of American education. There was a time when kindergartens were."

If the colleges need it to survive, so will the students.

"A lot of people with degrees can't get jobs in their field," Kempfer says. "We are turning out twice as many elementary teachers as we are able to absorb. A lot of Ph.D.s in history are coming out. What can you do? That field is filled up. These are likely candidates for continuing education."

Those first experiences with work may also have contributed to the changing climate on college campuses.

"The fighting for grades today is unbelievable," says Dr. Carl Harter, a sociology professor at Tulane University. "You've never seen such competition. There's such a large group of young adults entering the labor force. Some of the troubles of entering young adulthood have been going on long enough that these younger members of the baby boom have been exposed to them."

"They sense that there aren't 17 jobs out there and they can take their pick. It doesn't take long for that to get around."

A DECADE AGO, someone who wanted to teach in college picked half a dozen interesting schools and applied. Harter says. Last year, Tulane hired a sociology teacher who had sent out more than 160 applications. "It's an example of the kind of fear, real or imagined, that's around," he adds.

More than 5,000 teen-agers mobbed job centers in New York one day this past summer for a chance at 2,000 jobs. Similar scenes occurred in Chicago and Los Angeles. Behind them is the way the baby boom has flooded the labor force.

The babies born in 1946 turned 18 in 1964. In the decade before that year, an average of 880,000 people joined the labor force annually. In the decade after 1964, the average was twice as high.

At any one time in 1975, 3.6 million people aged 16 to 24 were unable to find jobs, the National Commission for Manpower Policy found. Another 600,000 wanted to work but had become discouraged and quit looking.

"We have paid a substantial price for this condition," Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said this year. "The opportunity to participate in the nation's prosperity — or even to have a job — has been denied a significant segment of the population."

A BIG PART of the expansion in the labor force after 1964, about three-fifths, was due to the tendency of women in the postwar generation to quit the traditional role of housewife and take a job. The proportion of women working outside the home is expected to grow in coming years.

Jane Tillis graduated from Livingston College in New Jersey in 1976 with a degree in women's studies and sociology. She looked for a job all summer, making about 200 resumes, sitting through about 50 interviews, without success. The best job a friend of hers with the same degree could find was in an envelope factory.

"It's made me reality-oriented, more practical, less idealistic," Tillis says. She took some secretarial courses and got a job at a university. She plans to pursue a master's degree and hopes to work with college students, but she foresees the coming decline in college enrollments.

It scares me a lot. I just hope I'm ahead of it." Unemployment among young people won't begin to lessen until the end of this decade. "A more rapid rate of growth will ease the problem," Linden of the Conference Board says, "but there will still be the demographic river to cross — the stream of young people reaching working age."

AS IT MOVES into middle age, the baby boom generation will continue to feel the crowding it is experiencing today. Most people expect to advance in their careers. But the baby boom generation will be trying to squeeze into a fewer number of management jobs, at the same time finding fewer people under them to manage.

There is a kind of natural ratio of workers to supervisors," says Paul Flaim, chief of special labor force studies at the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "When the baby boom reaches 40 years of age, fewer people will be coming up behind."

You will have more potential chiefs than Indians, because the low birthrate in the '60s. "One thing that may very well occur is increasing job dissatisfaction and career changes," Morrison says. "This is all kind of speculative because we don't have any precedent."

"Statistically invisible underemployment will be a problem," Johnston of the OMB says. "It could lead to anxiety, drugs, escapism, a lot of outs."

Hobbies and avocations may become more important than jobs. Fewer people may look to their career as their chief source of identity.

THE OLDEST MEMBERS of the postwar generation are today at the age, 25 to 30, when people typically look for their first house. "That is acting on the demand for housing that won't disappear no matter what the price," Morrison says. "One can envision it continuing for another decade or so."

While the total population grew by 5.3 percent between 1970 and 1976, the 25 to 34 year age group — the first-home buying group — grew by more than 27 percent, the Census Bureau says.

"This year we expect 1.4 million new single-family housing starts," said Bob Sheheen, associate chief economist of the National Association of Homebuilders. "We attribute this to a great extent to the postwar population bulge."

Baby boom's over, but effect lingers

The great postwar baby boom is just a page of social history now. But the population bulge it created still travels on through the decades, and the full consequences are only now appreciated. Here's the intriguing story of what this generation, through sheer numbers, did to itself and the rest of us.

By Terry Kirkpatrick
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It began in 1945 with the notion that things were finally looking up, a national euphoria released by the end of depression and war. By 1961, as though some intangible limit had been reached, it was over.

It was a wave of child-bearing, and it produced a generation so large that it was called the Postwar Baby Boom. Nothing like it ever happened in the United States before.

Slowly and inexorably, this generation rearranged the country: first the maternity wards weren't big enough, then new elementary schools had to be built, later more high schools and colleges. Through sheer numbers, the postwar children set new standards, rediscovering bicycles and baggy pants, marching on Washington and retreating to Vermont, flooding colleges and then flogging them as irrelevant. Everything they touched became a trend or a national problem.

World War II is history now and the babies have grown up. But, if less visible, they are a no less potent group. Everywhere they turn, they still find too many of themselves, trying to buy a house, looking for a job, hoping for a promotion in mid-career, expecting security in retirement.

THIS CROWD of people, today 16 to 31, shows up in double-digit unemployment rates for teen-agers, the housing crunch, the crime rate, debate over a later retirement age, doctors of philosophy driving taxicabs. It will manifest itself in the future in unpredictable ways.

"In the past five years, we have come to recognize much more fully the scope of this baby boom," says Peter Morrison, a population analyst with the Rand Corp. "We could see the obvious effects but not the subtle effects, as in the labor market. Demographers are discovering that its effects run far deeper than we recognized."

The baby boom was an aberration in the historical decline in fertility, an interruption of the gradual graying of America. Sixty million babies were born in the 15 boom years from 1946 to 1961. In the preceding 15 years, only 40 million had been born, and in the 15 years after 1961, just under 54 million.

So on a chart of the total population, the 60 million postwar babies will always appear as a bulge, even as they age. You can compare it with what a python looks like as it swallows a pig. It is a convulsive process for both a snake and a population.

THE BABY BOOM affected everybody. The whole society had to reorient itself to feed, clothe, educate and find jobs for it. But the mere size of the baby boom generation also affected those in it in many subtle ways.

Attitudes of this generation toward itself and the world were molded by unique events. It was the first generation to grow up with the television, the transistor and the polio vaccine, the first to sit in the family room and watch men walk on the moon.

Just as important is the way it developed great expectations, nourished by education and prosperity, then saw them trampled in its constant elbowing for position. There were too many people expecting too much. The baby boom will be remembered as the generation that stood in line.

The difference between the aspirations of a child and his experiences as an adult has long intrigued sociologists, and some have statistically linked the difference to such things as divorce rates and fertility. For the baby boom generation, it is the difference between steady economic growth and optimism, and economic difficulty and pessimism.

"BY REASON of their experience, this generation is much more sophisticated, cynical, much more willing to challenge traditions, more willing to accept changes," says Philip Houser, director of the Population Research Center at the University of Chicago. "We may be in for some basic changes that this generation will insist upon."

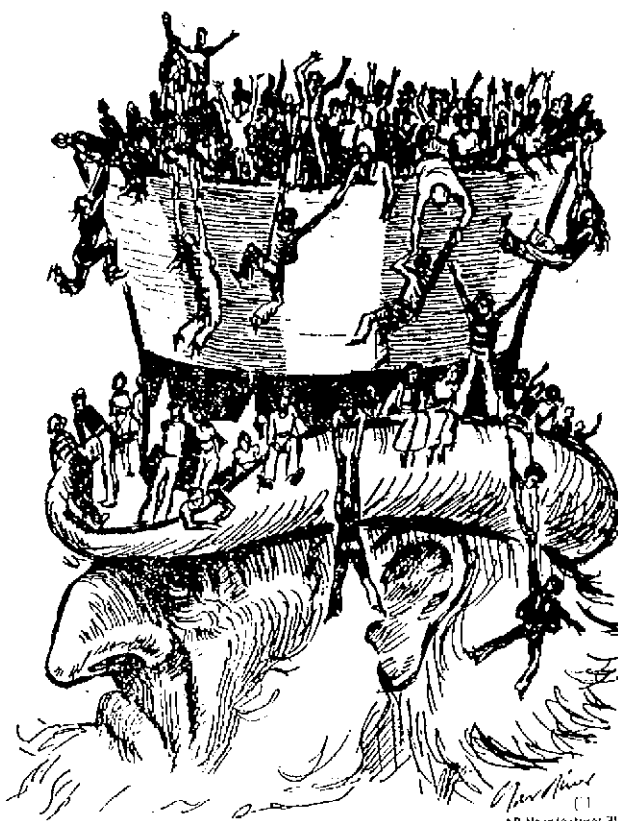

The postwar generation already is carrying into its middle-aged years new ideas about family life, the value of work, education, leisure time, food and neighborhoods.

In 1944, Cole Porter's "Don't Fence Me In" was released, and the millions of servicemen who returned the next year seemed to take it as a theme. They moved out into what had been farm fields — where their children would be bigger than the trees they wanted to climb — and built homes with money guaranteed by the GI bill.

The number of marriages jumped from 1.6 million in 1945 to 2.3 million in 1946. The number of births jumped from 2.9 million to 3.4 million.

Owning a car was not an accepted fact in 1946 as it is today, but two cars in the garage became a dream, then a goal, then a symbol of the new prosperity in which these babies grew up.

—AP Newsfeatures Illustration

Today, the babies born in 1946 are 31 years old and have formed their own households. "I would argue that they had a shocking experience," Johnston says. The affluence was impossible to sustain. It is just their sheer numbers relative to each other. There must be a lot of disillusionment."

Now that the first of the postwar children have grown and left home, their old neighborhoods — the first strongholds in the great march to suburbia — look different.

"Neighborhoods tend to go through life cycles like people," says Dr. Rex Campbell, professor of sociology at the University of Missouri. "Populations tend to age just as houses do, and soon you have an aging neighborhood and finally a declining neighborhood."

SOME URBAN PLANNERS think these neighborhoods face problems potentially as great as those confronting inner cities.

Typical of these is Nassau County, adjoining New York City on Long Island, which was one of the fastest growing suburban areas after the war. Largely rural before then, Nassau's population tripled between 1940 and 1970. But it has been immobile in this decade. Of several hundred schools in the county, about 30 have been abandoned — one of the more visible symptoms of the passage of the baby boom and one that has implications for both the whole population and the postwar generation.

Across the nation, communities that debated higher school taxes in the 1950s to accommodate the baby boom are debating today which schools to close. That's because the baby boom was followed by a rather dramatic "baby bust," an unexpected occurrence that magnified the impact of the baby boom.

Demographers supposed that another population surge would happen when the postwar children reached child-bearing age in the 1960s. But it didn't.

THE RATE at which women were bearing children at the peak of the boom in 1957 — which implied nearly 3.8 births for each woman over her lifetime — was a record for modern times. By 1973, the rate had dropped to 1.9 births per woman, an all-time low.

Demographers don't know for sure why birth rates go up and down. But one widely quoted theory, developed by Dr. Richard Easterlin, a University of Pennsylvania economist, holds that fertility rates are determined by how a young couple perceives its material well-being.

Easterlin has put together unemployment and income figures to show how young people in recent decades were faring compared with the prosperity of their parents. When birth rates for the same year are placed alongside, a correlation appears.

By this reasoning, the baby boom was in part the result of the prosperous times in which its parents lived. Likewise, the baby bust developed when the baby boom generation ran into trouble finding jobs and starting its own households.

Whatever its causes, the unprecedented swing from boom to bust had immense consequences.

THE ENROLLMENT in elementary and secondary schools rose from 48 million in 1964 to 51 million in 1973, then slipped back to 50 million in 1975. And the National Center for Education Statistics projects that it will drop to 46 million by 1985.

This means difficult decisions not only for school districts but for those of the postwar generation who chose teaching as a career. Nearly half of those who received degrees in 1975 qualifying them to teach and who looked for a job didn't find one, the center estimates.

The same expansion occurred at colleges and universities as the baby boom generation entered. Enrollment rose from 1.5 million in 1952 to 6.3 million in 1972. Not only were there 11.6 million more people of college age in 1972, but the proportion of them going to college had risen from 11 percent to 25 percent, the Census Bureau says.

Because more people were going to college, more people were entering society with high aspirations that often couldn't be satisfied.

Rainfall wets Southland

By Mark Gladstone
Staff Writer

The first storm of the 1977-78 season moved through Southern California Saturday, bringing rain to the Long Beach area and the first snow flurries to the mountains.

The storm also brought gusty winds that caused traffic advisories and small craft warnings from Pt. Conception to the Mexican border.

Although the National Weather Service station at Long Beach Airport reported only a trace of rain Saturday afternoon, other areas of Long Beach were slickened by rainfall.

Since the rainy season started in July, Long Beach has had 2.03 inches of rain, compared with a normal .30 inch.

The most rain reported Saturday was at Mt. Wilson, which received .56 inch. Los Angeles Civic Center had .07 and Torrance .06 inch.

By late afternoon, skies were clearing and roadways drying as the storm moved east.

The weather service expects partly cloudy skies today and Monday, with the probability of rain decreasing to 10 percent this afternoon. High temperatures are expected near 70, with lows in the upper 50s. Long Beach had a high of 75 Saturday.

The storm system moved south along the California coast Friday night and brought measurable precipitation to much of Northern California. Sacramento, for instance, had .36 inch of rain Saturday.

"It helps, but it's not tremendous," said Roger Hill, meteorological technician for the weather service in Los Angeles, of the storm's impact on the state's drought.

In the San Bernardino Mountains above Big Bear, the U.S. Forest Service reported the first snow flurries of the winter at about the 7,000-foot level. The snow, however, was melting when it hit the ground. Lake Arrowhead received .54 inch of rain by early evening.

The California Highway Patrol issued two traffic advisories for campers and trailers because of gusty wind. One was on Interstate 5 near the Grapevine north of Los Angeles, and the other was for Interstate 15 near Barstow.

Otherwise, the CHP reported a number of "fender-bender" accidents because of wet streets.

The Coast Guard issued small craft warnings but had no reports of any major problems at sea.

50 'Koreagate' suspects

rean government into a cooperative posture, such statements also appear to pave the way for United States officials to blame Seoul if the Justice Department and the ethics committee fail to prove congressional misdeeds.

The ethics committee, which is known officially as the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, is charged with determining whether congressmen have taken bribes or other illicit favors from agents of the South Korean government. The committee has narrowed its focus to representatives now in the House, eliminating its investigation of most former congressmen, congressional aides said.

That decision was taken because there is little the committee or the House can do to discipline former members, the officials said. That does not preclude the Justice Department's prosecuting former members of Congress for alleged criminal misconduct.

The aides indicated that many of the targets in the ethics inquiry, both Democrats and Republicans, are members of the House International Relations Committee and, to a lesser extent, of the House Armed Services and House Agriculture Committees.

Members of those committees were allegedly sought out by Korean agents trying to insure the American political and military commitment to Korea, to keep American troops in Korea, to sustain military aid and to influence grain sales that helped finance the covert lobby.

Last June, the ethics committee sent questionnaires to about 730 congressmen and former congressmen, asking them about their trips to Korea, their social and political relationships with Korean diplomats and alleged agents, and whether they, their families or their staffs had received money or valuable gifts from the Koreans.

Of the 50 congressmen who remain suspects in the inquiry, nine are known to have taken money from Korean agents as campaign or other contributions. Two members of the Senate also are known to have done so.

Almost all the 50 congressmen have been on trips to Korea, where they were sumptuously entertained, offered gifts and, in some cases, given government decorations or honorary degrees from Korean universities. Most of the 50 also have been entertained by Tongsun Park or Hancho C. Kim, both alleged Korean agents under indictment here for conspiracy and bribery, or by Sue Park Thomson, the Korean-born member of former House Speaker Carl Albert's staff.

The congressional sources indicated the list of suspects was narrowed by sifting through evidence obtained from the Justice Department and other government agencies, Korean witnesses who are former intelligence officers or diplomats, former employees and associates of Park and Kim, documents, reports and lists purportedly drawn up by the alleged agents and the committee's questionnaires.

The committee has begun to take depositions from the 50 congressmen, and investigators also have been asking for their bank records and other documents. After that evidence has been studied, the congressmen may be interrogated a second time.

The congressional sources noted that a congressman faces two tests in this process. His dealings with the Koreans may have been improper and therefore warrant censure from Congress, and the congressman may face a perjury charge if he lies to the committee under oath in the questioning.

Because this process is cumbersome some and time-consuming, the congressional sources said, hearings will not be held until well after the first of next year. Jaworski, the special counsel to the committee, has pledged that public hearings eventually will be held.

Committee Chairman Flynt said in a report to the House Wednesday, "The committee is unable to say at this time whether any members of Congress succumbed to the efforts to influence their official actions."

The committee's access to the Korean Embassy's bank records was a result of a compromise after long and delicate negotiations, the sources said.

Embassy officials had contended the records belong to the embassy, not the bank, and were protected by diplomatic immunity. In this instance, the Koreans were supported by other embassies here. The committee, however, was supported by the State Department in contending the records belong to the bank and are thus subject to American law.

NORWALK 'HELP NEAR'

Q. Overwork doesn't sound like a personal reason.

A. I think that's fair. Here we average about one psychiatrist for about 80 or 90 patients. If you're making less money, and dealing with more difficult patients, and you can make far more on the outside, you begin to get a frustration level. If, by one reason or another, your colleague leaves, and no one comes in and takes his place, you're saddled with his responsibilities as well as your own, you may end up having twice as much work as what you had all along, which was excessive. You get a higher burnout rate.

Q. Does that go as well for the nursing staff?

A. Very definitely... (but) the root cause is different. I have the positions — I have not been able to fill them for a different reason. There are not enough nurses looking for jobs.

Q. How large a gap do you see between what's needed to clean up Metropolitan and the state will give you?

A. I can't even answer that one. I don't know.

Q. How much money does the hospital need to bring it up to community hospital standards?

A. Well, I'll put it the other way around. Currently, community

Q. What is your own view of Metropolitan's role?

A. It's hard to perceive exactly because there's a lot of effort being expended to review legislation and laws as they relate to mental health. At this point in time, knowing what I know, I would presume that Metropolitan will become more and more a teaching facility dealing with people who have not been adequately dealt with or treated in community facilities. I don't like to use the term research, but in a sense we are talking about people, and at this point we still don't know all we need to know in order to accurately serve them. What we see currently, at least, is Metropolitan as sort of the end of the conveyor belt. (Other mental health agencies) pick out of this stream of people those that they can serve; those that are left at the end of that system arrive here.

Q. So you consider yourself the last resort in the mental health system?

A. I think so, I think this is the way it is. And that's OK. I think that what needs to be understood very clearly is that (last resort) doesn't mean cheap, it doesn't mean less humane treatment, it doesn't mean overcrowding and all the rest of it.

Crime labyrinth revealed

ard, police said. What they discussed, prosecutors hope to prove, were two options: kidnapping Bovan and getting their money back, or having him murdered.

Police say Kulik and his partners took these options to a trio of Huntington Beach men — men they trusted to do work they couldn't or wouldn't do themselves.

The trio, identified only as "the Italians" during much of the police investigation, were Gerry Fiori, Anthony Marone Jr. and Raymond Resco.

Fiori and Resco were known to police agencies in at least two Orange County cities more than five months ago as "muscle types," men with hard backgrounds who knew how to throw their weight around.

POLICE SAY both men had direct ties to organized crime in their past — indeed, that the U.S. marshal's office had relocated them from New York as a means of protecting them for testimony or cooperation in organized crime investigations there.

Fiori, a Justice Department source said, was relocated in Orange County and given the standard supplemental income of nearly $900 a month despite the fact that he was a convicted felon (details on the conviction were not made available).

There is some evidence, police say, that Kulik knew Fiori's background when he offered a reward for Bovan.

For nearly two months, however, Bovan stayed underground — so well hidden, police assert, that $1,000 offered for information on his whereabouts brought no result.

But in the early morning hours of Saturday, Oct. 22, Bovan made the first of two mistakes. He decided to stop at a favorite place, El Ranchito, in Newport Beach.

INSIDE, investigators say, he saw Debbie Addison and exchanged brief hellos with her, then sat down by himself — his second mistake. Bovan knew Miss Addison only casually, police said — not well enough to know she lived with Gerry Fiori.

Miss Addison, police said, made a quick telephone call. When Bovan walked to the restaurant parking lot less than 45 minutes after arriving, there was a lime green Cadillac waiting.

Inside, according to police, sat "the Italians."

Bovan probably did not realize what was happening until it was far too late. Fiori approached him, according to the confession, and fired two shots into Bovan's chest from a 9mm automatic.

Bovan went down, and Fiori told police he systematically fired seven more rounds into the victim's chest. Then he got back in the lime green Cadillac, and it drove away.

(A transcript of Fiori's statements to police was submitted in court at a bail hearing. Fiori was denied bail.)

Witnesses saw the vehicle and described it — a break police took advantage of. When Fiori tried to sell the car several days later, he was spotted and arrested.

IN HIS possession, police said, was a five-ounce packet of cocaine. Shortly afterward, police arrested Marone, Resco and Miss Addison.

Earlier, county lifeguards found a 9mm handgun in the Newport Bay area, and police confirmed it was the murder weapon.

But Fiori's arrest wasn't the first in the case — that came Oct. 22. Less than nine hours after Bovan's slaying, police found a man "dozing" in the front seat of a custom-made $60,000 car, parked in a Mission Viejo shopping center.

On the front seat beside him, police say, was 1.1 pounds of pure "China White" heroin — valued at nearly $1 million. They arrested the man and found his name was Alexander Kulik.

Kulik had returned the night before from a visit to Southeast Asia and India, where he said he'd conferred with high officials of his religion, Hare Krishna. The heroin in his car was not there when he'd parked and fallen asleep, police said he told them.

THROUGH Kulik, police say, they learned of the earlier kidnapping and that Kulik and PDI officers had at one point hired "the Italians" to track down an embezzlement problem that was costing the investment firm considerable money.

PDI officers, however, have vanished. Since Bovan's death, police have been unable to locate them, though warrants charging them with conspiracy to commit murder have been issued.

It was through PDI officers that police first made a connection with Hare Krishna. Prasadam — the name of the company Kulik used to channel money — is a Krishna term, meaning literally "God's mercy" but referring to blessed food.

Girl, 8, desert heroine

"We started to walk and then after we walked about halfway, we went to sleep," the youngster said. "Then I said, 'Randy, come on, we've got to go to Las Vegas because Mommy and Ron can die if we don't go there and tell them that they're hurt.'"

Richelle then guided her brother, who suffered a slight concussion and lost his glasses in the crash, during the 2½-hour walk across the desert to the nearest road.

The youngster said she was able to find her way out of the desert because the aura of the bright Las Vegas lights was visible in the skies.

A passing motorist took them to a Las Vegas truckstop and called police. The plane wreckage and the two bodies were found early Saturday.

Neither Richelle nor her

brother was seriously injured in the crash, police said.

The plane began its journey in San Jose, with the family apparently traveling to Las Vegas for a family outing. They stopped in Bakersfield before heading on, police said.

The plane crashed about 15 minutes before its scheduled 6:55 p.m. landing.

The two Krumpeck children, joined by a 16-year-old sister, Renice, who had arrived in Las Vegas earlier, were taken to a police officer's home after their release from the hospital to await the arrival of their father.

The father, Richard, was scheduled to arrive here Saturday evening from his home in Boulder, Colo.

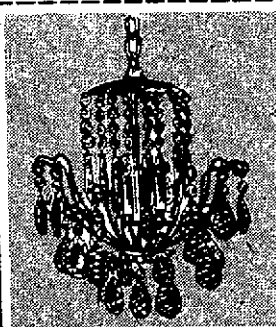

Neighbors in San Jose said Griffin was Ruth Krumpeck's boyfriend and lived with the family. They said the Krumpecks were a quiet family who kept to themselves.

Older mothers may be creating a baby boomlet

By Brian Sullivan
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — Some products of the post World War II baby boom may be contributing to a baby boomlet.

They are women in their early 30s who are deciding to start families. Their child-bearing years are dwindling, their professions are secure, their marriages seem stable and their financial future appears adequate if not rosy.

Postponement helped to contribute to the so-called baby bust — the dramatic drop in the U.S. birth rate in recent years. But there are statistical signs that the birth rate may be on a slight increase, partially because of late first pregnancies.

Early this year, the birth rate was up six percent over the same period last year. And the National Center for Health Statistics has reported that the rate of first births to women 30-34 was up to 8.1 per thousand in 1975, from 7.3 per thousand in 1970.

The subject is explored in a new book, "You're Not Too Old to Have a Baby," by Jane

Price, a research associate in the East Asian Institute at Columbia University who waited until she was nearly 32 to have her first child. Much of the book is devoted to the medical aspects of late pregnancy.

"Medically, the risks of waiting to have children past the biological prime have been exaggerated," she writes. "With recent advances in genetics and obstetrics, most mothers over 30, 35, and 40 have an excellent chance of bearing a healthy child."

But it is still true that older parents have a statistically greater chance of having a child with birth defects, especially a child with mongolism, known medically as Down's syndrome.

Price notes that the chances of having a mongoloid baby are only one in 2,500 for a mother under 20, about one in 1,500 for a mother in her 20s, and for mothers 30 to 34 about one in 850. But for mothers 35 to 39, the chances climb to one in 280, for the woman between 40 and 44, one in 100 and after 44 to one in 40.

The author, however, says that a medical procedure called amniocentesis can detect such defects shortly after conception so the woman can have an abortion. The procedure involves the insertion of a needle through the abdomen to withdraw a sample of amniotic fluid surrounding the fetus.

Cells from the fetus are in the fluid and can be analyzed in a laboratory to see if there is an abnormal chromosome makeup indicating a severe genetic defect.

In this country, fewer than 10 percent of high risk women are given the test, doctors at the meeting said, for various reasons, including lack of awareness that the test exists among some women at risk, and reluctance sometimes on the part of the doctor to alarm the woman, unfounded doubts about dangers of the procedure and the preference that the procedure be performed in a medical center.

NEXT YEAR, the last of the baby boom group will be at the typical college enrollment age. Each year after, paralleling the declining births in the 1960s, the number of potential college freshmen will drop sharply.

"Our colleges are already in trouble," says Fabien Linden, director of research for The Conference Board, a research organization. "In fact, their troubles have not yet begun. It will be next year that the demographic trauma of the colleges will really begin to be felt."

"A lot of colleges are going to close. The same thing would happen if people quit drinking milk — a lot of cows would be out of work."

The traditional timetable of going to college, then going to work may be outmoded. It's possible that formal education in the future will continue over a person's lifetime. Colleges are already looking at continuing adult education as a way to blunt the impact of declining births.

"My own guess is that it would partly fill the gap left by the absence of young people," says Homer Kempfer, executive director of the Continuing Education Council.

HE THINKS it's likely that more people will begin their career right out of high school, continuing their education at night.

"We know that for some few years continuing education has been the fastest growing segment of American education. There was a time when kindergartens were."

"If the colleges need it to survive, so will the students."

"A lot of people with degrees can't get jobs in their field," Kempfer says. "We are turning out twice as many elementary teachers as we are able to absorb. A lot of Ph.D.s in history are coming out. What can you do? That field is filled up. These are likely candidates for continuing education."

Those first experiences with work may also have contributed to the changing climate on college campuses.

"The fighting for grades today is unbelievable," says Dr. Carl Harter, a sociology professor at Tulane University. "You've never seen such competition. There's such a large group of young adults entering the labor force. Some of the troubles of entering young adulthood have been going on long enough that these younger members of the baby boom have been exposed to them."

"They sense that there aren't 17 jobs out there and they can take their pick. It doesn't take long for that to get around."

A DECADE AGO, someone who wanted to teach in college picked half a dozen interesting schools and applied. Harter says. Last year, Tulane hired a sociology teacher who had sent out more than 160 applications. "It's an example of the kind of fear, real or imagined, that's around," he adds.

More than 5,000 teen-agers mobbed job centers in New York one day this past summer for a chance at 2,000 jobs. Similar scenes occurred in Chicago and Los Angeles. Behind them is the way the baby boom has flooded the labor force.

The babies born in 1946 turned 18 in 1964. In the decade before that year, an average of 880,000 people joined the labor force annually. In the decade after 1964, the average was twice as high.

At any one time in 1975, 3.6 million people aged 16 to 24 were unable to find jobs, the National Commission for Manpower Policy found. Another 660,000 wanted to work but had become discouraged and quit looking.

"We have paid a substantial price for this condition," Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said this year. "The opportunity to participate in the nation's prosperity — or even to have a job — has been denied a significant segment of the population."

A BIG PART of the expansion in the labor force after 1964, about three-fifths, was due to the tendency of women in the postwar generation to quit the traditional role of housewife and take a job. The proportion of women working outside the home is expected to grow in coming years.

Jane Tillis graduated from Livingston College in New Jersey in 1976 with a degree in women's studies and sociology. She looked for a job all summer, smiling about 200 resumes, sitting through about 50 interviews, without success. The best job a friend of hers with the same degree could find was in an envelope factory.

"It's made me reality-oriented, more practical, less idealistic," Tillis says. She took some secretarial courses and got a job at a university. She plans to pursue a master's degree and hopes to work with college students, but she foresees the coming decline in college enrollments.

"It scares me a lot. I just hope I'm ahead of it." Unemployment among young people won't begin to lessen until the end of this decade. "A more rapid rate of growth will ease the problem," Linden of the Conference Board says, "but there will still be the demographic river to cross — the stream of young people reaching working age."

AS IT MOVES into middle age, the baby boom generation will continue to feel the crowding it is experiencing today. Most people expect to advance in their careers. But the baby boom generation will be trying to squeeze into a fewer number of management jobs, at the same time finding fewer people under them to manage.

"There is a kind of natural ratio of workers to supervisors," says Paul Flaim, chief of special labor force studies at the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "When the baby boom reaches 40 years of age, fewer people will be coming up behind."

"You will have more potential chiefs than Indians, because the low birthrate in the '60s."

"One thing that may very well occur is increasing job dissatisfaction and career changes," Morrison says. "This is all kind of speculative because we don't have any precedent."

"Statistically invisible underemployment will be a problem," Johnston of the OMB says. "It could lead to anxiety, drugs, escapism, a lot of outs."

Hobbies and avocations may become more important than jobs. Fewer people may look to their career as their chief source of identity.

THE OLDEST MEMBERS of the postwar generation are today at the age, 25 to 30, when people typically look for their first house. "That is acting on the demand for housing that won't disappear no matter what the price," Morrison says. "One can envision it continuing for another decade or so."

While the total population grew by 5.3 percent between 1970 and 1976, the 25 to 34 year age group — the first-home buying group — grew by more than 27 percent, the Census Bureau says.

"This year we expect 1.4 million new single-family housing starts," said Bob Sheheen, associate chief economist of the National Association of Homebuilders. "We attribute this to a great extent to the postwar population bulge."

Rural ulcers bad as city's

By Nancy Shulins
Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Stress-ridden city folk who move to the country may discover that even rural life can produce ulcers, headaches and insomnia, a Vermont psychiatrist says.

"The isolation and loneliness cause depressions and fears," said Dr. Elizabeth Forsberg of Montpelier. "You see the signs — the headaches, stomach aches, heart palpitations, the incredible stress. It settles in the muscles and creates all types of physical problems."

The problem is most apparent among young people and women, and most prevalent in winter, Dr. Forsberg said.

She said she remembered coming to Vermont from Germany in 1962, settling in a farmhouse in Underhill and finding it difficult to meet others in the town of 1,100.

Some Vermonters compound the stress by suffering it stoically, she said.

"In Europe, it seems, people were more able to hit back in a positive way. Here, people keep smiling, even when they are in such pain."

The problem often extends to children, Dr. Forsberg said.

"They go home from school on the bus. They live far away from other youngsters. Their parents may be very good to them, but it is not the same as having other children as playmates."

The onset of winter, when isolation often intensifies, is one of the most trying times for Vermonters, she says. "There is a fear of being trapped, a fear of panic. There are suicide attempts."

To combat the problem of stress in the country, Dr. Forsberg has developed "relaxation therapy," which combines aspects of yoga, breath control and body movements. Relaxing the body helps to relax the mind, she says.

Dual careers demand more from spouses

By Ann Blackman
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Partners in two-career marriages often have more demanding problems than those in marriages where the husband is the breadwinner, a University of Pennsylvania psychiatrist said Saturday.

But two-career marriages often have more rewards: personal, professional and financial.

"In two-career marriages, there are simply more things to take care of — the jobs, the house, the children," said Dr. Ellen Berman, a marriage counselor who is an assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania. "Nobody has spare time for the minor things that make life easier, like calling the plumber and buying toilet paper."

"At night," she said, "both partners are exhausted and don't have much emotional strength for each other or the children, much less friends."

However, said Dr. Berman, who is married to a psychiatrist, couples in two-career marriages experience more excitement together.

"In general, both are interesting people," she said. "The husband has fewer financial worries and a wife he can share more things with."

Dr. Berman was speaking at the beginning of a two-day seminar here on the "Modern Two-Career Marriage" sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania Department of Psychiatry. Another such conference is scheduled for Palm Beach, Fla., in December.

Eight couples, mostly from the New York-New Jersey area, paid $250 per person to listen to lectures and participate in small discussion groups on the problems they encounter.

The seminar was led by Dr. Berman; her husband, Dr. Perry A. Berman, who counsels adults and couples; Dr. Howard Baker, who directs student medical health services at Drexel University in Philadelphia; and his wife, Margaret Baker, who has a doctorate in psychology, teaches and counsels families.

Ellen Berman said people who get involved in two-career marriages tend to have a lot of energy, intelligence and a strong desire to be perfect.

She said: "They feel, 'Not only should I be perfect, but everyone associated with me should be — my partner, my children, my house, my dog.' They serve artichokes with hollandaise sauce, not melted butter, even if that's what their 6-year-old requests."

She defined a career as an occupation that takes a lot of a person's time and energy, that follows a developmental sequence and becomes more complicated rather than less.

"A career is going somewhere and usually yields money, fame or recognition in the community," she said.

She said research shows that women in two-career marriages were often only children or lonely children who had older siblings or who were sick and received a lot of attention.

She said the women often had mothers who were career women, or very career-oriented fathers and frustrated mothers.

Suspended archbishop tours N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — The leader of a dissident Roman Catholic faction, suspended from his functions as archbishop of Tulle in France and threatened with excommunication by Pope Paul VI, went sightseeing Saturday in Manhattan.

Marcel Lefebvre, who has defied the Vatican by saying Mass in Latin and refusing to recognize a new ecumenical liturgy, strolled the streets of Rockefeller Center and took a quick look at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

He indicated, over a hamburger at a 51st Street bar and grill, that he still intends to dedicate the new U.S. headquarters of his organization, the Society of St. Pius X, in Oyster Bay Cove today.

The Most Rev. John McGann, bishop of Rockville Centre, wrote Lefebvre a letter forbidding him to hold services in that diocese, which includes Oyster Bay Cove, but the suspended archbishop flew here from Switzerland Friday in defiance of the order.

His society claims 50,000 members in Europe and 10,000 in the United States.

The pope suspended Lefebvre last year after he defied an order to close a seminary in Ecône, Switzerland, where he has been training young men in the Tridentine rite. He continued to say Mass in Latin and administer the sacraments.

Last June 26, in disobedience of a papal command, he ordained 14 priests.

Rainfall wets Southland

By Mark Gladstone
Staff Writer

The first storm of the 1977-78 season moved through Southern California Saturday, bringing rain to the Long Beach area and the first snow flurries to the mountains.

The storm also brought gusty winds that caused traffic advisories and small craft warnings from Pt. Conception to the Mexican border.

Although the National Weather Service station at Long Beach Airport reported only a trace of rain Saturday afternoon, other areas of Long Beach were slickened by rainfall.

Since the rainy season started in July, Long Beach has had 2.03 inches of rain, compared with a normal .30 inch.

The most rain reported Saturday was at Mt. Wilson, which received .56 inch. Los Angeles Civic Center had .07 and Torrance .06 inch.

By late afternoon, skies were clearing and roadways drying as the storm moved east.

The weather service expects partly cloudy skies today and Monday, with the probability of rain decreasing to 10 percent this afternoon. High temperatures are expected near 70, with lows in the upper 50s. Long Beach had a high of 75 Saturday.

The storm system moved south along the California coast Friday night and brought measurable precipitation to much of Northern California. Sacramento, for instance, had .36 inch of rain Saturday.

"It helps, but it's not tremendous," said Roger Hill, meteorological technician for the weather service in Los Angeles, of the storm's impact on the state's drought.

In the San Bernardino Mountains above Big Bear, the U.S. Forest Service reported the first snow flurries of the winter at about the 7,000-foot level. The snow, however, was melting when it hit the ground. Lake Arrowhead received .54 inch of rain by early evening.

The California Highway Patrol issued two traffic advisories for campers and trailers because of gusty wind. One was on Interstate 5 near the Grapevine north of Los Angeles, and the other was for Interstate 15 near Barstow.

Otherwise, the CHP reported a number of "fender-bender" accidents because of wet streets.

The Coast Guard issued small craft warnings but had no reports of any major problems at sea.

Crime labyrinth revealed

ard, police said. What they discussed, prosecutors hope to prove, were two options: kidnapping Bovan and getting their money back, or having him murdered.

Police say Kulik and his partners took these options to a trio of Huntington Beach men — men they trusted to do work they couldn't or wouldn't do themselves.

The trio, identified only as "the Italians" during much of the police investigation, were Gerry Fiori, Anthony Marone Jr. and Raymond Resco.

Fiori and Resco were known to police agencies in at least two Orange County cities more than five months ago as "muscle types," men with hard backgrounds who knew how to throw their weight around.

POLICE SAY both men had direct ties to organized crime in their past — indeed, that the U.S. marshal's office had relocated them from New York as a means of protecting them for testimony or cooperation in organized crime investigations there.

Fiori, a Justice Department source said, was relocated in Orange County and given the standard supplemental income of nearly $800 a month despite the fact that he was a convicted felon (details on the conviction were not made available).

There is some evidence, police say, that Kulik knew Fiori's background when he offered a reward for Bovan.

For nearly two months, however, Bovan stayed underground — so well hidden, police assert, that $1,000 offered for information on his whereabouts brought no result.

But in the early morning hours of Saturday, Oct. 22, Bovan made the first of two mistakes. He decided to stop at a favorite place, El Rancho, in Newport Beach.

INSIDE, investigators say, he saw Debbie Addison and exchanged brief hellos with her, then sat down by himself — his second mistake. Bovan knew Miss Addison only casually, police said—not well enough to know she lived with Gerry Fiori.

Miss Addison, police said, made a quick telephone call. When Bovan walked to the restaurant parking lot less than 45 minutes after arriving, there was a lime green Cadillac waiting.

Inside, according to police, sat "the Italians."

Bovan probably did not realize what was happening until it was far too late. Fiori approached him, according to the confession, and fired two shots into Bovan's chest from a 9mm automatic.

Bovan went down, and Fiori told police he systematically fired seven more rounds into the victim's chest. Then he got back in the lime green Cadillac, and it drove away.

(A transcript of Fiori's statements to police was submitted in court at a bail hearing. Fiori was denied bail.)

Witnesses saw the vehicle and described it — a break police took advantage of. When Fiori tried to sell the car several days later, he was spotted and arrested.

IN HIS possession, police said, was a five-ounce packet of cocaine. Shortly afterward, police arrested Marone, Resco and Miss Addison.

Earlier, county lifeguards found a 9mm handgun in the Newport Bay area, and police confirmed it was the murder weapon.

But Fiori's arrest wasn't the first in the case — that came Oct. 22. Less than nine hours after Bovan's slaying, police found a man "dozing" in the front seat of a custom-made $60,000 car, parked in a Mission Viejo shopping center.

On the front seat beside him, police say, was 1.1 pounds of pure "China White" heroin — valued at nearly $1 million. They arrested the man and found his name was Alexander Kulik.

Kulik had returned the night before from a visit to Southeast Asia and India, where he said he'd conferred with high officials of his religion, Hare Krishna. The heroin in his car was not there when he'd parked and fallen asleep, police said he told them.

THROUGH Kulik, police say, they learned of the earlier kidnapping and that Kulik and PDI officers had at one point hired "the Italians" to track down an embezzlement problem that was costing the investment firm considerable money.

PDI officers, however, have vanished. Since Bovan's death, police have been unable to locate them, though warrants charging them with conspiracy to commit murder have been issued.

It was through PDI officers that police first made a connection with Hare Krishna. Prasadani — the name of the company — Kulik used to channel money — is a Krishna term, meaning literally "God's mercy" but referring to blessed food.

Girl, 8, desert heroine

"We started to walk and then after we walked about halfway, we went to sleep," the youngster said. "Then I said, 'Randy, come on, we've got to go to Las Vegas because Mommy and Ron can die if we don't go there and tell them that they're hurt.'"

Richelle then guided her brother, who suffered a slight concussion and lost his glasses in the crash, during the 2½-hour walk across the desert to the nearest road.

The youngster said she was able to find her way out of the desert because the aura of the bright Las Vegas lights was visible in the skies.

A passing motorist took them to a Las Vegas truckstop and called police. The plane wreckage and the two bodies were found early Saturday.

Neither Richelle nor her

brother was seriously injured in the crash, police said.

The plane began its journey in San Jose, with the family apparently traveling to Las Vegas for a family outing. They stopped in Bakersfield before heading on, police said.

The plane crashed about 15 minutes before its scheduled 6:55 p.m. landing.

The two Krumpeck children, joined by a 16-year-old sister, Renice, who had arrived in Las Vegas earlier, were taken to a police officer's home after their release from the hospital to await the arrival of their father.

The father, Richard, was scheduled to arrive here Saturday evening from his home in Boulder, Colo.

Neighbors in San Jose said Griffin was Ruth Krumpeck's boyfriend and lived with the family. They said the Krumpecks were a quiet family who kept to themselves.

rean government into a cooperative posture, such statements also appear to pave the way for United States officials to blame Seoul if the Justice Department and the ethics committee fail to prove congressional misdeeds.

The ethics committee, which is known officially as the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, is charged with determining whether congressmen have taken bribes or other illicit favors from agents of the South Korean government. The committee has narrowed its focus to representatives now in the House, eliminating its investigation of most former congressmen, congressional aides said.

That decision was taken because there is little the committee or the House can do to discipline former members, the officials said. That does not preclude the Justice Department's prosecuting former members of Congress for alleged criminal misconduct.

The aides indicated that many of the targets in the ethics inquiry, both Democrats and Republicans, are members of the House International Relations Committee and, to a lesser extent, of the House Armed Services and House Agriculture Committees.

Members of those committees were allegedly sought out by Korean agents trying to insure the American political and military commitment to Korea, to keep American troops in Korea, to sustain military aid and to influence grain sales that helped finance the covert lobby.

Last June, the ethics committee sent questionnaires to about 730 congressmen and former congressmen, asking them about their trips to Korea, their social and political relationships with Korean diplomats and alleged agents, and whether they, their families or their staffs had received money or valuable gifts from the Koreans.

Of the 50 congressmen who remain suspects in the inquiry, nine are known to have taken money from Korean agents as campaign or other contributions. Two members of the Senate also are known to have done so.

Almost all the 50 congressmen have been on trips to Korea, where they were sumptuously entertained, offered gifts and, in some cases, given government decorations or honorary degrees from Korean universities. Most of the 50 also have been entertained by Tongson Park or Hanchu C. Kim, both alleged Korean agents under indictment here for conspiracy and bribery, or by Sue Park Thompson, the Korean-born member of former House Speaker Carl Albert's staff.

The congressional sources indicated the list of suspects was narrowed by sifting through evidence obtained from the Justice Department and other government agencies. Korean witnesses who are former intelligence officers or diplomats, former employees and associates of Park and Kim, documents, reports and lists purportedly drawn up by the alleged agents and the committee's questionnaires.

The committee has begun to take depositions from the 50 congressmen, and investigators also have been asking for their bank records and other documents. After that evidence has been studied, the congressmen may be interrogated a second time.

The congressional sources noted that a congressman faces two tests in this process. His dealings with the Koreans may have been improper and therefore warrant censure from Congress, and the congressman may face a perjury charge if he lies to the committee under oath in the questioning.

Because this process is cumbersome, and time-consuming, the congressional sources said, hearings will not be held until well after the first of next year. Jaworski, the special counsel to the committee, has pledged that public hearings eventually will be held.

Committee Chairman Flynt said in a report to the House Wednesday, "The committee is unable to say at this time whether any members of Congress succumbed to the efforts to influence their official actions."

The committee's access to the Korean Embassy's bank records was a result of a compromise after long and delicate negotiations, the sources said.

Embassy officials had contended the records belong to the embassy, not the bank, and were protected by diplomatic immunity. In this instance, the Koreans were supported by other embassies here. The committee, however, was supported by the State Department in contending the records belong to the bank and are thus subject to American law.

NORWALK 'HELP NEAR'

Q. Overwork doesn't sound like a personal reason.

A. I think that's fair. Here we average about one psychiatrist for about 80 or 90 patients. If you're making less money, and dealing with more difficult patients, and you can make far more on the outside, you begin to get a frustration level. If, by one reason or another, your colleague leaves, and no one comes in and takes his place, you're saddled with his responsibilities as well as your own, you may end up having twice as much work as what you had all along, which was excessive. You get a higher burnout rate.

Q. Does that go as well for the nursing staff?

A. Very definitely... (but) the root cause is different. I have the positions — I have not been able to fill them for a different reason. There are not enough nurses looking for jobs.

Q. How large a gap do you see between what's needed to clean up Metropolitan and the state will give you?

A. I can't even answer that one. I don't know.

Q. How much money does the hospital need to bring it up to community hospital standards?

A. Well, I'll put it the other way around. Currently, community

Q. What is your own view of Metropolitan's role?

A. It's hard to perceive exactly because there's a lot of effort being expended to review legislation and laws as they relate to mental health. At this point in time, knowing what I know, I would presume that Metropolitan will become more and more a teaching facility dealing with people who have not been adequately dealt with or treated in community facilities. I don't like to use the term research, but in a sense we are talking about people, and at this point we still don't know all we need to know in order to accurately serve them. What we see currently, at least, is Metropolitan as sort of the end of the conveyor belt. (Other mental health agencies) pick out of this stream of people those that they can serve; those that are left at the end of that system arrive here.

Q. So you consider yourself the last resort in the mental health system?

A. I think so, I think this is the way it is. And that's OK. I think that what needs to be understood very clearly is that (last resort) doesn't mean cheap, it doesn't mean less humane treatment, it doesn't mean overcrowding and all the rest of it.

Ogling ode stirs battle for book

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

BOSTON — School officials in a town outside Boston have decided that a poem about men ogling women on the street is not fit for high schoolers to read — even though it was written by a 15-year-old girl.

The high school's librarian has taken the issue to court, claiming that officials do not have the right to remove a book from the library after it is accepted by a librarian.

And students and parents have been packing the federal district court here since the trial started Wednesday.

The controversy began last July, when the School Committee in Chelsea, on the northern edge of Boston, was informed of the content of a 21-line poem called "The City to a Young Girl." The poem, part of an anthology of verse by teen-agers, describes in earthy language the girl's disgust at being appraised as a "piece of meat" by men on the street.

In one passage, she describes the city as:

"One million horny lip-smacking men

"Screaming for my body."

The committee ordered librarian Sonja Coleman to clip that poem from the book or remove the entire book, entitled "Male and Female Under 18."

She removed the book, but with some supporters formed a group called the Right to Read

Defense Committee, which asked the federal court to restore the book to the shelves.

In August, Judge Joseph L. Tauro ordered the book temporarily put back in the library. But he said students who wanted to read it would have to show a note of parental approval.

The non-jury trial, which began last Wednesday, is expected to end this week.

Andrew Quigley, Chelsea's former mayor who is head of the School Committee, testified that the poem is "tasteless, filthy trash."

A girl reading that without proper instruction could arrive at the opinion that every man walking down the street is considering her only as a sex object to be violated," he said. "It is not good education, and it is not something to be found in the halls of a school."

The librarian, however, said, "It has definite value. It's trying to make a point — the dehumanizing and humiliating situation of being viewed by some men as a sex object, a piece of meat."

"In order to do that, it has to use strong language to express the outrage a young woman feels."

The poem was written by Jody Caravaglia of New York when she was 15. The collection has sold 40,000 copies and is on the shelves of 3,500 libraries, according to the librarian's supporters.

Rural ulcers bad as city's

By Nancy Shulins
Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Stress-ridden city folk who move to the country may discover that even rural life can produce ulcers, headaches and insomnia, a Vermont psychiatrist says.

"The isolation and loneliness cause depressions and fears," said Dr. Elizabeth Forsberg of Montpelier. "You see the signs — the headaches, stomach aches, heart palpitations, the incredible stress. It settles in the muscles and creates all types of physical problems."

The problem is most apparent among young people and women, and most prevalent in winter, Dr. Forsberg said.

She said she remembered coming to Vermont from Germany in 1962, settling in a farmhouse in Underhill and finding it difficult to meet others in the town of 1,100.

Some Vermonters compound the stress by suffering it stoically, she said.

"In Europe, it seems, people were more able to hit back in a positive way. Here, people keep smiling, even when they are in such pain."

The problem often extends to children, Dr. Forsberg said.

"They go home from school on the bus. They live far away from other youngsters. Their parents may be very good to them, but it is not the same as having other children as playmates."

The onset of winter, when isolation often intensifies, is one of the most trying times for Vermonters, she says. "There is a fear of being trapped, a fear of panic. There are suicide attempts."

To combat the problem of stress in the country, Dr. Forsberg has developed "relaxation therapy," which combines aspects of yoga, breath control and body movements. Relaxing the body helps to relax the mind, she says.

Dual careers demand more from spouses

By Ann Blackman
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Partners in two-career marriages often have more demanding problems than those in marriages where the husband is the breadwinner, a University of Pennsylvania psychiatrist said Saturday.

But two-career marriages often have more rewards: personal, professional and financial.

plumber and buying toilet paper.

"At night," she said, "both partners are exhausted and don't have much emotional strength for each other or the children, much less friends."

However, said Dr. Berman, who is married to a psychiatrist, couples in two-career marriages experience more excitement together.

"In general, both are interesting people," she said. "The husband has fewer financial worries and a wife he can share more things with."

Dr. Berman was speaking at the beginning of a two-day seminar here on the "Modern Two-Career Marriage" sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania Department of Psychiatry. Another such conference is scheduled for Palm Beach, Fla., in December.

Eight couples, mostly from the New York-New Jersey area, paid $250 per person to listen to lectures and participate in small discussion groups on the problems they encounter.

The seminar was led by Dr. Berman; her husband, Dr. Perry A. Berman, who counsels adults and couples; Dr. Howard Baker, who directs student medical health services at Drexel University in Philadelphia; and his wife, Margaret Baker, who has a doctorate in psychology, teaches and counsels families.

Ellen Berman said people who get involved in two-career marriages tend to have a lot of energy, intelligence and a strong desire to be perfect.

She said: "They feel, 'Not only should I be perfect, but everyone associated with me should be — my partner, my children, my house, my dog.' They serve artichokes with hollandaise sauce, not melted butter, even if that's what their 6-year-old requests."

She defined a career as an occupation that takes a lot of a person's time and energy, that follows a developmental sequence and becomes more complicated rather than less.

"A career is going somewhere and usually yields money, fame or recognition in the community," she said.

She said research shows that women in two-career marriages were often only children or lonely children who had older siblings or who were sick and received a lot of attention.

She said the women often had mothers who were career women, or very career-oriented fathers and frustrated mothers.

Suspended archbishop tours N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — The leader of a dissident Roman Catholic faction, suspended from his functions as archbishop of Tulle in France and threatened with excommunication by Pope Paul VI, went sightseeing Saturday in Manhattan.

Marcel Lefebvre, who has defied the Vatican by saying Mass in Latin and refusing to recognize a new ecumenical liturgy, strolled the streets of Rockefeller Center and took a quick look at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

He indicated, over a hamburger at a 51st Street bar and grill, that he still intends to dedicate the new U.S. headquarters of his organization, the Society of St. Pius X, in Oyster Bay Cove today.

The Most Rev. John McGann, bishop of Rockville Centre, wrote Lefebvre a letter forbidding him to hold services in that diocese, which includes Oyster Bay Cove, but the suspended archbishop flew here from Switzerland Friday in defiance of the order.

His society claims 50,000 members in Europe and 10,000 in the United States.

The pope suspended Lefebvre last year after he defied an order to close a seminary in Ecône, Switzerland, where he has been training young men in the Tridentine rite. He continued to say Mass in Latin and administer the sacraments.

Last June 26, in disobedience of a papal command, he ordained 14 priests.

NEW YORK — Advertising researchers are borrowing techniques from sophisticated lie detectors in an attempt to find out what consumers really want — rather than what they say they want.

"People often cannot say what they believe. They don't understand themselves what influences them," says Ron Nelson of the Consumer Response Corp., which specializes in voice pitch analysis.

Brain-wave analyses and nervous-system responses are also being used in marketing surveys.

Consumers 'wired' for the truth

The techniques are used to judge an audience's reactions to pilot commercials or proposed products. The tests ordinarily take place in special "testing lounges," set up in shopping areas.

The findings are used to help companies decide how to develop their advertising campaigns or whether a market exists for a new product.

Company officials say the system evolved from research done for law enforcement and government security agencies to find more reliable methods of lie detection.

Nelson, who is vice president in charge of the voice stress program, says it is used to eliminate polite "lip service" responses and to find out how strongly people really feel about what they tell researchers.

In voice pitch research, for example, tape-recorded replies are analyzed by computers to determine what levels of involuntary changes in voice pitch occur as answers are given to an interviewer about a commercial or product.

The greater the change in voice pitch, the greater the commitment to the answer, says Nelson.

In one case, people were quizzed about their attitudes toward violent television. An overwhelming majority said there is too much violence on TV, and voice pitch analysis showed that almost all were truly committed to that view.

But of the 63 percent who said they avoided watching violent shows, "very few people actually meant what they said," Nelson said.

Sidney Weinstein of the Neurocommunications Research Laboratories in Danbury, Conn., is a specialist in brain-wave analysis. To provide an example, he said a man who watched a chewing gum commercial featuring a model in a skimpy bikini told researchers he found it boring.

"But his recordings were jumping all over the place," Weinstein said. "People will tell you things that physiological tests just don't reflect."

tion, guesses that about 10 percent of all agencies may be using some type of physical measurement in their research.

But claims for such methods do not sit well with others in the advertising industry.

"I don't believe any amount of physiological measurement can tell you about a person's state of mind, or how he feels," says Jerry Ohlsten, of Cunningham & Walsh.

"Especially when you are dealing with a product that is not a major commitment. How excited can someone get about a type of hand lotion or hair spray?"

Ogling ode stirs battle for book

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

BOSTON — School officials in a town outside Boston have decided that a poem about men ogling women on the street is not fit for high schoolers to read — even though it was written by a 15-year-old girl.

The high school's librarian has taken the issue to court, claiming that officials do not have the right to remove a book from the library after it is accepted by a librarian.

And students and parents have been packing the federal district court here since the trial started Wednesday.

The controversy began last July, when the School Committee in Chelsea, on the northern edge of Boston, was informed of the content of a 21-line poem called "The City to a Young Girl." The poem, part of an anthology of verse by teen-agers, describes in earthy language the girl's disgust at being appraised as a "piece of meat" by men on the street.

In one passage, she describes the city as:

"One million horny lip-smacking men."

"Screaming for my body."

The committee ordered librarian Sonja Coleman to clip that poem from the book or remove the entire book, entitled "Male and Female Under 18."

She removed the book, but with some supporters formed a group called the Right to Read

Defense Committee, which asked the federal court to restore the book to the shelves.

In August, Judge Joseph L. Tauro ordered the book temporarily put back in the library. But he said students who wanted to read it would have to show a note of parental approval.

The non-jury trial, which began last Wednesday, is expected to end this week.

Andrew Quigley, Chelsea's former mayor who is head of the School Committee, testified that the poem is "tasteless, filthy trash."

A girl reading that without proper instruction could arrive at the opinion that every man walking down the street is considering her only as a sex object to be violated," he said. "It is not good education, and it is not something to be found in the halls of a school."

The librarian, however, said, "It has definite value. It's trying to make a point — the dehumanizing and humiliating situation of being viewed by some men as a sex object, a piece of meat."

"In order to do that, it has to use strong language to express the outrage a young woman feels."

The poem was written by Jody Caravaglia of New York when she was 15. The collection has sold 40,000 copies and is on the shelves of 3,500 libraries, according to the librarian's supporters.

Dirty deeds at the Yard

Scotland Yard, home of the indefatigable trench-coated detective, is in trouble, its own detectives under suspicion. A number have been convicted of taking bribes and more have resigned or have been fired. Now there's a new commander, and he may have to concentrate as much on his own force as on the criminal element outside.

By Ed Blanche

LONDON (AP) — Venerable, long-respected Scotland Yard, home of Britain's super sleuths, has acquired a tarnished image. It is now better known as the home of the bent copper — London slang for the corrupt cop.

Where the trench-coated detective of fiction and film inched his way through a thick London fog to get his man, now the Yard's detectives track their own. And hear this. One investigation into police corruption was headed by a man who turned out to be the mastermind of the ring.

For the past eight years, since corruption at the Yard was first uncovered, the London public has been exposed to a series of trials. A number of top commanders have been convicted, mostly for taking bribes from criminals, and 400 lower-ranking officers have been fired or have resigned.

The London Metropolitan Police, official home of the Yard, remains the only force in Britain immune to outside inspection. Scotland Yard is virtually a law unto itself, guarding its operational independence even in its time of adversity.

That independence is now in the hands of David McNea, a 51-year-old nicknamed "The Hammer" for his strikes against the underworld. But McNea, who takes over from Sir Robert Mark, must follow Mark's path of coming down hardest on the Yard's own men.

Mark, who initiated a series of sweeping reforms, warned before he retired: "Many other police officers, very senior ones, knew what was going on, may have been part of what was going on... and are still serving today."

McNea is following Mark's mandate, replacing many chiefs with officers who played prominent roles in purging the corrupt. But whether he has succeeded is another question, both for the British public and within the 21,000-member force.

Since the Times of London first exposed three detectives taking bribes from known criminals in November 1969, a score of London detectives, some of them top men at the Yard, have been convicted. More than 400 officers have been fired or have resigned in disgrace.

Among the senior officers jailed for up to 12 years are Kenneth Drury, a onetime police commander who headed the Yard's crack gangbusting Flying Squad, for taking bribes from pornography racketeer Jim Humphreys; Commander Wally Virgo, former chief of the Yard's 3,500 detectives, holder of the Queen's Police Medal, highest award an officer can win, and 25 commendations, for taking money from pornographers; Chief Superintendent Bill Moody, former head of the Yard's obscene publications squad, known as "the Dirty Squad," and one of the masterminds of the corruption network.

Moody once headed an investigation into police graft. It failed to turn up any evidence.

The corruption scandals shattered the myth of the Yard's integrity and honesty and led the bookish, Mozart-loving Mark to initiate major reforms that broke the long-standing power and virtual independence of the agency's detective chiefs.

He also set up an internal investigation bureau to root out crooked cops, and a police complaints bureau that for the first time included civilians.

Brian McConnell, a veteran British crime reporter, says the complaints bureau will be effective in fighting corruption because it will make it hard for police officers to cover up graft.

But, he warns: "No one can any longer believe that the corruption was carried on without the knowledge and connivance of very senior police officers."

The Times says public suspicion still lingers and asks: "How was it that the scale of corruption revealed in the trials went unnoticed for so many years by those Yard men who ranked higher than Bill Moody, Wally Virgo and Ken Drury?"

It adds: "The biggest scandal of all still needs to be investigated."

Reporters Barry Cox, John Shirley and Martin Short, who spent three years investigating police corruption, claim in a recent book, "The Fall of Scotland Yard."

"There are still men high up in the reformed Yard who are lucky to be there."

They did not name them, but McNea's shakeup was seen, in part, as his answer to the charges that top Yard officers at least knew about the graft and did nothing to stop it.

There are signs that "bent coppers" who evaded earlier purges are still active.

Three members of the Yard's Drug Squad, which figured in one of the corruption trials a few years ago, are suspended from duty after investigators disclosed a half-ton of marijuana seized in police raids had been resold by detectives.

One of the suspended officers, Chief Inspector Tony Rich, has won a fistful of commendations and is one of the top three Drug Squad men.

Rich, 34, was a crack undercover agent who broke up three major dope rings and won the British Empire Medal in 1968 for disarming a drug-crazed gunman.

Consumers 'wired' for the truth

NEW YORK — Advertising researchers are borrowing techniques from sophisticated lie detectors in an attempt to find out what consumers really want — rather than what they say they want.

"People often cannot say what they believe. They don't understand themselves what influences them," says Ron Nelson of the Consumer Response Corp., which specializes in voice pitch analysis.

Brain-wave analyses and nervous-system responses are also being used in marketing surveys.

The techniques are used to judge an audience's reactions to pilot commercials or proposed products. The tests ordinarily take place in special "testing lounges," set up in shopping areas.

The findings are used to help companies decide how to develop their advertising campaigns or whether a market exists for a new product.

Company officials say the system evolved from research done for law enforcement and government security agencies to find more reliable methods of lie detection.

Nelson, who is vice president in charge of the voice stress program, says it is used to eliminate polite "lip service" responses and to find out how strongly people really feel about what they tell researchers.

In voice pitch research, for example, tape-recorded replies are analyzed by computers to determine what levels of involuntary changes in voice pitch occur as answers are given to an interviewer about a commercial or product.

The greater the change in voice pitch, the greater the commitment to the answer, says Nelson.

In one case, people were quizzed about their attitudes toward violent television. An overwhelming majority said there is too much violence on TV, and voice pitch analysis showed that almost all were truly committed to that view.

But of the 63 percent who said they avoided watching violent shows, "very few people actually meant what they said," Nelson said.

Sidney Weinstein of the Neurocommunications Research Laboratories in Danbury, Conn., is a specialist in brain-wave analysis. To provide an example, he said a man who watched a chewing gum commercial featuring a model in a skimpy bikini told researchers he found it boring.

"But his recordings were jumping all over the place," Weinstein said. "People will tell you things that physiological tests just don't reflect."

Edgar Rolls, president of the Advertising Research Foundation, guesses that about 10 percent of all agencies may be using some type of physical measurement in their research.

But claims for such methods do not sit well with others in the advertising industry.

"I don't believe any amount of physiological measurement can tell you about a person's state of mind, or how he feels," says Jerry Ohlsten, of Cunningham & Walsh.

"Especially when you are dealing with a product that is not a major commitment. How excited can someone get about a type of hand lotion or hair spray?"

Prisons are for punishing

'Rehabilitation' idea on way out?

By W. Dale Nelson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The rehabilitation of criminals, a key aim of America's prison system for much of this century, would be all but abandoned as an objective of sentencing under a new criminal code Congress is considering.

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved the code last week. Floor action is expected early next year.

The bill calls for sentencing guidelines specifying that criminals should not be sent to prison for rehabilitation "other than in an exceptional case" in which prison was the only place the defendant could get treatment or training.

IN SUCH instances the judge would have to explain his or her reasons.

Conservatives have long argued that rehabilitation, a concept that grew out of turn-of-the-century reform movements, was a waste of time and that prisons should be used for punishment.

Recently, lawmakers and penologists have joined in the criticism, arguing that when judges see rehabilitation as a goal of sentencing they may discriminate against defendants who seem least likely to be rehabilitated.

There is increasing support for what Andrew von Hirsch of the graduate school of criminal justice at Rutgers University describes as "the moral notion of just deserts" — that a criminal should get the punishment he deserves.

The idea (of just deserts) was long out of fashion," von Hirsch wrote recently in Current History. "Deserved punishment was seen as vindictive and unscientific."

This view still has support. Yale Simons, a Phoenix, Ariz., prison reformer and retired businessman who met with Judiciary Committee members while they were considering the bill, said in a telephone interview, "Prisons should be for rehabilitation, but we've got to find a different way than the way we are doing it. I think it's crazy to say they should just be for punishment."

On the other hand, von Hirsch said the Committee for the Study of Incarceration, a foundation-supported panel of which he was executive director, concluded that giving criminals their deserts "is not only rational but essential to justice."

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., told the Judiciary Committee last week that he agreed with von Hirsch. Biden recalled his experiences as a lawyer in Wilmington, Del., defending youths.

"I knew every time I stood up, if I was standing before a judge and that kid had an Afro and he slouched and was wearing a dashiki and did not have a job, that he was going to get it," Biden said.

"On the other hand, if I stood up with a kid from my neighborhood who had a coat and tie on with short cut hair — which may have been just recently cut — and was clean shaven and stood there and his father said that he could go to work in his company, that kid was not going to get the same sentence for the exact same offense."

During the committee's deliberations, the idea of rehabilitation as a basis for sentencing also was challenged from such diverse quarters as the U.S. Bureau of Prisons and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Testifying Oct. 5 before the subcommittee on penitentiaries and corrections, Bureau of Prisons Director Norman Carlson said the bureau "made the conscious decision some time ago to abandon the medical model of diagnosis and coerced treatment of prison inmates."

"While we know rehabilitation can take place in a prison setting, we do not know how it takes place, when it takes place, if it takes place," Carlson said.

The ACLU, in a memorandum to committee members, said, "Only criteria related to the seriousness of the offense should be used in setting sentences. This does not affect the use of rehabilitation programs for prisoners, but would merely preclude incarceration for the purpose of rehabilitation."

Biden and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., met with Simons and Monty McKenzie, a former convict who is associated with Simons in the O.K. Community, a Phoenix-based organization seeking to improve prison rehabilitation.

Recalling the conversation, Biden said traditional rehabilitation "sentenced criminal defendants to programs that they did not want to be any part of within the prison system. They did not want to be subjected to them. They were humiliated by them. It did not do them any good, but they knew that they had to be involved in them and they had to play the game in order to be considered to be model prisoners."

DeConcini said McKenzie had "told us about all the ones that were lousy" but said rehabilitation programs should nevertheless be available.

Biden attempted to have rehabilitation taken out of the new code altogether, so that judges and parole officers could not consider it as a goal even in exceptional circumstances.

His motion failed by a vote of 10 to 2, with only Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., supporting him.

The majority agreed with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who said, "We just do not want to slam the door closed."

Bereaved son guns for father

CEDARTOWN, Ga. (AP) — Robert Godfrey, who allegedly killed his wife and mother-in-law with a shotgun in September, found himself at the other end of a gun when his son came to see him in jail, police said.

Godfrey's 20-year-old son Gary, armed with a 30.06 deer rifle, walked into the county jail where his father was being held on murder charges Friday, police said.

He surprised the lone jailer, ordered him to unlock the cell block, "and all indications were that he was going to shoot his father," said Polk County Sheriff Seals W. Swafford.

But a deputy who had gotten wind of young Godfrey's alleged intent drove to the jail, saw Gary standing with his father outside the jail cell, and fired twice, police said.

Gary Godfrey was hit in both legs and never fired. He was charged with aggravated assault and was listed in good condition Saturday at Floyed Hospital in nearby Rome.

AFTER the shooting of Mildred Godfrey and her mother Sept. 20, neighbors and family members said they couldn't explain the incident. Police described it only as a "family quarrel."

Dirty deeds at the Yard

Scotland Yard, home of the indefatigable trench-coated detective, is in trouble, its own detectives under suspicion. A number have been convicted of taking bribes and more have resigned or have been fired. Now there's a new commander, and he may have to concentrate as much on his own force as on the criminal element outside.

By Ed Blanche

LONDON (AP) — Venerable, long-respected Scotland Yard, home of Britain's super sleuths, has acquired a tarnished image. It is now better known as the home of the bent copper — London slang for the corrupt cop.

Where the trench-coated detective of fiction and film inched his way through a thick London fog to get his man, now the Yard's detectives track their own. And hear this. One investigation into police corruption was headed by a man who turned out to be the mastermind of the ring.

For the past eight years, since corruption at the Yard was first uncovered, the London public has been exposed to a series of trials. A number of top commanders have been convicted, mostly for taking bribes from criminals, and 400 lower-ranking officers have been fired or have resigned.

The London Metropolitan Police, official home of the Yard, remains the only force in Britain immune to outside inspection. Scotland Yard is virtually a law unto itself, guarding its operational independence even in its time of adversity.

That independence is now in the hands of David McNea, a 51-year-old nicknamed "The Hammer" for his strikes against the underworld. But McNea, who takes over from Sir Robert Mark, must follow Mark's path of coming down hardest on the Yard's own men.

Mark, who initiated a series of sweeping reforms, warned before he retired: "Many other police officers, very senior ones, knew what was going on, may have been part of what was going on, and are still serving today."

McNea is following Mark's mandate, replacing many chiefs with officers who played prominent roles in purging the corrupt. But whether he has succeeded is another question, both for the British public and within the 21,000-member force.

Since the Times of London first exposed three detectives taking bribes from known criminals in November 1969, a score of London detectives, some of them top men at the Yard, have been convicted. More than 400 officers have been fired or have resigned in disgrace.

Among the senior officers jailed for up to 12 years are Kenneth Drury, a onetime police commander who headed the Yard's crack gangbusting Flying Squad, for taking bribes from pornography racketeer Jim Humphreys; Commander Wally Virgo, former chief of the Yard's 3,500 detectives, holder of the Queen's Police Medal, highest award an officer can win, and 25 commendations, for taking money from pornographers; Chief Superintendent Bill Moody, former head of the Yard's obscene publications squad, known as "the Dirty Squad," and one of the masterminds of the corruption network. Moody once headed an investigation into police graft. It failed to turn up any evidence.

The corruption scandals shattered the myth of the Yard's integrity and honesty and led the bookish, Mozart-loving Mark to initiate major reforms that broke the long-standing power and virtual independence of the agency's detective chiefs.

He also set up an internal investigation bureau to root out crooked cops, and a police complaints bureau that for the first time included civilians.

Brian McConnell, a veteran British crime reporter, says the complaints bureau will be effective in fighting corruption because it will make it hard for police officers to cover up graft.

But, he warns: "No one can any longer believe that the corruption was carried on without the knowledge and connivance of very senior police officers."

The Times says public suspicion still lingers and asks: "How was it that the scale of corruption revealed in the trials went unnoticed for so many years by those Yard men who ranked higher than Bill Moody, Wally Virgo and Ken Drury?"

It adds: "The biggest scandal of all still needs to be investigated."

Reporters Barry Cox, John Shirley and Martin Short, who spent three years investigating police corruption, claim in a recent book, "The Fall of Scotland Yard."

"There are still men high up in the reformed Yard who are lucky to be there."

They did not name them, but McNea's shakeup was seen, in part, as his answer to the charges that top Yard officers at least knew about the graft and did nothing to stop it.

There are signs that "bent coppers" who evaded earlier purges are still active.

Three members of the Yard's Drug Squad, which figured in one of the corruption trials a few years ago, are suspended from duty after investigators disclosed a half-ton of marijuana seized in police raids had been resold by detectives.

One of the suspended officers, Chief Inspector Tony Rich, has won a fistful of commendations and is one of the top three Drug Squad men.

Rich, 34, was a crack undercover agent who broke up three major dope rings and won the British Empire Medal in 1968 for disarming a drug-crazed gunman.

John Groves, chief of detectives in London's East End, home base for several mobs, was suspended last June after an investigation by the Yard's anti-corruption squad.

Groves was a friend of Sir Eric Miller, a property tycoon and bankroller of the ruling Labor Party, who killed himself. Miller was being investigated by the Yard's Fraud Squad, and classified police files were found in his office after his suicide.

Williams to run for city attorney; hits politicians

KENNETH WILLIAMS

Deputy City Attorney Kenneth K. Williams announced Saturday he will seek election as Long Beach city attorney next spring, saying he doesn't want the office to attract ambitious politicians without training in municipal law.

City Attorney Leonard Putnam, revealed last month he will not seek re-election on his doctor's advice. Putnam, 51, suffered a heart attack in May. He was appointed to the post in 1984 and won four elections. His term expires next May, and filing for the office opens in December.

Williams, 45, said in a press release he was announcing his candidacy early because "this is a non-partisan office without an

Williams joined the city attorney's office in 1964 after five years as a criminal and civil trial attorney for the city of Los Angeles. He lives in Belmont Shore with his wife and three children.

He said his major interests in Long Beach have been city-state tideland and oil matters, tideland boundary law, coastal zone management law, planning and environmental law, labor law, legislative affairs and oil industry tax litigation.

He said central area decay is one of the city's toughest problems.

"If we don't make downtown live and work again through renewal and restoration, the blight will spread into surrounding areas, and the increasing cost of municipal and social services will sap our resources more and more," he observed.

"A wise balance between conservation and development in the coastal areas is another real concern."

"These programs, already under way, will be in jeopardy if the city attorney's office becomes a stepping stone for passing politicians. I absolutely guarantee I will keep the city attorney's office a working office that leaves politics to the politicians."

The office has a wide range of functions involving liability, contracts and increasingly complicated state and federal regulations, he said.

No progress in Bay Area school strikes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The weekend saw the Fremont Unified School District drone past its third strike week with no settlement in sight, while the Oakland school strike completed its second day.

Oakland school officials estimated that about half of the student roster and 25 percent of the teachers were in the classrooms Friday.

This was a real turkey of a race

TURLOCK (AP) — Turkeys waddled and gobbled around an obstacle-laden course here Saturday in the Turkey Tech Grand Prix, a spoof of the nickname of the local state college.

The turkeys tried to trot around the track, urged on by frequent prods in their tail feathers by their handlers.

Some of the big birds, controlled by leashes strapped to their backs, appeared more likely to topple than trot as they wobbled on their spindly legs. Some seemed uncertain whether to go left, forward or backward.

A few just sat down as if to say the effort wasn't worth it. The prizes went to the humans for their fancy costumes. The gobblers faced the prospect of being centerpieces at Thanksgiving Day dinners less than three weeks away.

Stanislaus State College sponsored the event on its athletic field because the school is jokingly called Turkey Tech. When the 3,500-student school opened in 1960, the first classes were conducted at the county fair grounds which also was the site of an annual turkey show.

The nickname stuck despite aversion to it by some who thought the name unsuitable for a college. The school finally decided to take advantage of the nickname with some highhearted fun, said Will Keener, public information officer.

The obstacle course required the birds to go under a 3-foot-high hurdle, through a water puddle and finally over a hay-stack.

The handlers wore a variety of garish garb, including several human-size turkey suits, and that of a pilgrim.

Another man was dressed as Batman. His bird was named Cock Robin. Other turkeys bore such names as Gobbie D. Gook, Traveling Drumsticks, Leaping Gizards and the Gizzard of Oz.

One bird, named Seattle Slew, after the Triple-Crown race horse, failed to live up to his name, finishing as an also-ran.

The announcer told several hundred spectators: "If you don't think you have something to be thankful for at Thanksgiving, be thankful you're not a turkey."

Prisons are for punishing

'Rehabilitation' idea on way out?

By W. Dale Nelson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The rehabilitation of criminals, a key aim of America's prison system for much of this century, would be all but abandoned as an objective of sentencing under a new criminal code Congress is considering.

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved the code last week. Floor action is expected early next year.

The bill calls for sentencing guidelines specifying that criminals should not be sent to prison for rehabilitation "other than in an exceptional case" in which prison was the only place the defendant could get treatment or training.

IN SUCH instances the judge would have to explain his or her reasons.

Conservatives have long argued that rehabilitation, a concept that grew out of turn-of-the-century reform movements, was a waste of time and that prisons should be used for punishment.

Recently, lawmakers and penologists have joined in the criticism, arguing that when judges see rehabilitation as a goal of sentencing they may discriminate against defendants who seem least likely to be rehabilitated.

There is increasing support for what Andrew von Hirsch of the graduate school of criminal justice at Rutgers University describes as "the moral notion of just deserts" — that a criminal should get the punishment he deserves.

"The idea (of just deserts) was long out of fashion," von Hirsch wrote recently in Current History. "Deserved punishment was seen as vindictive and unscientific."

This view still has support. Yale Simons, a Phoenix, Ariz., prison reformer and retired businessman who met with Judiciary Committee members while they were considering the bill, said in a telephone interview, "Prisons should be for rehabilitation, but we've got to find a different way than the way we are doing it. I think it's crazy to say they should just be for punishment."

On the other hand, von Hirsch said the Committee for the Study of Incarceration, a foundation-supported panel of which he was executive director, concluded that giving criminals their deserts "is not only rational but

essential to justice."

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., told the Judiciary Committee last week that he agreed with von Hirsch. Biden recalled his experiences as a lawyer in Wilmington, Del., defending youths.

"I knew every time I stood up, if I was standing before a judge and that kid had an Afro and he slouched and was wearing a dashiki and did not have a job, that he was going to get it," Biden said.

"On the other hand, if I stood up with a kid from my neighborhood who had a coat and tie on with short cut hair — which may have been just recently cut — and was clean shaven and stood there and his father said that he could go to work in his company, that kid was not going to get the same sentence for the exact same offense."

During the committee's deliberations, the idea of rehabilitation as a basis for sentencing also was challenged from such diverse quarters as the U.S. Bureau of Prisons and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Testifying Oct. 5 before the subcommittee on penitentiaries and corrections, Bureau of Prisons Director Norman Carlson said the bureau "made the conscious decision some time ago to abandon the medical model of diagnosis and coerced treatment of prison inmates."

"While we know rehabilitation can take place in a prison setting, we do not know how it takes place, when it takes place, if it takes place, or why it takes place," Carlson said.

The ACLU, in a memorandum to committee members, said, "Only criteria related to the seriousness of the offense should be used in setting sentences. This does not affect the use of rehabilitation programs for prisoners, but would merely preclude incarceration for the purpose of rehabilitation."

Biden and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., met with Simons and Monty McKenzie, a former convict who is associated with Simons in the O.K. Community, a Phoenix-based organization seeking to improve prison rehabilitation.

Recalling the conversation, Biden said traditional rehabilitation "sentenced criminal defendants to programs that they did not want to be any part of within the prison system. They did not want to be subjected to them. They were humiliated by them. It did not do them any good, but they knew that they had to be involved in them and they had to play the game in order to be considered to be model prisoners."

DeConcini said McKenzie had "told us about all the ones that were lousy" but said rehabilitation programs should nevertheless be available.

Biden attempted to have rehabilitation taken out of the new code altogether, so that judges and parole officers could not consider it as a goal even in exceptional circumstances.

His motion failed by a vote of 10 to 2, with only Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., supporting him.

The majority agreed with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who said, "We just do not want to slam the door closed."

Secret Witness cases summary

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 77 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $52,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the L.P.T. Secret Witness editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— Rewards totaling $1,000, including $500 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by Bill Wilkie, owner of the Sequoia Room tavern, 3844 E. Anaheim St., will be paid for information leading to the arrest and armed robbery conviction of the bandits — three men and a woman — who cleaned out the cash register while holding the bartender and six patrons at gunpoint and fled with $280 at 1:05 a.m. Oct. 15.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive George Bridgette, 31, address unknown, sought as a suspect in the mass murder of four persons in an apartment at 1018 E. 17th St. at 10:30 p.m. Sept. 4, 1977. If Bridgette is convicted of murder, the Secret Witness informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward. Killed at the apartment were Pamela Cade, 32; her daughter Chinue, 3; Luther Evans, 32, and Cristal Baxter, 23.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jerry Timothy "Timmy" Dixon, 18, of Long Beach, shot to death in the apartment of a friend at 2144 E. 17th St. on the afternoon of June 24, 1977.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Bulmaro Amaya, 25, of Anaheim, shot to death in bed at his home in the early hours of May 13, 1977, by an intruder who also shot Amaya's 3-year-old son, Mario, leaving the child paralyzed.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Larry Sams, 33, found shot to death in Harbor Park, Pacific Coast Highway and Vermont Avenue in Harbor City, on the early evening of March 6, 1977.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Rudy Unzueta, of Compton, shot to death by one of a youthful group while he was walking with his young niece in the 100 block of Bennett Street in Compton at 9 p.m. on Jan. 1, 1977.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jack Adamson, 49-year-old seaman beaten to death with a tire iron during a street robbery on Anaheim Street near Mint Avenue in Wilmington at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 17, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Lynch, 69-year-old owner of Don's Turf Motel at 4732 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, shot to death during a holdup at the motel at 11:05 p.m. on July 20, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

How you can become a paid Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts. Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone (213) 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

Man seeking revenge for sister's rape jailed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police arrested a man who said was bent on avenging the suicide death of his sister who was allegedly raped by a gang of bikers.

Police Capt. Donald Forster said Rosemary Baker, 17, was raped by two bikers Oct. 24, and two nights later she went to the beach and put a bullet through her brain.

Thursday, San Jose police put out an all-points bulletin for her brother, Dewey C. Baker, 25, who they said was driving a stolen car and armed with a shotgun and six rifles, gunning for the alleged rapists.

Hatfield-McCoy home tough on law

KERMIT, W. Va. (AP) — The mayor of this small stateline town renewed a promise Saturday to wipe out lawlessness. The pledge came as Kermit's police chief lay recovering from a bullet wound he suffered two hours after being hired.

Mayor Arthur Crigger said law enforcement has been almost nonexistent for five years in the town. He said drugs and prostitution plague Kermit, which sits on the border with Kentucky. And the border itself in this area that once saw bitter fighting between the Hatfield and McCoy clans is a major problem, Crigger said.

Martin County, on the other side of the narrow Tug Fork River, is dry. Kentuckians in search of a drink "can just run across the bridge and they can just duck back into Kentucky and you can't touch them," Crigger said.

Friday night some of the townsfolk took what they thought would be a step towards solving the problem. They hired Ben Johnson, 43, to be police chief of the town of 1,100. Johnson is a former state trooper. He also was a member of the police department in Fort Gay.

After the meeting, Johnson went on a patrol with another member of the department, Walter Johnson, 57, who is no relation. They went into Wilma's Friendly Tavern in downtown Kermit to quell a disturbance, police said. They then stepped outside the bar and, without warning, were shot, according to police and a witness.

Two men then fled to an upper floor of the tavern where they were flushed out by police using tear gas. Charged with two counts each of felonious assault with intent to commit murder were George Carter, 37, and Charles Preece, 49.

Williams to run for city attorney; hits politicians

KENNETH WILLIAMS

Deputy City Attorney Kenneth K. Williams announced Saturday he will seek election as Long Beach city attorney next spring, saying he doesn't want the office to attract ambitious politicians without training in municipal law.

City Attorney Leonard Putnam revealed last month he will not seek re-election on his doctor's advice. Putnam, 51, suffered a heart attack in May. He was appointed to the post in 1964 and won four elections. His term expires next May, and filing for the office opens in December.

Williams, 45, said in a press release he was announcing his candidacy early because "this is a non-partisan office without an

Williams joined the city attorney's office in 1964 after five years as a criminal and civil trial attorney for the city of Los Angeles. He lives in Belmont Shore with his wife and three children.

He said his major interests in Long Beach have been city-state tideland oil matters, tideland boundary law, coastal zone management law, planning and environmental law, labor law, legislative affairs and oil industry tax litigation.

He said central area decay is one of the city's toughest problems.

"If we don't make downtown live and work again through renewal and restoration, the blight will spread into surrounding areas, and the increasing cost of municipal and social services will sap our resources more and more," he observed. "A wise balance between conservation and development in the coastal areas is another real concern."

"These programs, already under way, will be in jeopardy if the city attorney's office becomes a stepping stone for passing politicians. I absolutely guarantee I will keep the city attorney's office a working office that leaves politics to the politicians."

The office has a wide range of functions involving liability, contracts and increasingly complicated state and federal regulations, he said.

No progress in Bay Area school strikes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The weekend saw the Fremont Unified School District drone past its third strike week with no settlement in sight, while the Oakland school strike completed its second day.

Oakland school officials estimated that about half of the student roster and 25 percent of the teachers were in the classrooms Friday.

This was a real turkey of a race

TURLOCK (AP) — Turkeys waddled and gobbled around an obstacle-laden course here Saturday in the Turkey Tech Grand Prix, a spoof of the nickname of the local state college.

The turkeys tried to trot around the track, urged on by frequent prods in their tail feathers by their handlers.

Some of the big birds, controlled by leashes strapped to their backs, appeared more likely to topple than trot as they wobbled on their spindly legs. Some seemed uncertain whether to go left, forward or backward.

A few just sat down as if to say the effort wasn't worth it. The prizes went to the humans for their fancy costumes. The gobblers faced the prospect of being centerpieces at Thanksgiving Day dinners less than three weeks away.

Stanislaus State College sponsored the event on its athletic field because the school is jokingly called "Turkey Tech." When the 3,500-student school opened in 1960, the first classes were conducted at the county fair grounds which also was the site of an annual turkey show.

The nickname stuck despite aversion to it by some who thought the name unsuitable for a college. The school finally decided to take advantage of the nickname with some lighthearted fun, said Will Keener, public information officer.

The obstacle course required the birds to go under a 3-foot-high hurdle, through a water puddle and finally over a hay-stack.

The handlers wore a variety of garish garb, including several human-size turkey suits, and that of a pilgrim.

Another man was dressed as Batman. His bird was named Cock Robin. Other turkeys bore such names as Gobbler D. Gook, Traveling Drumsticks, Leaping Gizards and the Gizzard of Oz.

One bird, named Seattle Slew, after the Triple-Crown race horse, failed to live up to his name, finishing as an also-ran.

Battle for Hughes millions moves to court Monday

By Wallace Turner
New York Times Service

Nevada jury to weigh 'Mormon will' validity

SAN FRANCISCO — Nineteen months after the death of Howard R. Hughes, the struggle over his estate, one of the largest ever amassed by an American, will go to trial before a jury in Las Vegas on Monday, with a second, competing trial to open a week later in Houston.

At stake are hundreds of millions of dollars in tax revenue, professional reputations, the personal power accruing to those who control the huge estate and the jobs and futures of 10,000 employees of the various Hughes enterprises.

There are two key questions. The first will be addressed by both courts: Is a will offered for probate in Las Vegas a forgery concocted by a ring of thieves, or did Hughes draw up in his own hand on March 19, 1968, a document distributing his estate?

THE SECOND question will be of importance only to the Texas probate court: Was Hughes "domiciled" in Texas to such a degree that it can claim inheritance taxes on his estate, or was he, as his estate managers contend, domiciled in Nevada, which has no inheritance tax?

The tax consequences of that decision will be negligible, since the taxes that Texas would collect would be offset against the 77 percent federal inheritance tax. But other consequences affecting the relations of the heirs could flow from a finding in favor of Texas.

Hughes left Texas, his birthplace, as a young man. While he never lived there again, he almost always gave a Houston office building as his permanent address, and in his last years his employees made inquiries about buying a condominium in Houston.

He died on April 5, 1976, on the way to a Houston hospital. Since late 1970, he lived in one hotel after another in the Bahamas, Nicaragua, Canada, England and Mexico.

The size of the estate he left is unclear. In Hughes's lifetime, his associates seemed to inflate it to $2 billion. After his death, with a large tax bill in the offing, the estate managers commissioned Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith to appraise his holdings. The appraisal — $168 million — was greeted derisively.

Sources familiar with Hughes's affairs say that he died with a liquid portfolio of $250 million. On the public record was his ownership of five hotels and seven casinos, plus tens of thousands of acres of land in Nevada.

He owned 1,300 acres of prime real estate in Los Angeles, the last major open tract in that area. He also owned Hughes Air West, Hughes Helicopter and various other properties, among them more than a dozen jets and the old wooden airplane, HK1 — the "Spruce Goose" — that he built and flew once.

Of the many mysteries of Hughes's life and death, none is deeper than his apparent failure to sign the formal will that would have left his fortune to the Howard Hughes Medical Institute of Miami, Fla. He said repeatedly that he intended this bequest to be made, but he apparently did not make it.

A NATIONWIDE search last year produced an unsigned copy of such a will and work papers, but not a signed document.

On the afternoon of April 27, 1976, a few days after a burst of publicity about the lack of a will, two sealed envelopes, one inside the other, were found in the Salt Lake City headquarters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

Inside the envelopes was the handwritten document on yellow legal pad paper that is now known as the "Mormon will." It is avidly supported as authentic by some who would benefit from its provisions, and it is denounced as a forgery by some who would gain if there were no will.

Only this will was offered for probate, although "Hughes wills" proliferated that spring. Two legal attacks, called "will contests," were filed against the Mormon document.

One was filed by Annette Lummis, Hughes's 88-year-old maternal aunt, who is his closest surviving relative. The other was filed by three granddaughters of Rupert Hughes, the late novelist, who was Hughes's paternal uncle.

Trial of both contests will begin at 10 a.m. Monday in Clark County Court-house in Las Vegas before District Judge Keith Hayes and a jury of eight. It will continue for several months.

Courthouse employees refer to the proceeding as

"that circus," in part for the following reasons:

— Melvin Dumar, who said that he had found the will and explained his being named a beneficiary by saying he once picked up Hughes in the desert and gave the industrialist a ride, has given so many versions of the matter that Judge Hayes once said in court, "I think you're lying." That day, the judge allowed a television broadcast from court, so potential jurors were exposed to his views about Dumar.

— Another key witness, LeVane Forsythe of Anchorage, Alaska, said that he left the will for Dumar to find and described himself as a "Hughes bag man." In 1970, Forsythe testified that he had seen Hughes's secret nighttime departure from the Desert Inn in Las Vegas. The judge before whom the evidence was given singled out Forsythe's testimony as being outrageously false.

— Forsythe produced

some months ago recordings of his telephone talks with Harold Rhoden, the lawyer who is substitute executor of the will. Rhoden could be heard to say that Hayes favored authentication of the will because the judge is a Mormon. Hayes was then ordered off the case, but the Nevada Supreme Court directed that he be reinstated.

Rhoden became substitute executor by appointment of Noah Dietrich, 88, Hughes's chief lieutenant until they broke relations 20 years ago. With Rhoden as his lawyer, Dietrich sued Hughes at least three times after their split.

YOU WILL STOP SMOKING DECEMBER 16

Ralph Story, Los Angeles, California

After 35 years of smoking every day, I am now a non-smoker. It required nine evenings of my time, six months cigarette-money, and my honest resolve to stop smoking. The rest of the credit goes to SMOKENDERS. They literally taught me how NOT to smoke! And together, we did it easily, comfortably, intelligently and effectively.

Friends tell me I look better. I know I feel better. And I think better, work better and play (tennis) better... and longer! But most important, I am not going to smoke again... or do anything else that is harmful to me, any more. And that is a very big positive change in my whole life, thanks to SMOKENDERS.

That is why I enthusiastically recommend SMOKENDERS. And that is the very first personal endorsement of any product or service I have ever given.

Sincerely,

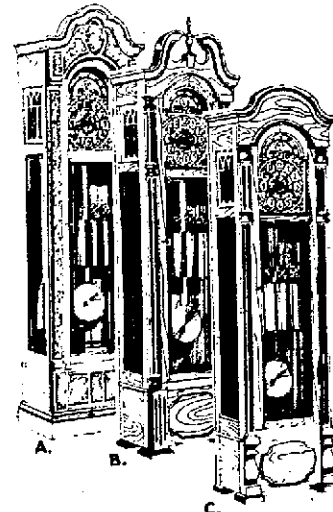

Ralph Story

Secret Witness cases summary

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 77 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $52,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.T. Secret Witness editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— Rewards totaling $1,000, including $500 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by Bill Wilkie, owner of the Sequoia Room tavern, 3844 E. Anaheim St., will be paid for information leading to the arrest and armed robbery conviction of the bandits — three men and a woman — who cleaned out the cash register while holding the bartender and six patrons at gunpoint and fled with $280 at 1:05 a.m. Oct. 15.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive George Bridgette, 31, address unknown, sought as a suspect in the mass murder of four persons in an apartment at 1018 E. 17th St. at 10:30 p.m. Sept. 4, 1977. If Bridgette is convicted of murder, the Secret Witness informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward. Killed at the apartment were Pamela Cade, 32; her daughter, Chinue, 3; Luther Evans, 32, and Cristal Baxter, 23.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jerry Timothy "Timmy" Dixon, 18, of Long Beach, shot to death in the apartment of a friend at 2184 E. 17th St. on the afternoon of June 24, 1977.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Bulmaro Amaya, 25, of Anaheim, shot to death in bed at his home in the early hours of May 13, 1977, by an intruder who also shot Amaya's 3-year-old son, Mario, leaving the child paralyzed.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Larry Sams, 33, found shot to death in Harbor Park, Pacific Coast Highway and Vermont Avenue in Harbor City, on the early evening of March 6, 1977.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Rudy Unzueta, of Compton, shot to death by one of a youthful group while he was walking with his young niece in the 100 block of Bennett Street in Compton at 9 p.m. on Jan. 1, 1977.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jack Adamson, 49-year-old seaman beaten to death with a tire iron during a street robbery on Anaheim Street near Flint Avenue in Wilmington at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 17, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Lynch, 69-year-old owner of Don's Turf Motel at 4732 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, shot to death during a holdup at the motel at 11:05 p.m. on July 20, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

How you can become a paid Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts. Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone (213) 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

Man seeking revenge for sister's rape jailed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police arrested a man said was bent on killing the suicide death of his sister who was allegedly raped by a gang of bikers.

Police Capt. Donald Taylor said Rosemary Baker, 17, was raped by two bikers Oct. 24, and two nights later she went to the beach and put a bullet through her brain.

Thursday, San Jose police put out an all-points bulletin for her brother, Dewey C. Baker, 25, who they said was driving a stolen car and armed with a shotgun and six rifles, gunning for the alleged rapists.

Hatfield-McCoy home tough on law

KERMIT, W.Va. (AP) — The mayor of this small stateline town renewed a promise Saturday to wipe out lawlessness. The pledge came as Kermit's police chief lay recovering from a bullet wound he suffered two hours after being hired.

Mayor Arthur Crigger said law enforcement has been almost nonexistent for five years in the town. He said drugs and prostitution plague Kermit, which sits on the border with Kentucky. And the border itself in this area that once saw bitter fighting between the Hatfield and McCoy clans is a major problem, Crigger said.

Martin County, on the other side of the narrow Tug Fork River, is dry. Kentuckians in search of a drink "can just run across the bridge and they can just duck back into Kentucky and you can't touch them," Crigger said.

Friday night some of the townsfolk took what they thought would be a step towards solving the problem. They hired Ben Johnson, 43, to be police chief of the town of 1,100. Johnson is a former state trooper. He also was a member of the police department in Fort Gay.

After the meeting, Johnson went on a patrol with another member of the department, Walter Johnson, 57, who is no relation. They went into Wilma's Friendly Tavern in downtown Kermit to quell a disturbance, police said. They then stepped outside the bar and, without warning, were shot, according to police and a witness.

Two men then fled to an upper floor of the tavern where they were flushed out by police using tear gas. Charged with two counts each of felonious assault with intent to commit murder were George Carter, 37, and Charles Preece, 49.

TM 'fliers'? The imagination soars

By Kay Bartlett
AP News Features Writer

SOUTH FALLSBURG, N.Y. — They talk about smooth lifts and bumpy landings as might pilot trainees, stewardesses and hang-glider addicts. But this is at the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment, a handsome campus of the transcendental meditation movement, and "they" are advanced disciples who claim they can fly — levitate — with mind power as the sole propellant.

"We are in the beginning stages of flying," says John Konhaus, acting director of the TM movement in the United States. "It comes in stages. At first it looks like they're hopping like frogs. Then they become lighter and lighter as growth of consciousness develops."

SOME devoted followers think the movement's credibility will be badly strained by the levitation claims. There's skepticism within TM as well as quick acceptance.

Joseph and Devanie Wagner are meditators. She says, "I have no doubt that I will leave the ground." Her husband, a systems analyst for a research firm, says the whole business is a hoax.

Mrs. Wagner hasn't seen the flying but has heard it. "I saw a lot of them take pillows and foam rubber, and I stuck around by the door. I heard a lot of knocking and thudding."

The TM levitators assert they can rise one or two feet from the full lotus position with the left ankle on top of the right thigh and vice versa, and then move forward three, six, maybe 10 feet.

COULD a skilled gymnast perform the feat? "No way," says Dick Mulvihill, director of the National Academy of Gymnasts in Eugene, Ore. "With the full lotus, there's no way to gain thrust."

In addition to the beginning, or hopping stages, TMers talk of reports about initiates actually hovering with greater mastery over gravity.

For now, the TMers tell but don't show. With one exception, the results left outsiders and some insiders unimpressed.

They're also buying foam rubber by the truck load.

"At this stage, we have most control in taking off," says flier Gale Merman, secretary to magician Doug Henning. "Landings tend to be rough."

Says Allen Solof, a daily flier and one of 450 TM executive governors in the United States: "There is a great deal of group consciousness. If one person begins to fly, it starts the other people up. It's like popcorn. Once it goes, they all start going."

The transcendental meditation movement has spent 20 years establishing credibility. Now, some followers believe it is being threatened by a new claim. A claim which devotees are willing to discuss but not document. That they defy gravity. Fly.

THIS PICTURE, provided by the Transcendental Meditation movement, purportedly shows a devotee in flight. Claim of mastery over gravity is widely scoffed at outside the movement, and many within are afraid the claim will harm their credibility.

KONHAUS runs the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment near this Catskills community. The guests usually are serious professional men and women. The men wear three-piece suits, the women afternoon apparel or party dresses. The atmosphere is serene, the meals vegetarian and those who smoke must do so outside.

Visitors are welcome to see the flying rooms — one for men and one for women. The floors are covered with foam rubber, and there's more foam rubber stacked in the hallways.

Konhaus says he believes the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the guru of the movement who lives in Switzerland, eventually will allow a demonstration that will persuade the skeptic.

"We don't want to create a circus atmosphere," says Konhaus. "Our people aren't circus performers. The more serious a person is about gaining enlightenment, the less likely it is that he or she would wish to demonstrate."

"Enlightenment completely overshadows the flying part," says Sherry Burns, another TM executive governor. "The point is gaining enlightenment, and this is just a short cut. It's the bliss, the happiness that's important. That is impossible to demonstrate."

feel as if I had been asleep for eight hours."

At least one complaint regarding TM advertising has been filed. A student at the Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa, says he was told his course would take four weeks. Then he was told it would take eight.

"They promised levitation, and then halfway through they said come up with another $1,500," says Steve Rozman, an associate professor and chairman of the social science division at Tougaloo College near Jackson, Miss.

He complained to the Iowa attorney general's office and was blacklisted, he says. "They wanted me to operate on a show-my-faith basis. They told me I didn't have the proper attitude."

Julian Garrett, assistant attorney general in charge of consumer protection, says his office is investigating the TM claims but progress is slow. "We're inclined to think this is a very questionable claim, but it's a little difficult to get students to talk about it."

KONHAUS says the advertising since has been toned down. "We're like any business. We use our advertising to attract the public." Though flying is a by-product, it does make people take notice, maybe even sign up.

Rozman was soured by his own experience, but he doesn't discount the possibility that "something — like flying — is going on."

"There are too many reports from Switzerland. I don't link TM with fraud, but I think it's become overly commercialized. The movement is badly in need of money."

Others connected with the TM movement are more upset.

Patricia Carrington, psychologist, meditator and author of "Freedom in Meditation," wishes the movement would give a proper demonstration or quit talking about levitation.

"If you're serious about something, you must permit a controlled observation for the scientific community," says Dr. Carrington. "The TM movement has been a very conservative one up to this point. They did a world of good in spreading the word about the benefits of meditation. This is an about-switch."

"EVEN Uri Geller allows himself to be studied. I am just bewildered by these claims," Dr. Carrington is afraid that what she considers the proven benefits of meditation will be undermined by the levitation claims.

Actually, the levitators did "show" once — last May at Iowa's MIU, which used to be Parsons College before the college went out of business.

Twenty-two persons — two of them non-meditators — were invited to the demonstration conducted by four young men. It got mixed reviews. Some of the meditators thought they saw levitation. Others thought they saw some hopping around that they figured a good athlete might be able to duplicate.

NO PICTURES were allowed, although the TM people are ready to hand out pictures of levitators. The press generally has taken these with the seriousness reserved for the latest photo of the Loch Ness Monster, Bigfoot and similar mysteries.

Dean Gabbert, editor of the Fairfield Ledger, was one of the two non-meditators allowed at the demonstration. He concluded his article this way:

"As a reporter, I am struck by the paradox of intelligent, articulate, even brilliant people who are attempting to deal credibly with an incredible subject."

"Based solely on Saturday's exposure, I observed one supernatural ability, which was never mentioned: belief in the unbelievable."

Battle for Hughes millions moves to court Monday

By Wallace Turner
New York Times Service

Nevada jury to weigh 'Mormon will' validity

SAN FRANCISCO — Nineteen months after the death of Howard R. Hughes, the struggle over his estate, one of the largest ever amassed by an American, will go to trial before a jury in Las Vegas on Monday, with a second, competing trial to open a week later in Houston.

At stake are hundreds of millions of dollars in tax revenue, professional reputations, the personal power accruing to those who control the huge estate and the jobs and futures of 10,000 employees of the various Hughes enterprises.

There are two key questions. The first will be addressed by both courts: Is a will offered for probate in Las Vegas a forgery concocted by a ring of thieves, or did Hughes draw up in his own hand on March 19, 1968, a document distributing his estate?

THE SECOND question will be of importance only to the Texas probate court: Was Hughes "domiciled" in Texas to such a degree that it can claim inheritance taxes on his estate, or was he, as his estate managers contend, domiciled in Nevada, which has no inheritance tax?

The tax consequences of that decision will be negligible, since the taxes that Texas would collect would be offset against the 77 percent federal inheritance tax. But other consequences affecting the relations of the heirs could flow from a finding in favor of Texas.

Hughes left Texas, his birthplace, as a young man. While he never lived there again, he almost always gave a Houston office building as his permanent address, and in his last years his employees made inquiries about buying a condominium in Houston.

He died on April 5, 1976, on the way to a Houston hospital. Since late 1970, he lived in one hotel after another in the Bahamas, Nicaragua, Canada, England and Mexico.

The size of the estate he left is unclear. In Hughes's lifetime, his associates seemed to inflate it to $2 billion. After his death, with a large tax bill in the offing, the estate managers commissioned Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith to appraise his holdings. The appraisal — $188 million — was greeted derisively.

Sources familiar with Hughes's affairs say that he died with a liquid portfolio of $250 million. On the public record was his ownership of five hotels and seven casinos, plus tens of thousands of acres of land in Nevada.

He owned 1,300 acres of prime real estate in Los Angeles, the last major open tract in that area. He also owned Hughes Air West, Hughes Helicopter and various other properties, among them more than a dozen jets and the old wooden airplane, HIK1 — the "Spruce Goose" — that he built and flew once.

Of the many mysteries of Hughes's life and death, none is deeper than his apparent failure to sign the formal will that would have left his fortune to the Howard Hughes Medical Institute of Miami, Fla. He said repeatedly that he intended this bequest to be made, but he apparently did not make it.

A NATIONWIDE search last year produced an unsigned copy of such a will and work papers, but not a signed document.

On the afternoon of April 27, 1976, a few days after a burst of publicity about the lack of a will, two sealed envelopes, one inside the other, were found in the Salt Lake City headquarters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

Inside the envelopes was the handwritten document on yellow legal pad paper that is now known as the "Mormon will." It is avidly supported as authentic by some who would benefit from its provisions, and it is denounced as a forgery by some who would gain if there were no will.

Only this will was offered for probate, although "Hughes wills" proliferated that spring. Two legal attacks, called "will contests," were filed against the Mormon document.

One was filed by Annette Lummis, Hughes's 86-year-old maternal aunt, who is his closest surviving relative. The other was filed by three granddaughters of Rupert Hughes, the late novelist, who was Hughes's paternal uncle.

Trial of both contests will begin at 10 a.m. Monday in Clark County Court-house in Las Vegas before District Judge Keith Hayes and a jury of eight. It will continue for several months.

Courthouse employees refer to the proceeding as

"that circus," in part for the following reasons:

— Melvin Dummar, who said that he had found the will and explained his being named a beneficiary by saying he once picked up Hughes in the desert and gave the industrialist a ride, has given so many versions of the matter that Judge Hayes once said in court, "I think you're lying." That day, the judge allowed a television broadcast from court, so potential jurors were exposed to his views about Dummar.

— Another key witness, LeVane Forsythe of Anchorage, Alaska, said that he left the will for Dummar to find and described himself as a "Hughes bag man." In 1970, Forsythe testified that he had seen Hughes's secret nighttime departure from the Desert Inn in Las Vegas. The judge before whom the evidence was given singled out Forsythe's testimony as being outrageously false.

— Forsythe produced

some months ago recordings of his telephone talks with Harold Rhoden, the lawyer who is substitute executor of the will. Rhoden could be heard to

Rhoden became substitute executor by appointment of Noah Dietrich, 88, Hughes's chief lieutenant until they broke relations 20 years ago. With Rhoden as his lawyer, Dietrich sued Hughes at least three times after their split.

YOU WILL STOP SMOKING DECEMBER 16

Ralph Story, Los Angeles, California

After 35 years of smoking every day, I am now a non-smoker. It required nine evenings of my time, six months cigarette-money, and my honest resolve to stop smoking. The rest of the credit goes to SMOKENDERS. They literally taught me how NOT to smoke! And together, we did it easily, comfortably, intelligently and effectively.

Friends tell me I look better. I know I feel better. And I think better, work better and play (tennis) better... and longer! But most important, I am not going to smoke again... or do anything else that is harmful to me, any more. And that is a very big positive change in my whole life, thanks to SMOKENDERS. That is why I enthusiastically recommend SMOKENDERS. And that is the very first personal endorsement of any product or service I have ever given.

Sincerely,

Ralph Story

TM 'fliers'? The imagination soars

By Kay Bartlett
AP Newsfeatures Writer

SOUTH FALLSBURG, N.Y.—They talk about smooth liftoffs and bumpy landings as might pilot trainees, stewardesses and hang-glider addicts.

But this is at the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment, a handsome campus of the transcendental meditation movement, and "they" are advanced disciples who claim they can fly—levitate—with mind power as the sole propellant.

"We are in the beginning stages of flying," says John Konhaus, acting director of the TM movement in the United States. "It comes in stages. At first, it looks like they're hopping like frogs. Then they become lighter and lighter as growth of consciousness develops."

SOME devoted followers think the movement's credibility will be badly strained by the levitation claims. There's skepticism within TM as well as quick acceptance.

Joseph and Devanie Wagner are meditators. She says, "I have no doubt that I will leave the ground." Her husband, a systems analyst for a research firm, says the whole business is a hoax.

Mrs. Wagner hasn't seen the flying but has heard it. "I saw a lot of them take pillows and foam rubber, and I stuck around by the door. I heard a lot of knocking and building."

The TM levitators assert they can rise one or two feet from the full lotus, a position with the left ankle on top of the right thigh and vice versa, and then move forward three, six, maybe 10 feet.

COULD a skilled gymnast perform the feat? "No way," says Dick Mulvihill, director of the National Academy of Gymnasts in Eugene, Ore. "With the full lotus, there's no way to gain thrust."

In addition to the beginning, or hopping stages, TMers talk of reports about initiates actually hovering with greater mastery over gravity.

For now, the TMers tell but don't show. With one exception, the results left outsiders and some insiders unimpressed.

They're also buying foam rubber by the truck load.

"At this stage, we have most control in taking off," says flier Gale Merman, secretary to magician Doug Henning. "Landings tend to be rough."

Says Allen Solof, a daily flier and one of 450 TM executive governors in the United States: "There is a great deal of group consciousness. If one person begins to fly, it starts the other people up. It's like popcorn. Once it goes, they all start going."

The transcendental meditation movement has spent 20 years establishing credibility. Now, some followers believe it is being threatened by a new claim. A claim which devotees are willing to discuss but not document. That they defy gravity. Fly.

THIS PICTURE, provided by the Transcendental Meditation movement, purportedly shows a devotee in flight. Claim of mastery over gravity is widely scoffed at outside the movement, and many within are afraid the claim will harm their credibility.

KONHAUS runs the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment near this Catskills community. The guests usually are serious professional men and women. The men wear three-piece suits, the women afternoon apparel or party dresses. The atmosphere is serene, the meals vegetarian, and those who smoke must do so outside.

Visitors are welcome to see the flying rooms—one for men and one for women. The floors are covered with foam rubber, and there's more foam rubber stacked in the hallways.

Konhaus says he believes the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the guru of the movement who lives in Switzerland, eventually will allow a demonstration that will persuade the skeptic.

"We don't want to create a circus atmosphere," says Konhaus. "Our people aren't circus performers. The more serious a person is about gaining enlightenment, the less likely it is that he or she would wish to demonstrate."

"Enlightenment completely overshadows the flying part," says Sherry Burns, another TM executive governor. "The point is gaining enlightenment, and this is just a short cut. It's the bliss, the happiness that's important. That is impossible to demonstrate."

AS KONHAUS puts it:

"It's an unbounded awareness. That feeling is a much greater joy than flying ever could be." Konhaus, a student of Eastern religions before he turned to TM, says he learned levitation in Switzerland.

Pamela Chun, a 26-year-old retail buyer from Hawaii, says: "When you hop, you release an incredible amount of energy."

If you want to learn to levitate, as some early TM ads beckoned, bring money.

First, you enroll in preparatory classes from four to eight weeks, depending upon one's stage of meditation. That's Phase I and costs $345 a week, including room and board. Phase II is four two-week courses at $375 a week.

You don't get your money back if you don't fly.

Miss Chun spent $2,000 this summer at South Fallsburg and thought it was worth every penny.

"A LOT of people spend that much on their vacations and come back exhausted. Retail buying is a tough field and I am very relaxed. After I meditate I feel as if I had been asleep for eight hours."

At least one complaint regarding TM advertising has been filed. A student at the Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa, says he was told his course would take four weeks. Then he was told it would take eight.

"They promised levitation, and then halfway through they said come up with another $1,500," says Steve Rozman, an associate professor and chairman of the social science division at Tougaloo College near Jackson, Miss.

He complained to the Iowa attorney general's office and was blacklisted, he says. "They wanted me to operate on a show-my-faith basis. They told me I didn't have the proper attitude."

Julian Garrett, assistant attorney general in charge of consumer protection, says his office is investigating the TM claims but progress is slow. "We're inclined to think this is a very questionable claim, but it's a little difficult to get students to talk about it."

KONHAUS says the advertising since has been toned down. "We're like any business. We use our advertising to attract the public." Though flying is a by-product, it does make people take notice, maybe even sign up.

Rozman was soured by his own experience, but he doesn't discount the possibility that "something—like flying—is going on."

"There are too many reports from Switzerland. I don't link TM with fraud, but I think it's become overly commercialized. The movement is badly in need of money."

Others connected with the TM movement are more upset.

Patricia Carrington, psychologist, mediator and author of "Freedom in Meditation," wishes the movement would give a proper demonstration or quit talking about levitation.

"If you're serious about something, you must permit a controlled observation for the scientific community," says Dr. Carrington. "The TM movement has been a very conservative one up to this point. They did a world of good in spreading the word about the benefits of meditation. This is an about-switch."

"EVEN Uri Geller allows himself to be studied. I am just bewildered by these claims."

Dr. Carrington is afraid that what she considers the proven benefits of meditation will be undermined by the levitation claims.

Actually, the levitators did "show" once—last May at Iowa's MIU, which used to be Parsons College before the college went out of business.

Twenty-two persons—two of them non-meditators—were invited to the demonstration conducted by four young men. It got mixed reviews. Some of the meditators thought they saw levitation. Others thought they saw some hopping around that they figured a good athlete might be able to duplicate.

NO PICTURES were allowed, although the TM people are ready to hand out pictures of levitators. The press generally has taken these with the seriousness reserved for the latest photo of the Loch Ness Monster, Bigfoot and similar mysteries.

Dean Gabbert, editor of the Fairfield Ledger, was one of the two non-meditators allowed at the demonstration. He concluded his article this way:

"As a reporter, I am struck by the paradox of intelligent, articulate, even brilliant people who are attempting to deal credibly with an incredible subject."

Based solely on Saturday's exposure, I observed one supernatural ability which was never mentioned: belief in the unbelievable."

Poor arriving in L.B. have no place to go

By Bob Keefer
Staff Writer

They come from all over the country, and Long Beach has no place to put them. Young or old, from Bakersfield or Boston, they nevertheless have one thing in common — no place to live.

There is virtually no government-funded housing available in the city — or in Los Angeles County — for families needing a place to stay while they look for jobs or wait for welfare. "Finding emergency housing in Long Beach is like finding a needle in a haystack," a city community worker says.

Furthermore, a regulatory "catch-22" is forcing private agencies and individuals in Long Beach to house many relief applicants while their cases are being considered by the welfare department.

Current welfare regulations require families to have a local address before their applications — for housing assistance — can be processed, even though a single male can receive immediate aid in the form of vouchers for meals and a room at a cheap hotel.

Thus the burden of housing families who arrive in Long Beach broke and hungry has fallen on

State's not so golden without a little 'green'

California is a garden of Eden
A paradise to live in or see,
But believe it or not, you won't find it so hot
If you ain't got the dough-re-mi.

When Woody Guthrie wrote those lyrics about Dust Bowl migrants in the 30s, the welfare state was just struggling to be born.

Forty years later it has grown up, but the folks who continue to arrive from back East with no more than a suitcase full of clothes and a broken-down car still don't find much paradise.

"Debbie" is a young waitress who came to Long Beach last month with her 18-month-old baby to look for a job.

"I'd been living in Florida and I didn't particularly like it down there," she said.

"I had some friends that had been here. They said it was pretty nice, whoever is interested in helping out — a couple of charitable religious groups, and social workers and private citizens willing to donate their own money.

The county Department of Public Social Services (welfare) is unable to give families immediate shelter due to differing requirements of county and federally funded programs, according to Barbara Box, deputy director of the Long Beach DPSS office.

County-funded general relief, which can be issued to a client on the spot, can only be given to persons who are not eligible for any other form of aid, Box explained.

Since families can receive AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children), they are not eligible for general relief, Box said.

But because AFDC is federally funded, applicants must have a local address before their cases can be considered. Then the welfare department must check with welfare offices at the client's last address for eligibility information.

Living in a motel, Debbie applied for Aid for Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) from the welfare department and was given money and food stamps Oct. 24.

She thought she was to get another check Nov. 1, but because she had missed an application deadline, the money didn't arrive. She said she was told she might have to wait a week or more for a check.

Out of money, Debbie said Friday she and her baby had been living in her car for two days and hadn't "had a lot to eat."

The welfare department had told her the only thing she could do was go to the Los Angeles mission, she said, and the police department had suggested she put her baby into a foster home and go to the Long Beach mission.

"I think I'd even be willing to go back to Florida," Debbie said. "There aren't very many friendly people here."

signed to prevent the type of fraud found in New York City before it went broke."

Vouchers for room and board at a hotel cannot be given to families, Box said, because federal regulations require "unrestricted" — cash — payments to AFDC clients.

This situation creates hardship not only for the destitute families but for the private agencies — and individual social workers — to whom they appeal for help.

Paul Mousel is director of the St. Francis Center, a small group of volunteers who help needy people find food and shelter through their Long Beach store-front at 808 E. Fourth St.

Mousel asked the welfare department last month to stop referring AFDC applicants to the center for housing, because he felt the small religious group could no longer use its limited resources to help people who should be drawing welfare support.

"We don't want to drop our work with the DPSS," Mousel said. "But we are trying to meet crisis situations instead of giving long-term aid."

"I'm not criticizing the department — they have to abide by the law," he said, but added, "People pass the buck. Who's going to change the law?"

Long Beach Human Resources Department Director Art Chapman was less reluctant to criticize the county.

"It's really the responsibility of DPSS to house these people," Chapman said. "The county has some discretion under general relief, but has opted not to fund such a (housing) program."

'Horse country's' residents battle subdivision trend

By Dorothy Korber
Staff Writer

The houses on Bellflower's Chicago Street look exactly like the houses lining many residential streets in the city, but a glance behind the homes reveals their secret identity.

They are farmhouses in Bellflower's "horse country." Perched on the street end of very deep lots, the houses hide a landscape of barns, corrals, pens, chicken houses, horse trailers and pickup trucks.

Zoned for agriculture, this neighborhood is the last rural stronghold in a city once known for its dairies and stables. The large lots and special zoning in horse country permit its residents to keep chickens, goats, chinchillas, rabbits, cattle and — pervasively — horses.

Bellflower's "horse people" see it as a refuge for city dwellers who consider themselves country folk, according to Chicago Street resident Patricia Cohen.

But she has noted with apprehension that horse country is rapidly being subdivided, and she regretfully began looking for a new home for her six horses earlier this year.

SHE ATTENDED a city council meeting last month that eased her fears, however, and she's optimistic that the council recognizes the value of preserving horse country.

Mayor Ken Cleveland suggested at that meeting that horse country be limited to lots with a minimum of 7,500 square feet. He directed the planning commission to study this possibility.

"This is a good sign," Cohen said during an interview in the snug living room of her 1½-acre homestead. "But I wish the city had foreseen the problem about six years ago. The neighborhood is growing rapidly, and most of the newcomers don't understand horses."

She said eight abandoned freeway houses recently were moved onto a 1½-acre lot. This represents a trend that might lead to the destruction of her rural neighborhood, she contends.

"People who don't have horses complain about the dust and the smell, but those people don't have to move here in the first place," Cohen said. "There are plenty of places for non-horse people. It's selfish of them to move here if they don't like horses."

Her conversation is filled with references to the special needs and qualities of the "horse people." Like Shetlands or Clydesdales, she obviously regards them as a breed apart.

"Horse people are closer to their neighbors because we have a common interest," she said. "In horse country we're closer than in the city. It's a way of life."

That way of life is expensive, she admits. Property taxes are zooming in her area, and hay also is a costly necessity of a horse owner's life.

"If you want to own a horse, you have to be willing to pay the price," she said. "We pay a lot for keeping our horses on our own place, but it costs about $95 a month to board a horse at a stable. And it's $5 an hour now to rent one."

COHEN, 27, has loved horses since childhood. When she went to work as a nurse, she immediately bought her first horse. She met her husband, Girard, through her equestrian involvement.

She said she was overjoyed when she discovered Bellflower's horse country. She had been unaware of this Shangri-La as a horse-happy kid growing up in South Gate.

Her move to Bellflower six years ago will prove very profitable if she decides to sell her place. She paid $42,000 for the lot and its two small houses. A neighbor recently sold a similar piece of property for $149,000.

"Property in this neighborhood will probably reach the $200,000-a-acre mark in five years," she commented.

makes it more valuable than any residential land in the city, according to Mayor Cleveland.

"It's an ideal area for horses because of its natural boundaries," he said in an interview. "My feeling is that we must keep density down or the area will deteriorate."

Councilwoman Mary Lewis agrees.

It may seem odd that anyone would want a horse in the middle of the Los Angeles metropolitan area. Cohen says there are places to ride, however, and cites the adjacent San Gabriel riverbed as a handy place for a gallop.

She and her husband belong to Equestrian Trails Inc., a group that lobbies for horse trails and organizes club outings. Equestrian Trails was instrumental in the creation of the San Gabriel River Trail, which runs from the mountains to the ocean.

The San Gabriel River is one of the borders of horse country, along with Alondra Boulevard, Woodruff Avenue and the railroad tracks. Ron Whitney of the city's planning staff says that about 10 percent of Bellflower is zoned agricultural, and horse country accounts for most of this.

The A-1 zoning allows for one horse or other large domestic animal for each 5,000 square feet. Fences and enclosures may not be located within 35 feet of residential doors or windows, a requirement that is sometimes difficult on the narrow lots.

Whitney says no other nearby cities have anything resembling Bellflower's horse haven.

"If the people in horse country abide by the rules, I think it's a fantastic area," Whitney commented. "They have a special atmosphere out there. This makes Bellflower unique. You don't have areas like this in a subdivided city."

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

ONE OF THE brightest bits of news I've had in quite a while comes from my fellow Hoosier David Koehring, the new organist and master of choristers at St. Luke's Church, Seventh Street and Atlantic Avenue. He informs that Lockerbie Square in Indianapolis is in process of being restored.

James Whitcomb Riley would be glad to hear that his old neighborhood is being spruced up. And so would my grandmother, the late Anna E. Anderson, who lived just a few doors from the poet and catered to his appetite for apple pie, which was considerable.

My father and his brother and sister called the poet "Uncle Jim," and could recite reams of his verses, some of which Riley wrote out in longhand while sitting at my grandmother's kitchen table.

The story was that spelling wasn't Riley's long suit and that grandmother helped him correct that deficiency. She had been a schoolmarm in southern Indiana; tutoring came naturally to her. I can attest to that, for she used to prep me for the spelling bees in grammar school and glided in any gold stars I won.

Riley was a great storyteller. His tales were a fair return on the free pie he consumed at the Anderson's little house. He'd spin yarns about his days as the assistant to patent medicine vendors, the dramatic skits he wrote and acted in, his stint as local editor of the Anderson Democrat. My dad said Riley's tales about newspapering attracted him to the printing trade, where his sharp eye and spelling skills rescued many editorial types swimming in prose that was over their heads and the heads of their readers. Dad was the toughest editor I ever had. He stressed simplicity in style, claiming that a reporter who paraded an inflated vocabulary was telling the reader little save what a pompous ass he was.

Dad would cite Riley's poems as proof that simplicity and simple-mindedness aren't the same. He said a simple thought, clearly expressed, had far more value than a posturing profundity all dolled up with big words and no place to go.

So, I have a stake in the restoration of Lockerbie

Square. I suspect old Lockerbie is the soil for my newspaper roots.

I've studied at several great universities, but my best education came from simple people who valued reading, writing and ciphering as joys basic to the life and lift of the mind. They reached as high as they could and challenged me to reach beyond their limitations. I've tried to do the same with my sons. Most parents do.

My grandmother took in washing, did seamstress work in department stores and ironed for 25 cents a basket. She could plow a field, shoe a horse and pitch hay with any field hand. She even did some of the carpentry work on the one-room school where she taught. All those hours and labors and she still had time for Walter Scott, Emerson, Whitman, Gibbons, Shakespeare and John Donne.

No wonder James Whitcomb Riley found her an interesting conversationalist. They had lots to talk about. I only regret that I couldn't eavesdrop.

I thank choirmaster Koehring for putting me in touch with my roots. A mental visit to Lockerbie Square is almost as good as being there. I hope David Koehring feels as at home in Long Beach as he did in Indianapolis. There are many Hoosiers here, and their hospitality came with them when they made the move west.

It doesn't matter where you're from; no one is a stranger for long in Long Beach. The people are friendly and warm, which, I suppose, is why I have been able to hold this space for the last three years.

Speaking of holding this space, I won't for the next several days. I'll be in Memorial Hospital, an institution that will treat me but not my electric typewriter.

My physicians want to establish the reasons why insulin has let me down. The daily dosage has continued to rise, with no effect on the blood sugar count, which remains higher than the stock market's closing averages on a good day.

The theory is that there may be a block within my system that prevents the insulin from getting through to do its job. Unlike the Rams, I'd be better off if somebody fell down on blocking assignments.

I'm not a good patient, and I know that whatever the doctors find wrong with me won't be hypochondria. I'd much rather climb the walls of my office and not the walls of Memorial, but there's not much I can do except serve my sentence and get back as soon as I can.

If you have a few Rosary beads or good thoughts left over from church, save one for me. I think I'm going to need it.

The veterans' 'bonus'

The proposal to eliminate the 10-point "bonus" given veterans of City of Long Beach civil service tests, now before the City Council's charter amendment committee, undoubtedly will be heatedly opposed by veterans' organizations.

That opposition, however, will primarily be emotional — centering on the alleged injustice of taking away a benefit which was given to men, and a few women, for serving their country.

Councilman Ernie Kell expressed this point of view when he said the bonus is "a small price to pay for those who served their country and (often) risked their lives."

THE TROUBLE IS, it is not such a "small price" to non-veterans, particularly women, who seek civil service jobs in Long Beach. It may well cost them any opportunity for city employment.

Women have had little access to military service, even in wartime, and when they take a civil service exam the 10-point bonus granted veterans virtually excludes them from consideration for a job. Other non-veterans, many whose age kept them out of service, likewise are overwhelmed by the 10-point cushion enjoyed by veterans.

There have been numerous instances of a person finishing in the top three or four in a civil service exam — until the veterans' preference was added. Then they are dropped so far down the list as to have no chance of being hired. This means also that lesser qualified people often win the jobs.

Words on hijacking

The United Nations' resolution condemning aircraft hijacking is encouraging, because it is the first time the General Assembly has been able to agree on any kind of statement on this most critical problem.

It mollified the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations sufficiently so that the organization has agreed to hold in abeyance its planned protest strike to demand stronger measures against hijackers.

We can't help being a little skeptical, however.

We much prefer the approach suggested last Thursday by Brock Adams, U.S. secretary of transportation, who warned that airline operating rights in the United States may be suspended for countries and airlines which refuse to observe antihijacking policies.

This is the first time the United

In 1975, Long Beach voters approved a charter amendment which put a 10-year limit on applications for veterans preference. In effect, it limited the veterans' preference to men and women who served in the Vietnam War.

The city's Civil Service Board is now recommending that the veterans' preference be abolished completely. Again, it would require a charter amendment, approved by city voters.

Don Davis, chairman of the Civil Service Board, said in a letter to the council that commissioners now believe "the provision of extra points to veterans is no longer required and tends to prohibit free competition for positions."

There can be no argument that it does, indeed, prohibit free competition. The only question is whether that is justified in the interests of aiding veterans.

THE VETERANS' preference originally was established to offset the competitive edge gained in civilian employment by those whose lives were not interrupted by military service. Relatively few other benefits for veterans existed at that time.

Today, veterans receive educational, medical and employment benefits. Further, men and women are not being drafted into the armed forces, but are choosing to enlist voluntarily.

We agree with the Civil Service Board that the veterans' preference has outlived its usefulness, and that it is especially unfair to women. We urge the City Council to approve submitting a charter amendment on the matter to Long Beach voters.

States has threatened such action, and we believe it is high time.

Brock said the United States wants international adherence to three treaties on air safety standards, hijacking and sabotage, drafted in 1961, 1970 and 1971 by the International Civil Aviation Organization. He said the U.S. initially is looking to the ICAO and the United Nations for action.

"However, we are prepared to exercise statutory powers to suspend air service to those nations which provide a safe haven to hijackers, or fly into those countries," Brock warned.

Only positive action such as this will bring any solution to the problem of hijacking and terrorism. The U.N. resolution, after all, is just words — and, as we said in an earlier editorial, solving this problem will take more than words.

Part of Watergate scheme

Subverting U.S. civil service

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most audacious of the Watergate schemes was Richard Nixon's attempt to Nixonize the federal bureaucracy and bring it under his tight, personal control. Without the consent of Congress, he intended to increase the power of the presidency in a revolutionary way.

If he had been able to pull it off, it would have amounted almost to a coup against our existing form of government. He succeeded to a degree in subverting the Civil Service Commission, which is supposed to protect the professional bureaucracy from political encroachment.

The story of Nixon's attempted coup has never been fully told, and the conspirators have never been held accountable. In fact, the commission is still populated at its upper levels by officials who helped him subvert the civil service system. Here are the details:

NIXON HAD AN intense distrust of the millions who compose the permanent government. He often complained that the federal bureaucracy was dominated by "liberals" and "academics." He would confide to intimates that a "Jewish cabal" had taken over this office or that agency. He issued orders that no more "Ivy Leaguers" should be appointed to high positions.

Nixon's denigration of the civil service system led the White House to begin a quiet political purge. Those who were considered unreliable were shunted into obscure jobs and replaced by people with Nixon credentials. The White House also set up a political clearance system, which checked the political philosophies and connections of hundreds of new applicants for government jobs.

This subversion of the regular institutions of government, of course, was conducted in the utmost secrecy. Even in the backrooms of the White House, Nixon aides were careful not to refer to it in political terms. Admonished the White House hatchetman in charge of the purge, Fred Malek: "I propose we stop calling it 'politicizing the executive branch' and instead call it something like strengthening the government's responsiveness." The euphemism stuck, and the operation became known thereafter as the Responsiveness Program.

BY EXECUTIVE decree, President Nixon also sought to create around himself a super-cabinet of loyal aides who would have total power over the bureaucracy. This would force his policies upon the government through White House agents who would be installed in every department.

Nixon, meanwhile, intended to encapsulate himself from unnecessary turmoil, devote his energies to formulating policies and deal regularly only with those select few who were on his personal wave length. He would leave it to them to enforce his edicts through a political system that would turn the bureaucracy into an unquestioning, subservient arm of the White House.

But he found out that a seething enterprise like the federal government could not be compartmentalized, cordoned off and led from a glass bubble. He left behind, nevertheless, civil service officials who not only supported his power play but who allegedly destroyed documents to prevent Congress from learning of the abuses.

The transition team, which helped turn over the reins of government to Jimmy Carter, was sharply critical of several career people at the Civil Service Commission. Although the transition papers have been kept secret, inside sources say the final report pointed an accusatory finger, for example, at John Cole.

He heads the powerful Bureau of Personnel Management Evaluation, which has the authority to examine the personnel practices of any government agency. Yet despite the critical evaluation of his own performance, Cole is still evaluating others. Furthermore, the commission has no plans to transfer him.

This has upset Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., who has been keeping a watchful congressional eye on the commission for years. He has written a stinging, secret letter to President Carter calling for the removal not only of Cole but of the executive director, Ray Jacobson.

Declares the letter: "Suspending the authority of (Jacobson and Cole) is essential. Until questions of document destruction and concealment of the commission's role in violating the merit system are answered, these individuals should not be allowed to exercise authority."

Some of the past abuses may yet wind up in court. Congressional critics complain that the Justice Department has been less than vigorous about investigating these excesses of the Nixon era. But Civil Service Chairman Alan Campbell says he was assured by high Justice officials only last week that the investigation is still active.

Another scandal, meanwhile, has been bubbling at the Civil Service Commission. This is the agency that is supposed to enforce anti-discrimination standards throughout the government. Yet apparently the commission itself is guilty of discrimination. It's equal employment director, Clinton Smith, complained in a memo, meant for official eyes only, that top commission officials are impeding efforts "to effectively enforce, internally the very laws and regulations the Civil Service Commission is responsible for enforcing in the government-wide merit and (equal opportunity) programs."

The Nixonian approach to government, meanwhile, was aborted by Watergate.

Footnote: Spokesmen for the Civil Service Commission claim that steps are now being taken to investigate all the allegations. The general counsel has been ordered to review the equal opportunity program, and an outside authority will investigate allegations that the commission violated the merit system.

Bombs, birds, planes at Seal Beach depot?

WASHINGTON — There seems to be some thought that the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station should be turned into an air strip for small planes.

At least the Orange County Board of Supervisors has ordered a study of such a possibility.

There may, however, be a few objections from the U.S. Navy, and from other folks.

Several years back there was a hefty little battle over the station. The state wanted to build a freeway through the station at Anaheim Bay. The Navy wondered quietly whether a freeway would be compatible with atom bombs.

Gil Bailey

View from our National Bureau

It isn't an item that the Navy headlines, but it is true that among the items of ordinance stored at the weapons station are atomic bombs.

Small planes also may not be compatible with such weapons.

During that battle over a freeway, some alliances were formed.

Anaheim Bay is the only viable salt marsh between Santa Barbara and Orange County. Salt marshes are necessary for the life cycle of roughly two-thirds of marine life.

In addition the marshes and bay of the station provided a nesting place for rare and endangered birds and other wild life.

So the conservationists proposed that the weapons station be turned into a wildlife refuge. Strangely enough, stored weapons of death are compatible with wildlife. The key is that not many people are allowed to bother the animals, and the weapons of death, on the station.

Former Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach, not always considered an ardent environmentalist, agreed this time with the conservationists. He authored, and saw passed, legislation that created a wildlife refuge on the station.

The Department of the Interior, California State University of Long Beach scientists and the Navy are now cooperating in preserving this one, small area of open space left in the sprawling metropolitan area of Long Beach-Orange County.

And, if and when the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station goes out of existence, the Department of Interior's Bureau of Fish and Wildlife is supposed to have first crack at the station grounds.

INTERIOR MAY ALSO wonder about the compatibility of small planes and a wildlife refuge.

Overall, two thirds of the salt marshes of California have already been filled. It may be that an airport would harm this one.

The proposed runway site would be near ammunition bunkers on the south side of Westminster Boulevard. Even if the runway did not immediately damage the refuge, it is possible that an accidental meeting between a small plane and an ammunition bunker could damage lots of life forms, including humans.

State survey to cost $1 million; Phone company pays only $8,000

SACRAMENTO — California's government has such an enormous amount of money at its disposal that it's understandable, if not excusable, that the care given to its use is sometimes not as great as it might be if the treasury was less full.

Sometimes, it has been suggested, the incentive to spend exceeds the incentive to spend wisely.

For instance, if a state agency participates in a federal program which provides 10 federal dollars for every state dollar budgeted for the activity, it becomes important to use all 10 of those dollars. If they don't get used, next year the feds might give you only seven or eight dollars for every state dollar budgeted, and that would take away a considerable amount of budgeting flexibility.

Maybe the state Department of Rehabilitation doesn't operate that way. Maybe its use of nearly $100 million this year is carefully calculated to be of maximum benefit to California's physically and mentally handicapped citizens.

But the department invites the criticism that its use of the money available to it illustrates the "Let's spend it, quick, before we lose it," syndrome.

THE STORY: Although the department has existed under one name or another for more than 60 years, it does not know just how many of what kind of handicapped people here are in the state. Legitimately, it wants to find out, the better to determine the kinds and amounts of services needed.

Is that information worth a million dollars? That's what the department is paying for it. It contracted with the University of California, specifically with Howard A. Freeman of the UCLA Institute for Social Science Research and J. Merrill Shanks of the UC Berkeley Survey Research Center, to conduct a telephone survey of some 30,000 Californians and extrapolate the data so the desired numbers can be assumed.

Late last spring, a Sacramento-based columnist, Earl Waters, began examining the survey, and this newspaper ran a story which included Waters' discovery that the Pacific Telephone Co. had commissioned a similar study from which it obtained data on California's handicapped persons — at a cost of $8,000.

Department officials said the telephone company's information was inadequate for its needs. Accept that. Accept, further, that the information now being obtained for the department could not have been obtained at a price less than $1 million and is worth every penny of that $1 million.

Accept as fact that for the people in the state Department of Rehabilitation the interests of handicapped persons are paramount.

Still, information uncovered recently on the background of the survey invites questions about the attitude department officials have toward taxpayers' money and toward their relationship with the Legislature.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

Speculation is invited about the sequence: Was there first a determination that the information was needed, followed by a search for money to finance the study? Or was there first a realization that the department had more money than it had estimated it needed, followed by a search for ways to spend the surplus?

"The department had some federal money which was not going to be expended on client services," acknowledges Gordon Cumming, deputy director of Rehabilitation's Program Development Division.

"The Department of Health also had some unused federal money. Rather than turn it back, we felt we had the opportunity now and we grabbed it."

The state budget process is simple enough to outline. Departments list what they do, estimate the cost of doing it, submit a request to the governor who reviews it, reduces it, usually, and submits it in turn to the Legislature along with all his other budget recommendations.

The Legislature then makes its own review, hears from each department, makes whatever change it deems appropriate, and returns a budget to the governor who can reduce, but not increase, any item.

So along with determining how much is to be spent, the Legislature also determines what programs are to be funded.

But it was never asked to provide funds for the Rehabilitation survey. The department found the funds, and entirely on its own decided how to spend them.

THAT'S NOT THE way it's supposed to be. Not when the expenditure is $1 million. With Rehabilitation's disdain for the normal budgeting process so clearly evident, its contention that the $1 million price tag is, in Cumming's word, "reasonable," is not easy to accept.

Especially in view of Pacific Telephone's $8,000 figure, and the fact it knew that George Gallup in 1973 said he could accumulate the raw data for $130,000 — and that it knew that the U.S. Census Bureau plans to acquire the same information in 1980 during the decennial nose count and would make it available to California a few years later. Poor arriving in L.B. have no place to go

By Bob Keefer
Staff Writer

They come from all over the country, and Long Beach has no place to put them. Young or old, from Bakersfield or Boston, they nevertheless have one thing in common — no place to live.

There is virtually no government-funded housing available in the city — or in Los Angeles County — for families needing a place to stay while they look for jobs or wait for welfare. "Finding emergency housing in Long Beach is like finding a needle in a haystack," a city community worker says.

Furthermore, a regulatory "catch-22" is forcing private agencies and individuals in Long Beach to house many relief applicants while their cases are being considered by the welfare department.

Current welfare regulations require families to have a local address before their applications — for housing assistance — can be processed, even though a single male can receive immediate aid in the form of vouchers for meals and a room at a cheap hotel.

Thus the burden of housing families who arrive in Long Beach broke and hungry has fallen on

State's not so golden without a little 'green'

California is a garden of Eden
A paradise to live in or see,
But believe it or not, you won't find it so hot
If you ain't got the dough-re-mi.

When Woody Guthrie wrote those lyrics about Dust Bowl migrants in the 30s, the welfare state was just struggling to be born.

Forty years later it has grown up, but the folks who continue to arrive from back East with no more than a suitcase full of clothes and a broken-down car still don't find much paradise.

"Debbie" is a young waitress who came to Long Beach last month with her 18-month-old baby to look for a job.

"I'd been living in Florida and I didn't particularly like it down there," she said.

"I had some friends that had been here. They said it was pretty nice, the jobs were pretty eligible, y'know."

Living in a motel, Debbie applied for Aid for Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) from the welfare department and was given money and food stamps Oct. 24.

She thought she was to get another check Nov. 1, but because she had missed an application deadline, the money didn't arrive. She said she was told she might have to wait a week or more for a check.

Out of money, Debbie said Friday she and her baby had been living in her car for two days and hadn't "had a lot to eat."

The welfare department had told her the only thing she could do was go to the Los Angeles mission, she said, and the police department had suggested she put her baby into a foster home and go to the Long Beach mission.

"I think I'd even be willing to go back to Florida," Debbie said.

"There aren't very many friendly people here."

whoever is interested in helping out — a couple of charitable religious groups, and social workers and private citizens willing to donate their own money.

The county Department of Public Social Services (welfare) is unable to give families immediate shelter due to differing requirements of county and federally funded programs, according to Barbara Box, deputy director of the Long Beach DPSS office.

County-funded general relief, which can be issued to a client on the spot, can only be given to persons who are not eligible for any other form of aid, Box explained.

Since families can receive AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children), they are not eligible for general relief, Box said.

But because AFDC is federally funded, applicants must have a local address before their cases can be considered. Then the welfare department must check with welfare offices at the client's last address for eligibility information.

Once the local address is obtained, it still takes about four days — ideally — for the paperwork to be completed and money to be issued. Sometimes it takes up to a week.

"It sounds illogical," Box said, "but (without the address requirement) clients who wanted to commit fraud would go from district to district and apply for aid."

"The federal requirement is designed to prevent the type of fraud found in New York City before it went broke."

Vouchers for room and board at a hotel cannot be given to families, Box said, because federal regulations require "unrestricted" — cash — payments to AFDC clients.

This situation creates hardship not only for the destitute families but for the private agencies — and individual social workers — to whom they appeal for help.

Paul Mousel is director of the St. Francis Center, a small group of volunteers who help needy people find food and shelter through their Long Beach store-front at 808 E. Fourth St.

Mousel asked the welfare department last month to stop referring AFDC applicants to the center for housing, because he felt the small religious group could no longer use its limited resources to help people who should be drawing welfare support.

"We don't want to drop our work with the DPSS," Mousel said. "But we are trying to meet crisis situations instead of giving long-term aid."

"I'm not criticizing the department — they have to abide by the law," he said, but added, "People pass the buck. Who's going to change the law?"

Long Beach Human Resources Department Director Art Chapman was less reluctant to criticize the county.

"It's really the responsibility of DPSS to house these people," Chapman said. "The county has some discretion under general relief, but has opted not to fund such a (housing) program."

'Horse country's' residents battle subdivision trend

By Dorothy Korber
Staff Writer

The houses on Bellflower's Chicago Street look exactly like the houses lining many residential streets in the city, but a glance behind the homes reveals their secret identity.

They are farmhouses in Bellflower's "horse country." Perched on the street end of very deep lots, the houses hide a landscape of barns, corrals, pens, chicken houses, horse trailers and pickup trucks.

Zoned for agriculture, this neighborhood is the last rural stronghold in a city once known for its dairies and stables. The large lots and special zoning in horse country permit its residents to keep chickens, goats, chinchillas, rabbits, cattle and — pervasively — horses.

Bellflower's "horse people" see it as a refuge for city dwellers who consider themselves country folk, according to Chicago Street resident Patricia Cohen.

But she has noted with apprehension that horse country is rapidly being subdivided, and she regrettably began looking for a new home for her six horses earlier this year.

SHE ATTENDED a city council meeting last month that eased her fears, however, and she's optimistic that the council recognizes the value of preserving horse country.

Mayor Ken Cleveland suggested at that meeting that horse country be limited to lots with a minimum of 7,500 square feet. He directed the planning commission to study this possibility.

"This is a good sign," Cohen said during an interview in the snug living room of her 1 1/2-acre home. "But I wish the city had foreseen the problem about six years ago. The neighborhood is growing rapidly, and most of the newcomers don't understand horses."

She said eight abandoned free-way houses recently were moved onto a 1 1/2-acre lot. This represents a trend that might lead to the destruction of her rural neighborhood, she contends.

"People who don't have horses complain about the dust and the smell, but those people don't have to move here in the first place," Cohen said. "There are plenty of places for non-horse people. It's selfish of them to move here if they don't like horses."

Her conversation is filled with references to the special needs and qualities of the "horse people." Like Shetlands or Clydesdales, she obviously regards them as a breed apart.

"Horse people are closer to their neighbors because we have a common interest," she said. "In horse country we're closer than in the city. It's a way of life."

That way of life is expensive, she admits. Property taxes are zooming in her area, and hay also is a costly necessity of a horse owner's life.

"If you want to own a horse, you have to be willing to pay the price," she said. "We pay a lot for keeping our horses on our own place, but it costs about $95 a month to board a horse at a stable. And it's $5 an hour now to rent one."

COHEN, 27, has loved horses since childhood. When she went to work as a nurse, she immediately bought her first horse. She met her husband, Girard, through her equestrian involvement.

She said she was overjoyed when she discovered Bellflower's horse country. She had been unaware of this Shangri-La as a horse-happy kid growing up in South Gate.

Her move to Bellflower six years ago will prove very profitable as she decides to sell her place. She paid $42,000 for the lot and its two small houses. A neighbor recently sold a similar piece of property for $149,000.

"Property in this neighborhood will probably reach the $200,000-an-acre mark in five years," she commented.

The low density of the area makes it more valuable than any residential land in the city, according to Mayor Cleveland.

"It's an ideal area for horses because of its natural boundaries," he said in an interview. "My feeling is that we must keep density down or the area will deteriorate."

Councilwoman Mary Lewis agrees.

It may seem odd that anyone would want a horse in the middle of the Los Angeles metropolitan area. Cohen says there are places to ride, however, and cites the adjacent San Gabriel riverbed as a handy place for a gallop.

She and her husband belong to Equestrian Trails Inc., a group that lobbies for horse trails and organizes club outings. Equestrian Trails was instrumental in the creation of the San Gabriel River Trail, which runs from the mountains to the ocean.

The San Gabriel River is one of the borders of horse country, along with Alondra Boulevard, Woodruff Avenue and the railroad tracks. Ron Whitney of the city's planning staff says that about 10 percent of Bellflower is zoned agricultural, and horse country accounts for most of this.

The A-1 zoning allows for one horse or other large domestic animal for each 5,000 square feet. Fences and enclosures may not be located within 35 feet of residential doors or windows, a requirement that is sometimes difficult on the narrow lots.

Whitney says no other nearby cities have anything resembling Bellflower's horse haven.

"If the people in horse country abide by the rules, I think it's a fantastic area," Whitney commented. "They have a special atmosphere out there. This makes Bellflower unique. You don't have areas like this in a subdivided city."

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

ONE OF THE brightest bits of news I've had in quite a while comes from my fellow Hoosier David Koehring, the new organist and master of choristers at St. Luke's Church, Seventh Street and Atlantic Avenue. He informs that Lockerbie Square in Indianapolis is in process of being restored.

James Whitcomb Riley would be glad to hear that his old neighborhood is being spruced up. And so would my grandmother, the late Anna E. Anderson, who lived just a few doors from the poet and catered to his appetite for apple pie, which was considerable.

My father and his brother and sister called the poet "Uncle Jim," and could recite reams of his verses, some of which Riley wrote out in longhand while sitting at my grandmother's kitchen table.

The story was that spelling wasn't Riley's long suit and that grandmother helped him correct that deficiency. She had been a schoolmarm in southern Indiana; tutoring came naturally to her. I can attest to that, for she used to prep me for the spelling bees in grammar school and gloried in any gold stars I won.

Riley was a great storyteller. His tales were a fair return on the free pie he consumed at the Anderson's little house. He'd spin yarns about his days as the assistant to patent medicine vendors, the dramatic skits he wrote and acted in, his stint as local editor of the Anderson Democrat. My dad said Riley's tales about newspapering attracted him to the printing trade, where his sharp eye and spelling skills rescued many editorial types swimming in prose that was over their heads and the heads of their readers. Dad was the toughest editor I ever had. He stressed simplicity in style, claiming that a reporter who paraded an inflated vocabulary was telling the reader little save what a pompous ass he was.

Dad would cite Riley's poems as proof that simplicity and simple-mindedness aren't the same. He said a simple thought, clearly expressed, had far more value than a posturing profundity all dolled up with big words and no place to go.

So, I have a stake in the restoration of Lockerbie

Square. I suspect old Lockerbie is the soil for my newspaper roots.

I've studied at several great universities, but my best education came from simple people who valued reading, writing and ciphering as joys basic to the life and lift of the mind. They reached as high as they could and challenged me to reach beyond their limitations. I've tried to do the same with my sons. Most parents do.

My grandmother took in washing, did seamstress work in department stores and ironed for 25 cents a basket. She could plow a field, shoe a horse and pitch hay with any field hand. She even did some of the carpentry work on the one-room school where she taught. All those hours and labors and she still had time for Walter Scott, Emerson, Whitman, Gibbons, Shakespeare and John Donne.

No wonder James Whitcomb Riley found her an interesting conversationalist. They had lots to talk about. I only regret that I couldn't eavesdrop.

I thank choirmaster Koehring for putting me in touch with my roots. A mental visit to Lockerbie Square is almost as good as being there. I hope David Koehring feels as at home in Long Beach as he did in Indianapolis. There are many Hoosiers here, and their hospitality came with them when they made the move west.

It doesn't matter where you're from; no one is a stranger for long in Long Beach. The people are friendly and warm, which, I suppose, is why I have been able to hold this space for the last three years.

Speaking of holding this space, I won't for the next several days. I'll be in Memorial Hospital, an institution that will treat me but not my electric typewriter.

My physicians want to establish the reasons why insulin has let me down. The daily dosage has continued to rise, with no effect on the blood sugar count, which remains higher than the stock market's closing averages on a good day.

The theory is that there may be a block within my system that prevents the insulin from getting through to do its job. Unlike the Rams, I'd be better off if somebody fell down on blocking assignments.

I'm not a good patient, and I know that whatever the doctors find wrong with me won't be hypochondria. I'd much rather climb the walls of my office and not the walls of Memorial, but there's not much I can do except serve my sentence and get back as soon as I can.

If you have a few Rosary beads or good thoughts left over from church, save one for me. I think I'm going to need it.

Cruel parents

Recently while sitting in a shopping center mall I heard the painful screams of a small child. Two huge angry animals, male and female, were jerking a little child by the arms from side to side all the way down the mall until they turned out of sight. I see this happen frequently, especially around the holidays.

Ignorance or cruelty — the effects are many sore little arms.

I used a shoulder harness for my active, little youngster. It slipped over the shoulders and fastened around the waist, letting the child walk at his own pace with his arms and hands free. This device was highly criticized, probably because it resembled a dog leash, which is used to protect a pet with no harm to the pet. Small children need the same protection. Yet, people are reluctant to use a similar device to protect their children. It seems they would rather pull their arms off.

Pursuing police pursuit

So Mrs. Ruth Snider is going to assign me to two months' duty with our police patrol cars in retaliation for my letter to the editor on police pursuit. How nice of you. It just happens that I have had some experience working with the police going back to my months on Navy Shore Patrol here in Long Beach. Maybe I can start where I left off.

I'm sure, Mrs. Snider, you will arrange it so I'll be compensated for my devotion to duty. Sure need the money, especially since my property tax has doubled.

I take it for granted you still have my article, Mrs. Snider, as you remember my name so well. Please read it over again. Nowhere in this article have I criticized our fine Long Beach Police Department or any other law enforcement agency, for that matter.

Tempting a thief

Most people will agree, I believe, that leaving an unlocked car in front of one's house with the keys in it is not a smart thing to do these days. In fact, we hear about "not helping a young person go wrong by making it simple to commit the crime of stealing a car. However, when the person who did just exactly that is our vice mayor and a city councilman, such a practice reflects on his judgment as well as his intellect.

When such action results in a car being stolen it is bad enough, but when the car is city-owned, one might get the impression that the councilman was indifferent and neglectful of his high position in city government.

Councilman James H. Wilson can hardly expect to be commended for such stupidity.

The Ombudsman Solid issues prove few, far between

"How did you ever get to be an Ombudsman?" asked the woman on the telephone, her voice acid with indictment.

I should have invoked the Fifth Amendment or pleaded non compos mentis. But never once to take the line of least resistance, I essayed an answer:

"It's really quite simple. Each day of my 31 years as a newspaperman I learned less and less about more and more. The day finally came when I knew nothing about everything. It was on that day that I became an Ombudsman."

That was eight months and 54 columns ago, or time enough to learn a few things about what turns readers of the Independent and Press-Telegram on and off. Some random findings:

— Most complaints I receive come from subscribers who claim to be ill-

F. C.
Anderson

served by our Circulation Department. I pass those gripes on to the appropriate quarters and hope justice prevails.

— Typographical errors rank second as causes of reader exasperation. If experience is any guide, a typographical error will pop up in any sentence I write decrying such errors and blaming man and machine, although not necessarily in that order.

— The "good news" lobby continues to fault us for printing bad news: crime, corruption, disaster. They mean well, but they can't define the sort of "good news" they want in place of the bad. It's my suspicion that the apostles of "good news" tend to overlook the stories we carry concerning medical breakthroughs, good Samaritanism, victories over discrimination, education, youth and senior citizen activities and the like.

I MIGHT ALSO point out that an up-state publisher went broke in a few months when he attempted to put out a newspaper that printed only "good news."

— There are those readers who say they're offended by the way we treat sex in our news columns. They claim we delight in salaciousness, in offering pictures of undraped females and gossipy tidbits about fun and games in the boudoir. That's rhetorical overkill on the part of the critics, but I'll concede that we sometimes cross the line into bad taste.

I think we crossed that line on Sunday, Oct. 30, when we devoted 30 inches of news space to a report on the Hookers' Ball in San Francisco. That's about five times as much space as we gave the story about the kidnapped Dutch millionaire. So much for priorities.

IF WE CAN'T cover a fanny, we can at least cover the news.

— Solid issues seem to be few and far between, if my mail and telephone calls from readers is a good index. I hear from far too many nit-pickers and cranks. They waste their time and mine.

The I, P-T is not perfect by any means. We invite criticism and questions about our handling of the news, our fairness or lack of it, our editorial taste, etc.

But you, the readers, are not asking good questions. And I'm not about to ask them for you. Speak up.

I know you're sophisticated, well informed and read the paper more closely than some editors and reporters. I know you have good questions. I'd appreciate you asking them.

Hidden government

Most people still believe that our elected officials are the ones who run our government, but on closer inspection it becomes apparent that in most cases our elected politicians are no more than technicians who carry out the wishes of the real, almost invisible, behind-the-scenes government — the Council of Foreign Relations, the Trilateral Commission, the Bilderberger Group, et al.

The objective of these insiders is to change the political and economic structure of the United States so that it can be comfortably merged with the Soviet Union in a world government.

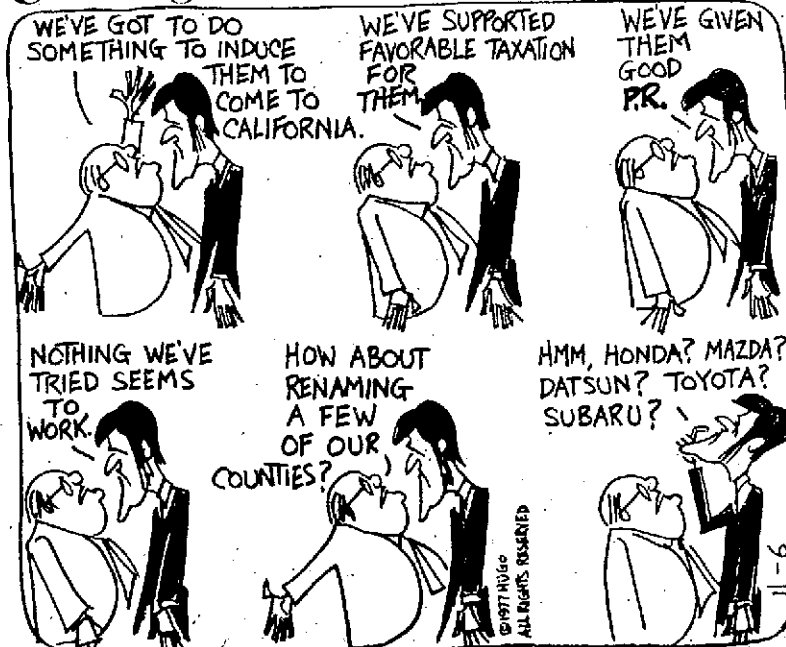

This would, of course, be a totalitarian, socialist world government, with these insiders in complete control. For most of the last four decades, under their guidance, our government has played a dual role, being ostensibly opposed to communism while, at the same time, surreptitiously aiding, abetting, financing and furthering the spread of communism throughout the world (even under the guise of opposing communism), and doing everything possible to harass, discredit and gradually destroy our free-enterprise system.

Now, however, for the first time, their pretense of being against communism has been all but completely dropped. Note, for instance, how the government and the media are talking about various sanctions against the Union of South Africa, ostensibly because it is "racist," but actually because it is the last strong, anti-communist government in all of Africa, while simultaneously giving our Panama Canal to Omar Torrijos, a Marxist dictator who heads a far more repressive government than that of South Africa. Our canal is not being given to him in spite of, but rather because of, his Marxist affiliations.

The insiders are confident that through their "liberal" media they have the American public too brainwashed to see what is happening. Are we?

Bring back the P.E.

I just couldn't pass up this one opportunity to sound off about the article, "Revising the L.B. Red Cars no easy task."

Let me take exception to that statement. Standard Oil and others found it quite easy to destroy the only rapid transit we've seen in Southern California just to introduce smog-producing, environmental monsters called buses to burn up our natural fuel. Real great!

I also enjoyed that statement, "The Big Red Cars that once clattered..." Yes, clattered at better than 60 miles an hour. This is rapid transit. They connected Long Beach to Los Angeles, a 20-mile journey, and did it in 20 minutes with four — yes, four! — major stops, not including the Bixby area stop. Yes sir, 20 minutes; and you can't do that today. No way!

Yes, Standard Oil put your rapid transit down the drain, and City Hall hasn't got the guts to put it back. Remember, it used good, clean electricity, not stinky petroleum! Hurray for outspoken Mr. Robert Swan.

Further note: Those old-style steel wheels on the Red Cars can be replaced with plastic wheels that are silent. Notice the spiral ride at Knott's Berry Farm.

I used to ride the Big Red Cars, a mile-a-minute and better, to Los Angeles, San Bernardino and even to Huntington Beach, Newport and Balboa — and never had but one transfer. Try that today with your stinking, smoke-belching buses that rattle worse than the Red Cars ever did!

As I continue to read: Now you want to insert government money and control. Where do you get this socialistic, communistic idea from? Our banks and building and loan associations could reinstate the rapid transit without government help and make money on the project.

We've got to get off our bumptkins and reinstate an up-dated P.E. (Pacific Electric) as P.E., not RTD. They've done nothing but cook the goose that laid the golden egg. Let's get behind a few thinkers in this city and get something done. Let's try getting Robert Swan on the City Council, as mayor, if necessary. Let's also get Sid Solomon with him, as both of these men are thinkers, not stinkers.

A torrent of Washington books

WASHINGTON — Of making many books, said the preacher, there is no end. He might have been thinking of the Washington press corps. This year has seen a torrent of books — fiction, non-fiction, history and biography — pouring forth from Washington fountains. During a recent four-day bout with a flu bug, I swallowed a bunch of them; they went down like so many vitamin pills.

A new genre plainly is developing in the world of the novel. Taking up wherever Allen Drury left off, whole platoons of talented newcomers are improving up on the Washington novel that Drury more or less invented. Three corking good stories have come along.

Why halt the mail?

Is there not a motto which praises the Postal Service's determination to deliver the mail, come what may?

Well, to my surprise, the local post office at Bixby Knolls recently informed me there was an embargo on surface mail destined for the British Isles because of the longshoremen's strike on the East and Gulf coasts, and if I wanted my Christmas package to be accepted, it would have to go air mail at a cost of about three times the regular surface mail rate.

I could understand the need for an embargo on surface mail if the only route was via the East Coast or Gulf ports, but I cannot understand why the post office is not approaching the members of the Pacific Coast European Steamship Conference to carry the mail to Europe and the British Isles at least during the emergency.

These vessel operators provide regular and dependable service from most Pacific Coast ports.

City in "distress"?

Federal grants to a "distressed city?" You can't be serious! A city that can spend $150 million (purchase and conversion totaled about $62 million — Editor) on a stupid ship and find an additional $2 million annually to keep it afloat, and still have the nerve to be put in the category of being in "distress" in order to be bailed out by the federal government. Our national anthem

Recently a number of people have been putting down our national anthem because of its violent nature. If this is the case, I feel they aren't going far enough.

I propose that we change Anchors Aweigh to Red Sails in the Sunset, abolish the Marine Hymn altogether, change Semper Fidelis to Tiptoe Through the Tulips, and perhaps Poor Butterfly would be nice for the Air Force. Of course, the Caissons Go Rolling Along simply must be replaced by that old song, Wagon Wheels. As for the Coast Guard, perhaps Row, Row, Row Your Boat might be nice.

As for America the Beautiful for our anthem, which America would be singing about, North or South? If its North America, that includes Canada and Mexico, so the song would be describing a continent and not a country. Frankly I don't think Canada or Mexico would willingly become part of this county just to make America the Beautiful come out right as our national anthem. All that leaves is United States the Beautiful. It just doesn't sound right to me.

No love lost

Recently, the vice president referred to another politician (the senior senator from Minnesota) as the most "loved" man in the country. The vice president is deluding himself.

Politicians are not "loved" by common people. Politicians are not "liked" by common people. Politicians are grudgingly tolerated by common people.

In spite of their alleged stupidity, common people know that a thoroughly honest person wouldn't have a chance of winning any election.

and Ted Koppel. The novel represents a splendid merger of talent from CBS and ABC. Both correspondents have spent years in the far end of the Mediterranean, and they write with a sure feeling for the area and its people. Their sex is pretty good, too. How do reporters get so smart?

Three books deal with the presidential campaign of 1976, with particular emphasis upon the Jimmy Carter team. Jules Witcover's "Marathon," from Viking, is a solid, workmanlike survey of Carter's pursuit of the presidency from the time in 1972 when the Georgian made his clumsy bid for second place on the McGovern ticket. A less comprehensive account, though it is better documented in some ways, is Martin Schram's "Running for President 1976." Both of these books are the work of major leaguers.

THE BEST in this division, not surprisingly, is Elizabeth Drew's "American Journal." It comes from Random House. Just as her "Washington Journal" provided the best comprehensive look at Watergate, so this big book splendidly covers the larger scene of 1976. Squarely in the midst of the Ford-Reagan fight for delegates, she inserts a cool sentence:

"Today the United States landed on Mars."

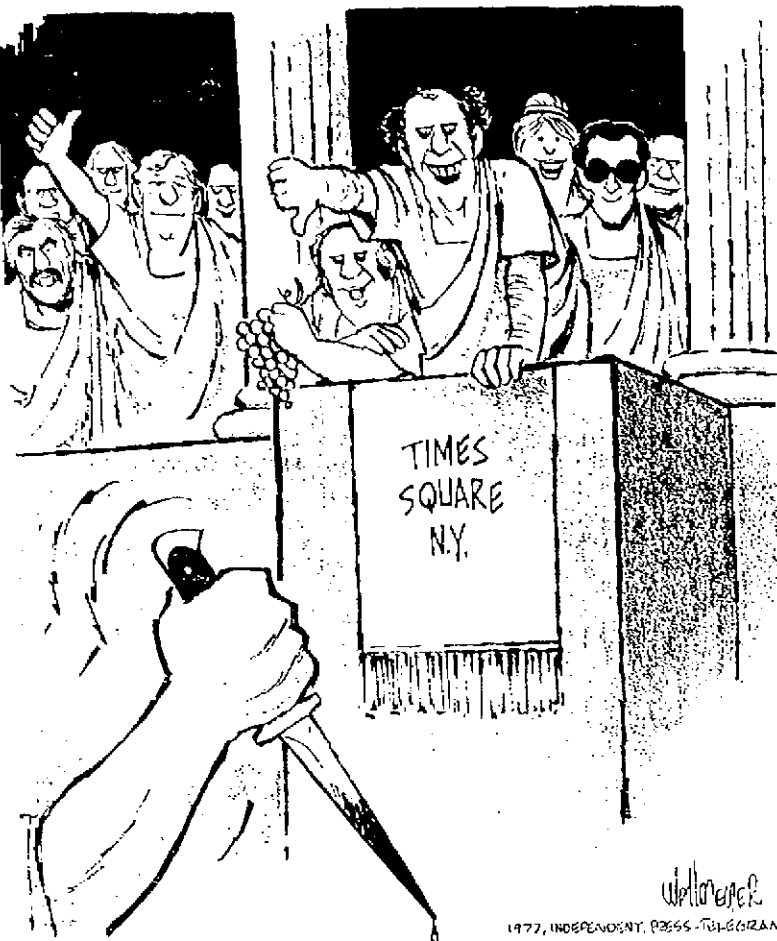

Mrs. Drew's great gift as a reporter is to keep things in perspective. She is a pensive person, quiet, reserved, with an unusual knack of detaching herself from the events she covers. She works at her craft, incessantly interviewing the men and women who make news; she does her own leg work, notebook in hand; she thinks before she starts batting out copy.

For a single, penetrating look at what it was like, July 4, 1976, Mrs. Drew's 500-word account captures the essence. In the afternoon, when the bells began ringing at the National Cathedral, she could go out in her backyard and hear them. In the evening, she and some friends "drank beer and ate hamburgers and chocolate cake until it grew dark," and then watched the fireworks exploding.

THESE LITTLE explosions of personal observation make her "American Journal" something more than mere political analysis. She catches former Speaker Carl Albert in half a line: He was "wearing a greenish suit and a sad face." She looks intently at Rosalynn Carter, trying to read her face: "It is a pleasant face, but it does not convey warmth, it is not expressive. It is as if it were molded, perhaps of metal." She looks at John Connally of Texas. He is a "large man of large ambition," but he "seems to be always trying on different masks." This is Elizabeth Drew, reporter. She can't be beat.

Finally, three works of biography. The venerable Holmes Alexander, who at 71 is dean of the working newspaper columnists, has written a popular, unpretentious work on Alexander Hamilton, "To Covet Honor." Robert J. Donovan, who earlier wrote the definitive book on Dwight Eisenhower, has done a superlative work on Harry Truman, "Conflict and Crisis." And John Bartlow Martin, who now teaches journalism at Northwestern, has given us a full-blown study of "Adlai Stevenson and the World."

All these books, even the novels, bear the unmistakable hallmark of the good reporter. If you have the time and the inclination for one book only, buy Drew. Hers will last.

The veterans' 'bonus'

The proposal to eliminate the 10-point "bonus" given veterans on City of Long Beach civil service tests, now before the City Council's charter amendment committee, undoubtedly will be heatedly opposed by veterans' organizations.

That opposition, however, will primarily be emotional — centering on the alleged injustice of taking away a benefit which was given to men, and a few women, for serving their country.

Councilman Ernie Kell expressed this point of view when he said the bonus is "a small price to pay for those who served their country and (often) risked their lives."

THE TROUBLE IS, it is not such a "small price" to non-veterans, particularly women, who seek civil service jobs in Long Beach. It may well cost them any opportunity for city employment.

Women have had little access to military service, even in wartime, and when they take a civil service exam the 10-point bonus granted veterans virtually excludes them from consideration for a job. Other non-veterans, many whose age kept them out of service, likewise are overwhelmed by the 10-point cushion enjoyed by veterans.

There have been numerous instances of a person finishing in the top three or four in a civil service exam — until the veterans' preference was added. Then they are dropped so far down the list as to have no chance of being hired. This means also that lesser qualified people often win the jobs.

Words on hijacking

The United Nations' resolution condemning aircraft hijacking is encouraging, because it is the first time the General Assembly has been able to agree on any kind of statement on this most critical problem.

It mollified the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations sufficiently so that the organization has agreed to hold in abeyance its planned protest strike to demand stronger measures against hijackers.

We can't help being a little skeptical, however.

We much prefer the approach suggested last Thursday by Brock Adams, U.S. secretary of transportation, who warned that airline operating rights in the United States may be suspended for countries and airlines which refuse to observe antihijacking policies.

This is the first time the United

In 1975, Long Beach voters approved a charter amendment which put a 10-year limit on applications for veterans preference. In effect, it limited the veterans' preference to men and women who served in the Vietnam War.

The city's Civil Service Board is now recommending that the veterans' preference be abolished completely. Again, it would require a charter amendment, approved by city voters.

Don Davis, chairman of the Civil Service Board, said in a letter to the council that commissioners now believe "the provision of extra points to veterans is no longer required and tends to prohibit free competition for positions."

There can be no argument that it does, indeed, prohibit free competition. The only question is whether that is justified in the interests of aiding veterans.

THE VETERANS' preference originally was established to offset the competitive edge gained in civilian employment by those whose lives were not interrupted by military service. Relatively few other benefits for veterans existed at that time.

Today, veterans receive educational, medical and employment benefits. Further, men and women are not being drafted into the armed forces, but are choosing to enlist voluntarily.

We agree with the Civil Service Board that the veterans' preference has outlived its usefulness, and that it is especially unfair to women. We urge the City Council to approve submitting a charter amendment on the matter to Long Beach voters.

States has threatened such action, and we believe it is high time.

Brock said the United States wants international adherence to three treaties on air safety standards, hijacking and sabotage, drafted in 1961, 1970 and 1971 by the International Civil Aviation Organization. He said the U.S. initially is looking to the ICAO and the United Nations for action.

"However, we are prepared to exercise statutory powers to suspend air service to those nations which provide a safe haven to hijackers, or fly into those countries," Brock warned.

Only positive action such as this will bring any solution to the problem of hijacking and terrorism. The U.N. resolution, after all, is just words — and, as we said in an earlier editorial, solving this problem will take more than words.

Part of Watergate scheme

Subverting U.S. civil service

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most audacious of the Watergate schemes was Richard Nixon's attempt to Nixonize the federal bureaucracy and bring it under his tight, personal control. Without the consent of Congress, he intended to increase the power of the presidency in a revolutionary way.

If he had been able to pull it off, it would have amounted almost to a coup against our existing form of government. He succeeded to a degree in subverting the Civil Service Commission, which is supposed to protect the professional bureaucracy from political encroachment.

The story of Nixon's attempted coup has never been fully told, and the conspirators have never been held accountable. In fact, the commission is still populated at its upper levels by officials who helped him subvert the civil service system. Here are the details:

NIXON HAD AN intense distrust of the millions who compose the permanent government. He often complained that the federal bureaucracy was dominated by "liberals" and "academics." He would confide to intimates that a "Jewish cabal" had taken over this office or that agency. He issued orders that no more "Ivy Leaguers" should be appointed to high positions.

Nixon's denigration of the civil service system led the White House to begin a quiet political purge. Those who were considered unreliable were shunted into obscure jobs and replaced by people with Nixon credentials. The White House also set up a political clearance system, which checked the political philosophies and connections of hundreds of new applicants for government jobs.

This subversion of the regular institutions of government, of course, was conducted in the utmost secrecy. Even in the backrooms of the White House, Nixon aides were careful not to refer to it in political terms. Admonished the White House hatchetman in charge of the purge, Fred Malek: "I propose we stop calling it 'politicizing the executive branch' and instead call it something like strengthening the government's responsiveness." The euphemism stuck, and the operation became known thereafter as the Responsiveness Program.

BY EXECUTIVE decree, President Nixon also sought to create around himself a super-cabinet of loyal aides who would have total power over the bureaucracy. This would force his policies upon the government through White House agents who would be installed in every department.

Nixon, meanwhile, intended to encapsulate himself from unnecessary turmoil, devote his energies to formulating policies and deal regularly only with those select few who were on his personal wave length. He would leave it to them to enforce his edicts through a political system that would turn the bureaucracy into an unquestioning, subservient arm of the White House.

But he found out that a seething enterprise like the federal government could not be compartmentalized, cordoned off and led from a glass bubble. He left behind, nevertheless, civil service officials who not only supported his power play but who allegedly destroyed documents to prevent Congress from learning of the abuses.

The transition team, which helped turn over the reins of government to Jimmy Carter, was sharply critical of several career people at the Civil Service Commission. Although the transition papers have been kept secret, inside sources say the final report pointed an accusatory finger, for example, at John Cole.

He heads the powerful Bureau of Personnel Management Evaluation, which has the authority to examine the personnel practices of any government agency. Yet despite the critical evaluation of his own performance, Cole is still evaluating others. Furthermore, the commission has no plans to transfer him.

This has upset Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., who has been keeping a watchful congressional eye on the commission for years. He has written a stinging, secret letter to President Carter calling for the removal not only of Cole but of the executive director, Ray Jacobson.

Declares the letter: "Suspending the authority of (Jacobson and Cole) is essential. Until questions of document destruction and concealment of the commission's role in violating the merit system are answered, these individuals should not be allowed to exercise authority."

Some of the past abuses may yet wind up in court. Congressional critics complain that the Justice Department has been less than vigorous about investigating these excesses of the Nixon era. But Civil Service Chairman Alan Campbell says he was assured by high Justice officials only last week that the investigation is still active.

Another scandal, meanwhile, has been bubbling at the Civil Service Commission. This is the agency that is supposed to enforce anti-discrimination standards throughout the government. Yet apparently the commission itself is guilty of discrimination. Its equal employment director, Clinton Smith, complained in a memo, meant for official eyes only, that top commission officials are impeding efforts "to effectively enforce, internally the very laws and regulations the Civil Service Commission is responsible for enforcing in the government-wide merit and (equal opportunity) programs."

The Nixonian approach to government, meanwhile, was aborted by Watergate.

Footnote: Spokesmen for the Civil Service Commission claim that steps are now being taken to investigate all the allegations. The general counsel has been ordered to review the equal opportunity program, and an outside authority will investigate allegations that the commission violated the merit system.

Bombs, birds, planes at Seal Beach depot?

WASHINGTON — There seems to be some thought that the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station should be turned into an air strip for small planes.

At least the Orange County Board of Supervisors has ordered a study of such a possibility.

There may, however, be a few objections from the U.S. Navy, and from other folks.

Several years back there was a hefty little battle over the station. The state wanted to build a freeway through the station at Anaheim Bay. The Navy wondered quietly whether a freeway would be compatible with atom bombs.

Gil Bailey

View from Civil National Bureau

It isn't an item that the Navy headlines, but it is true that among the items of ordnance stored at the weapons station are atomic bombs.

Small planes also may not be compatible with such weapons.

During that battle over a freeway, some alliances were formed.

Anaheim Bay is the only viable salt marsh between Santa Barbara and Orange County. Salt marshes are necessary for the life cycle of roughly two-thirds of marine life.

In addition the marshes and bay of the station provided a nesting place for rare and endangered birds and other wild life.

So the conservationists proposed that the weapons station be turned into a wildlife refuge. Strangely enough, stored weapons of death are compatible with wildlife. The key is that not many people are allowed to bother the animals, and the weapons of death, on the station.

Former Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach, not always considered an ardent environmentalist, agreed this time with the conservationists. He authored, and saw passed, legislation that created a wildlife refuge on the station.

The Department of the Interior, California State University of Long Beach scientists and the Navy are now cooperating in preserving this one, small area of open space left in the sprawling metropolitan area of Long Beach-Orange County.

And, if and when the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station goes out of existence, the Department of Interior's Bureau of Fish and Wildlife is supposed to have first crack at the station grounds.

INTERIOR MAY ALSO wonder about the compatibility of small planes and a wildlife refuge.

Overall, two thirds of the salt marshes of California have already been filled. It may be that an airport would harm this one.

The proposed runway site would be near ammunition bunkers on the south side of Westminster Boulevard. Even if the runway did not immediately damage the refuge, it is possible that an accidental meeting between a small plane and an ammunition bunker could damage lots of life forms, including humans.

State survey to cost $1 million; Phone company pays only $8,000

SACRAMENTO — California's government has such an enormous amount of money at its disposal that it's understandable, if not excusable, that the care given to its use is sometimes not as great as it might be if the treasury was less full.

Sometimes, it has been suggested, the incentive to spend exceeds the incentive to spend wisely.

For instance, if a state agency participates in a federal program which provides 10 federal dollars for every state dollar budgeted for the activity, it becomes important to use all 10 of those dollars. If they don't get used, next year the feds might give you only seven or eight dollars for every state dollar budgeted, and that would take away a considerable amount of budgeting flexibility.

Maybe the state Department of Rehabilitation doesn't operate that way. Maybe its use of nearly $100 million this year is carefully calculated to be of maximum benefit to California's physically and mentally handicapped citizens.

But the department invites the criticism that its use of the money available to it illustrates the "Let's spend it, quick, before we lose it," syndrome.

THE STORY: Although the department has existed under one name or another for more than 60 years, it does not know just how many of what kind of handicapped people there are in the state. Legitimately, it wants to find out, the better to determine the kinds and amounts of services needed.

Is that information worth a million dollars? That's what the department is paying for it. It contracted with the University of California, specifically with Howard A. Freeman of the UCLA Institute for Social Science Research and J. Merrill Shanks of the UC Berkeley Survey Research Center, to conduct a telephone survey of some 30,000 Californians and extrapolate the data so the desired numbers can be assumed.

Late last spring, a Sacramento-based columnist, Earl Waters, began examining the survey, and this newspaper ran a story which included Waters' discovery that the Pacific Telephone Co. had commissioned a similar study from which it obtained data on California's handicapped persons — at a cost of $8,000.

Department officials said the telephone company's information was inadequate for its needs. Accept that. Accept, further, that the information now being obtained for the department could not have been obtained at a price less than $1 million and is worth every penny of that $1 million.

Accept as fact that for the people in the state Department of Rehabilitation the interests of handicapped persons are paramount.

Still, information uncovered recently on the background of the survey invites questions about the attitude department officials have toward taxpayers' money and toward their relationship with the Legislature.

Bob Schmidt

Speculation is invited about the sequence: Was there first a determination that the information was needed, followed by a search for money to finance the study? Or was there first a realization that the department had more money than it had estimated it needed, followed by a search for ways to spend the surplus?

"The department had some federal money which was not going to be expended on client services," acknowledges Gordon Cumming, deputy director of Rehabilitation's Program Development Division.

"The Department of Health also had some unused federal money. Rather than turn it back, we felt we had the opportunity now and we grabbed it."

The state budget process is simple enough to outline. Departments list what they do, estimate the cost of doing it, submit a request to the governor who reviews it, reduces it, usually, and submits it in turn to the Legislature along with all his other budget recommendations.

The Legislature then makes its own review, hears from each department, makes whatever change it deems appropriate, and returns a budget to the governor who can reduce, but not increase, any item.

So along with determining how much is to be spent, the Legislature also determines what programs are to be funded.

But it was never asked to provide funds for the Rehabilitation survey. The department found the funds, and entirely on its own decided how to spend them.

THAT'S NOT THE way it's supposed to be. Not when the expenditure is $1 million. With Rehabilitation's disdain for the normal budgeting process so clearly evident, its contention that the $1 million price tag is, in Cumming's word, "reasonable," is not easy to accept.

Especially in view of Pacific Telephone's $8,000 figure, and the fact it knew that George Gallup in 1973 said he could accumulate the raw data for $130,000 — and that it knew that the U.S. Census Bureau plans to acquire the same information in 1980 during the decennial nose count and would make it available to California a few years later. Cruel parents

Recently while sitting in a shopping center mall I heard the painful screams of a small child. Two huge angry animals, male and female, were jerking a little child by the arms from side to side all the way down the mall until they turned out of sight. I see this happen frequently, especially around the holidays.

Ignorance or cruelty — the effects are many sore little arms.

I used a shoulder harness for my active little youngster. It slipped over the shoulders and fastened around the waist, letting the child walk at his own pace with his arms and hands free. This device was highly criticized, probably because it resembled a dog leash, which is used to protect a pet with no harm to the pet. Small children need the same protection. Yet, people are reluctant to use a similar device to protect their children. It seems they would rather pull their arms off.

Pursuing police pursuit

So Mrs. Ruth Snider is going to assign me to two months' duty with our police patrol cars in retaliation for my letter to the editor on police pursuit. How nice of you. It just happens that I have had some experience working with the police going back to my months on Navy Shore Patrol here in Long Beach. Maybe I can start where I left off.

I'm sure, Mrs. Snider, you will arrange it so I'll be compensated for my devotion to duty. Sure need the money, especially since my property tax has doubled.

I take it for granted you still have my article, Mrs. Snider, as you remember my name so well. Please read it over again. Nowhere in this article have I criticized our fine Long Beach Police Department or any other law enforcement agency, far that matter.

Tempting a thief

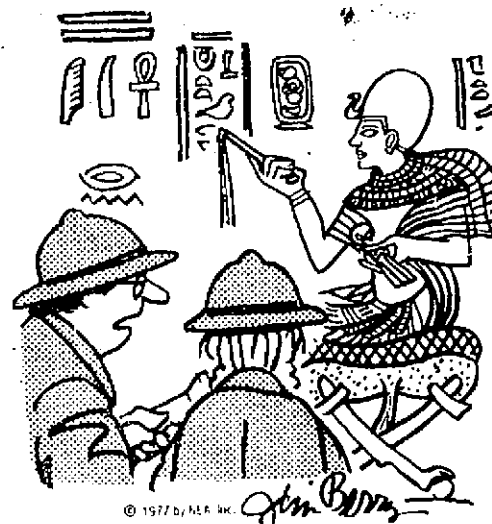

Most people will agree, I believe, that leaving an unlocked car in front of one's house with the keys in it is not a smart thing to do these days. In fact, we hear about "not helping a young person go wrong by making it simple to commit the crime of stealing a car. However, when the person who did just exactly that is our vice mayor and a city councilman, such a practice reflects on his judgment as well as his intellect.

When such action results in a car being stolen it is bad enough, but when the car is city-owned, one might get the impression that the councilman was indifferent and neglectful of his high position in city government.

Councilman James H. Wilson can hardly expect to be commended for such stupidity.

The Ombudsman

Solid issues prove few, far between

"How did you ever get to be an Ombudsman?" asked the woman on the telephone, her voice acid with indictment.

I should have invoked the Fifth Amendment or pleaded non compos mentis. But never one to take the line of least resistance, I essayed an answer:

"It's really quite simple. Each day of my 31 years as a newspaperman I learned less and less about more and more. The day finally came when I knew nothing about everything. It was on that day that I became an Ombudsman."

That was eight months and 54 columns ago, or time enough to learn a few things about what turns readers of the Independent and Press-Telegram on and off. Some random findings:

— Most complaints I receive come from subscribers who claim to be ill-

F. C.
Anderson

served by our Circulation Department. I pass those gripes on to the appropriate quarters and hope justice prevails.

— Typographical errors rank second as causes of reader exasperation. If experience is any guide, a typographical error will pop up in any sentence I write decrying such errors and blaming man and machine, although not necessarily in that order.

— The "good news" lobby continues to fault us for printing bad news: crime, corruption, disaster. They mean well, but they can't define the sort of "good news" they want in place of the bad. It's my suspicion that the apostles of "good news" tend to overlook the stories we carry concerning medical breakthroughs, good Samaritanism, victories over discrimination, education, youth and senior citizen activities and the like.

I MIGHT ALSO point out that an up-state publisher went broke in a few months when he attempted to put out a newspaper that printed only "good news."

— There are those readers who say they're offended by the way we treat sex in our news columns. They claim we delight in salaciousness, in offering pictures of undraped females and gossipy tidbits about fun and games in the boudoir. That's rhetorical overkill on the part of the critics, but I'll concede that we sometimes cross the line into bad taste.

I think we crossed that line on Sunday, Oct. 30, when we devoted 30 inches of news space to a report on the Hookers' Ball in San Francisco. That's about five times as much space as we gave the story about the kidnapped Dutch millionaire. So much for priorities.

IF WE CAN'T cover a fanny, we can at least cover the news.

— Solid issues seem to be few and far between. If my mail and telephone calls from readers is a good index, I hear from far too many nit-pickers and cranks. They waste their time and mine.

The I, P-T is not perfect by any means. We invite criticism and questions about our handling of the news, our fairness or lack of it, our editorial taste, etc.

But you, the readers, are not asking good questions. And I'm not about to ask them for you. Speak up.

I know you're sophisticated, well informed and read the paper more closely than some editors and reporters. I know you have good questions. I'd appreciate you asking them.

Hidden government

Most people still believe that our elected officials are the ones who run our government, but on closer inspection it becomes apparent that in most cases our elected politicians are no more than technicians who carry out the wishes of the real, almost invisible, behind-the-scenes government — the Council of Foreign Relations, the Trilateral Commission, the Bilderberger Group, et al.

The objective of these insiders is to change the political and economic structure of the United States so that it can be comfortably merged with the Soviet Union in a world government.

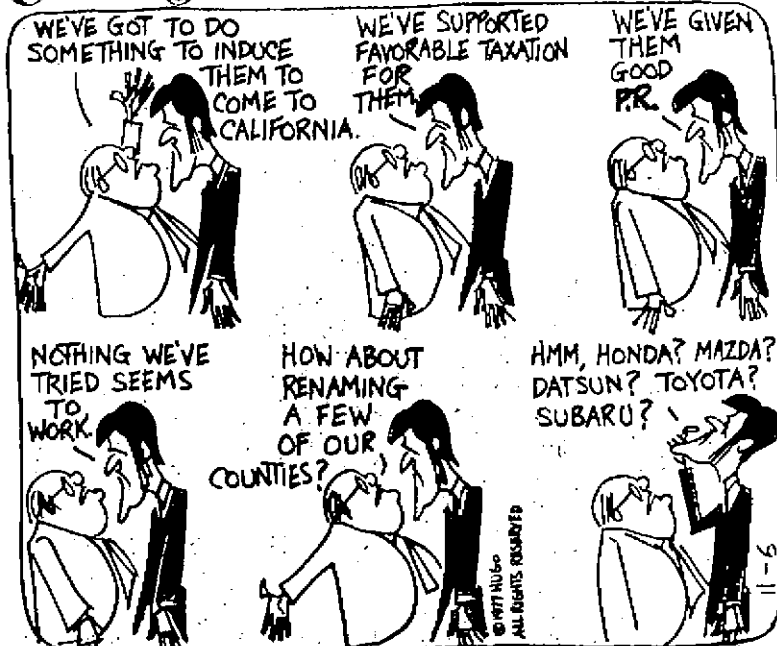

This would, of course, be a totalitarian, socialist world government, with these insiders in complete control. For most of the last four decades, under their guidance, our government has played a dual role, being ostensibly opposed to communism while, at the same time, surreptitiously aiding, abetting, financing and furthering the spread of communism throughout the world (even under the guise of opposing communism), and doing everything possible to harass, discredit and gradually destroy our free-enterprise system.

Now, however, for the first time, their pretense of being against communism has been all but completely dropped. Note, for instance, how the government and the media are talking about various sanctions against the Union of South Africa, ostensibly because it is "racist," but actually because it is the last strong, anti-communist government in all of Africa, while simultaneously giving our Panama Canal to Omar Torrijos, a Marxist dictator who heads a far more repressive government than that of South Africa. Our canal is not being given to him in spite of, but rather because of, his Marxist affiliations.

The insiders are confident that through their "liberal" media they have the American public too brainwashed to see what is happening. Are we?

Bring back the P.E.

I just couldn't pass up this one opportunity to sound off about the article, "Reviving the L.B. Red Cars no easy task."

Let me take exception to that statement. Standard Oil and others found it quite easy to destroy the only rapid transit we've seen in Southern California just to introduce smog-producing, environmental monsters called buses to burn up our natural fuel. Real great!

I also enjoyed that statement, "The Big Red Cars that once clattered..." Yes, clattered at better than 60 miles an hour. This is rapid transit. They connected Long Beach to Los Angeles, a 20-mile journey, and did it in 20 minutes with four — yes, four! — major stops, not including the Bixby area stop. Yes sir, 20 minutes; and you can't do that today. No way!

Yes, Standard Oil put your rapid transit down the drain, and City Hall hasn't got the guts to put it back. Remember, it used good, clean electricity, not stinky petroleum! Hurray for outspoken Mr. Robert Swan.

Further note: Those old-style steel wheels on the Red Cars can be replaced with plastic wheels that are silent. Notice the spiral ride at Knott's Berry Farm.

I used to ride the Big Red Cars, a mile-a-minute and better, to Los Angeles, San Bernardino and even to Huntington Beach, Newport and Balboa — and never had but one transfer. Try that today with your stinking, smoke-belching buses that rattle worse than the Red Cars ever did!

As I continue to read: Now you want to insert government money and control. Where do you get this socialistic, communistic idea from? Our banks and building and loan associations could reinstate the rapid transit without government help and make money on the project.

We've got to get off our bumptkins and reinstate an up-dated P.E. (Pacific Electric) as P.E., not RTD. They've done nothing but cook the goose that laid the golden egg. Let's get behind a few thinkers in this city and get something done. Let's try getting Robert Swan on the City Council, as mayor, if necessary. Let's also get Sid Solomon with him, as both of these men are thinkers, not stinkers.

'Safire's is the liveliest'

A torrent of Washington books

WASHINGTON — Of making many books, said the preacher, there is no end. He might have been thinking of the Washington press corps. This year has seen a torrent of books — fiction, non-fiction, history and biography — pouring forth from Washington fountains. During a recent four-day bout with a flu bug, I swallowed a bunch of them; they went down like so many vitamin pills.

A new genre plainly is developing in the world of the novel. Taking up wherever Allen Drury left off, whole platoons of talented newcomers are improving up on the Washington novel that Drury more or less invented. Three corking good stories have come along.

The liveliest of the lot is William Safire's "Full Disclosure," the tale of a future president who conceals a vital part of his medical history from the people. It's full of sex, suspense, and sis-boom bah, and if it suffers from too much meller-drammer, who cares? In the same vein, with less sex but more plausibility, is "Against All Enemies," by Ervin S. Duggan and Ben J. Wattenberg. The novel is a can't-put-it-downer.

Just out from Simon & Schuster is "In the National Interest," a slam-bang yarn of Middle Eastern intrigue by Marvin Kalb and Ted Koppel. The novel represents a splendid merger of talent from CBS and ABC. Both correspondents have spent years in the far end of the Mediterranean, and they write with a sure feeling for the area and its people. Their sex is pretty good, too. How do reporters get so smart?

James J.
Kilpatrick

Three books deal with the presidential campaign of 1976, with particular emphasis upon the Jimmy Carter team. Jules Witcover's "Marathon," from Viking, is a solid, workmanlike survey of Carter's pursuit of the presidency from the time in 1972 when the Georgian made his clumsy bid for second place on the McGovern ticket. A less comprehensive account, though it is better documented in some ways, is Martin Schram's "Running for President 1976." Both of these books are the work of major leaguers.

THE BEST in this division, not surprisingly, is Elizabeth Drew's "American Journal." It comes from Random House. Just as her "Washington Journal" provided the best comprehensive look at Watergate, so this big book splendidly covers the larger scene of 1976. Squarely in the midst of the Ford-Reagan fight for delegates, she inserts a cool sentence:

Our national anthem

Recently a number of people have been putting down our national anthem because of its violent nature. If this is the case, I feel they aren't going far enough.

I propose that we change Anchors Aweigh to Red Sails in the Sunset, abolish the Marine Hymn altogether, change Semper Fidelis to Tiptoe Through the Tulips, and perhaps Poor Butterfly would be nice for the Air Force. Of course, the Caissons Go Rolling Along simply must be replaced by that old song, Wagon Wheels. As for the Coast Guard, perhaps Row, Row, Row Your Boat might be nice.

As for America the Beautiful for our anthem, which America would be singing about, North or South? If its North America, that includes Canada and Mexico, so the song would be describing a continent and not a country. Frankly I don't think Canada or Mexico would willingly become part of this county just to make America the Beautiful come out right as our national anthem. All that leaves is United States the Beautiful. It just doesn't sound right to me.

No love lost

Recently, the vice president referred to another politician (the senior senator from Minnesota) as the most "loved" man in the country. The vice president is deluding himself.

Politicians are not "loved" by common people. Politicians are not "liked" by common people. Politicians are grudgingly tolerated by common people.

In spite of their alleged stupidity, common people know that a thoroughly honest person wouldn't have a chance of winning any election.

"Today the United States landed on Mars."

Mrs. Drew's great gift as a reporter is to keep things in perspective. She is a pensive person, quiet, reserved, with an unusual knack of detaching herself from the events she covers. She works at her craft, incessantly interviewing the men and women who make news; she does her own leg work, notebook in hand; she thinks before she starts batting out copy.

For a single, penetrating look at what it was like, July 4, 1976, Mrs. Drew's 500-word account captures the essence. In the afternoon, when the bells began ringing at the National Cathedral, she could go out in her backyard and hear them. In the evening, she and some friends "drank beer and ate hamburgers and chocolate cake until it grew dark," and then watched the fireworks exploding.

THESE LITTLE explosions of personal observation make her "American Journal" something more than mere political analysis. She catches former Speaker Carl Albert in half a line: He was "wearing a greenish suit and a sad face." She looks intently at Rosalynn Carter, trying to read her face: "It is a pleasant face, but it does not convey warmth, it is not expressive. It is as if it were molded, perhaps of metal." She looks at John Connally of Texas. He is a "large man of large ambition," but he "seems to be always trying on different masks." This is Elizabeth Drew, reporter. She can't be beat.

Finally, three works of biography. The venerable Holmes Alexander, who at 71 is dean of the working newspaper columnists; has written a popular, unpretentious work on Alexander Hamilton, "To Covenant Honor." Robert J. Donovan, who earlier wrote the definitive book on Dwight Eisenhower, has done a superlative work on Harry Truman, "Conflict and Crisis." And John Bartlow Martin, who now teaches journalism at Northwestern, has given us a full-blown study of "Adlai Stevenson and the World."

All these books, even the novels, bear the unmistakable hallmark of the good reporter. If you have the time and the inclination for one book only, buy Drew. Hers will last.

Princess Margaret a nibbling doll

NEW YORK — Princess Margaret was a doll.

Her Royal Highness nibbled a potato chip at a cocktail reception just like us commoners. She smoked numerous cigarettes through a gold holder, applauded the acts brought on by M.C. Walter Cronkite, lost her voice from trying to talk to all the society guests and finally packed it in about 11:30 and left the dinner-dance of the Anglo-American Contemporary Dance Group at the Pierre, where she was the honor guest.

"The princess was charming—too bad she doesn't smile more often," some people said.

She sat between Elizabeth Taylor's husband, John Warner, and British Consul General Gordon Booth, while Liz sat across the table, her own jewels seeming to outsparkle the royal gems.

Some guest were told that it would be nice if they curtsied.

Mayor Abe Beame's wife, Mary, told me: "I don't know how to curtsy. I never learned."

The Countess of Snowdon, as she was listed in the invitations, was accessible to photographers and even to a few writers in the reception in the Yellowbird Room.

In fact, I spoke to her twice.

"We've met before," Her Highness said to me.

"Yes, about five minutes ago," I said.

Courteously she told me she'd gone to a New York theater — "the first time I'd ever gone to a theater here" — to see "Bubbling Brown Sugar."

Her Highness added that she loved New York "the same as usual." She apologized for her hoarseness.

Cronkite got Liz Taylor up to draw door prizes. When Liz read a number, Cronkite said, "Wait — that's not a raffle number. You just drew somebody's phone number."

Candice Bergen, who took home potato pan-cakes from the Stage Deli, sent 'em a photo inscribed: "Dear Fellas, You have made me a very happy guy." (It's in the window.)

There was a lot of acting talent at one table at the premiere party for "An Almost Perfect Person" — director Zoe Caldwell, Colleen Dewhurst, Hume Cronyn, Jessica Tandy, Max Von Sydow, Maureen Stapleton, Werner Klemperer. . . . Henry Winkler told "Midday Live" host Bill Boggs that the Fonz would be with him "until I'm fertilizer. Fonzie will be in reruns until I'm in another sphere."

Dozens of photographers crowded around Cher and Greg Allman on the first day of rehearsals for their tour. Greg cracked, "Do I get any wallet-size pictures?"

EARL'S PEARLS: A Broadway casting director says too many untalented people want to be on the stage: "Many of them wouldn't even make a good audience."

Home is where the heartburn is. That's Earl, brother.

Fun Couple

Viola Harris and William Countryman are featured in the Neil Simon comedy "Barefoot in the Park" on stage through Nov. 20 at the Harlequin Dinner Playhouse in Santa Ana.

'Crucible' to be staged in Costa Mesa

Arthur Miller's drama of witch hunting, "The Crucible," will be presented Friday and Saturday nights, Nov. 11, 12, 18 and 19, at Southern California College in Costa Mesa.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the college business office, with all seats reserved. Admission costs $2.50 and $3 for general patrons, $2 and $2.50 for students.

SCC is at Fair Drive and Newport Boulevard, across from the main entrance to the Orange County Fairgrounds. Further information may be had by phoning the business office at (714) 558-3610.

YOUR HOROSCOPE
by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY: Yours is a three-phase year: fairly easy going early; next, a few months of casting about for new directions; deeper understanding of basics; finally a successful approach to earnings, career. Relationships are smoother, less hectic, if you go along with human nature. Some born today are expert in trading, barter, salesmanship. Others are so interested in art specializations, they offer to work as volunteers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Organize your day well — don't let minor problems throw you off. Relaxed pace will save you time, energy. Keep entertainment as simple as possible now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Help others with important tasks and avoid resentment.

Later, you can attend to personal matters and low-priority domestic chores.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Boredom tempts you to meddle in others' affairs with irritating results. Occupy yourself with a hobby or mental activity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You'll be alert, prompt today. You can handle all detailed matters with ease. Help loved ones with major decisions — keep in mind that things will resolve themselves later.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Business matters, deals do well this morning. Avoid making major purchases after noon: routine shopping is fine. Don't promise a loan to anyone.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent time for dealing with neglected chores. Keep pace low-key, work smoothly. Exotic ideas arise later on — enjoy them, but be practical with budget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Daydreams tend to obscure reality now. You'll be creative, but it's best to fill in details and polish work later. A social evening brings benefit, new contacts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Peace of mind can be achieved today as you have time to reflect on major issues. A joke or funny situation arises later — be a good sport, use your sense of humor to cope.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Some mental confusion can occur if you don't use self-discipline and think things through. Don't be greedy, unrealistic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The media may not present the whole story today. Read between the lines and you will understand why.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The media may not present the whole story today. Read between the lines and you will understand why.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't cry over split milk today — find new methods to solve problems, save time and money. A domestic evening is pleasant.

Girl survives suicide leap off Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A dark-haired 17-year-old girl who held her nose and leaped from the Golden Gate Bridge survived and was hospitalized in serious condition Saturday.

"Let me die. Let me die," the young San Francisco resident said as a Coast Guard cutter took her to shore, where she was admitted to the Army's Letterman General Hospital for surgery.

Only 10 other persons have survived the leap, which has claimed 630 lives since the bridge opened 40 years ago. Authorities describe the graceful suspension span as the most popular suicide spot in the nation.

Authorities withheld the girl's identity, but reported her parents visited her at the hospital. She was listed as "seriously ill."

Bicyclist Bob Gibbons, a 29-year-old contractor from South San Francisco, said he watched helplessly as the girl, wearing a blue down jacket, jeans and hiking boots, slipped over the railing.

"I hollered but she just held her nose and let go," Gibbons said.

A fellow cyclist, National League baseball umpire Edward Michael Montague, 29, from suburban San Mateo, said he tried in vain to reach the girl before she let go.

Princess Margaret a nibbling doll

NEW YORK—Princess Margaret was a doll.

Her Royal Highness nibbled a potato chip at a cocktail reception just like us commoners. She smoked numerous cigarettes through a gold holder, applauded the acts brought on by M.C. Walter Cronkite, lost her voice from trying to talk to all the society guests and finally packed it in about 11:30 and left the dinner-dance of the Anglo-American Contemporary Dance Group at the Pierre, where she was the honor guest.

"The princess was charming—too bad she doesn't smile more often," some people said.

She sat between Elizabeth Taylor's husband, John Warner, and British Consul General Gordon Booth, while Liz sat across the table, her own jewels seeming to outsparkle the royal gems.

Some guests were told that it would be nice if they curtsied.

Mayor Abe Beame's wife, Mary, told me: "I don't know how to curtsy. I never learned."

The Countess of Snowdon, as she was listed in the invitations, was accessible to photographers and even to a few writers in the reception in the Yellowbird Room.

In fact, I spoke to her twice.

"We've met before," Her Highness said to me.

"Yes, about five minutes ago," I said.

Courteously she told me she'd gone to a New York theater — "the first time I'd ever gone to a theater here" — to see "Bubbling Brown Sugar." Her Highness added that she loved New York "the same as usual." She apologized for her hoarseness.

Cronkite got Liz Taylor up to draw door prizes. When Liz read a number, Cronkite said, "Wait — that's not a raffle number. You just drew somebody's phone number."

MIDNIGHT EARL...

Connie Francis and Joseph Garzilli had a meeting to make their divorce final. They changed their minds, went back together, are going to try to be happy in the four homes they have, and,

PRINCESS MARGARET
Curtsy, Please

Connie says, "will try to have a baby." They'll go to London, where Connie has an album that's No. 1.

Bing Crosby's widow, Kathy, will go on a four-month bus and truck tour, starting Jan. 13 in Greensboro, N.C., in "Same Time, Next Year." Producer Mort Gottlieb is negotiating for a prominent leading man.

Phyllis Kirk, former actress and now a Hollywood publicist, is helping the Barbizon Hotel for Women celebrate its 50th anniversary by narrating a 1920s fashion show. Grace Kelly, Cloris Leachman, Liza Minnelli and Peggy Cass lived in the hotel, where no man was ever allowed above the first floor lobby and sitting room.

Ken Smith, curator of the Baseball Hall of Fame, was clutching Reggie Jackson's home run bat at Mr. Spats and said it would go into the museum.

Christina Ford visited a disco for the first time in five years — Studio 54, where she and Franco Rossellini observed from the balcony.

Ken Weissman, co-producer of "Grease," is preparing a Japanese version for Tokyo.

Cab Calloway may join the Broadway cast of "Bubbling Brown Sugar." Candice Bergen, who took home potato pancakes from the Stage Deli, sent 'em a photo inscribed: "Dear Fellas, You have made me a very happy guy." (It's in the window.)

There was a lot of acting talent at one table at the premiere party for "An Almost Perfect Person" — director Zoe Caldwell, Colleen Dewhurst, Imme Crayon, Jessica Tandy, Max Von Sydow, Maureen Stapleton, Werner Klemperer.

Henry Winkler told "Midday Live" host Bill Boggs that the Fonz would be with him "until I'm fertilizer. Fonzie will be in reruns until I'm in another sphere."

Dozens of photographers crowded around Cher and Greg Allman on the first day of rehearsals for their tour. Greg cracked, "Do I get any wallet-size pictures?"

EARL'S PEARLS: A Broadway casting director says too many untalented people want to be on the stage: "Many of them wouldn't even make a good audience."

Home is where the heartburn is. That's Earl, brother.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Yours is a three-phase year: fairly easy going early; next a few months of casting about for new directions; deeper understanding of basics; finally a successful approach to earnings, career.

Relationships are smoother, less hectic, if you go along with human nature. Some born today are expert in trading, barter, salesmanship. Others are so interested in art specializations, they offer to work as volunteers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Organize your day well — don't let minor problems throw you off. Relaxed pace will save you time, energy. Keep your minimum as simple as possible now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Help others with important tasks and avoid resentment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Business matters, deals, do well this morning. Avoid making major purchases after noon; routine shopping is fine. Don't promise a loan to anyone.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent time for dealing with neglected chores. Keep pace low-key, work smoothly. Exotic ideas arise later on — enjoy them, but be practical with budget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Daydreams tend to obscure reality now. You'll be creative, but it's best to fill in details and polish work later. A social evening brings benefit, new contacts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Peace of mind can be achieved today as you have time to reflect on major issues. A joke or funny situation arises later — be a good sport, use your sense of humor to cope.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Some potential confusion can occur if you don't use self-discipline and think things through. Don't be greedy, unrealistic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The personal touch is essential today. Give time to others. Don't force any major issue — be patient, understanding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The media may not present the whole story today. Read between the lines and you will understand why.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't cry over spilt milk today — find new methods to solve problems, save time and money. A domestic evening is pleasant.

What's Your Problem?

Norwalk woman advised on second income property move

By Don G. Campbell

There's an old philosophical argument which says: "Everyone should try almost EVERYTHING at least once." How else can you sort out the bad from the good during the more restful years of your life?

Dear Mr. Campbell: What is the best way, in your opinion, to invest $30,000? I sold some income property and now I am debating whether to invest again in income property, or to buy shares, such as with Edison Co., gas company, etc. Where would I earn more with fewer headaches? (Some tenants can give you plenty of headaches.)

—Mrs. E. V., Norwalk.

A. Being a landlord can be a very rewarding and interesting experience — sometimes more interesting than rewarding. You don't seem particularly enchanted with it, so why are you thinking about trying it a second time?

How old are you? What percentage of your cash income is dependent on going back into the rental market? What kind of "tenant" have you had experience with — residential or commercial?

In general terms you should be able to get a return of about 9 to 10 percent a year on rental property, but such success is in direct proportion to the size of the holding

(that is, 30 units are more likely to "cut it" than 20 units, 20 units more so than 10, and so on).

A $30,000 investment sounds to me like a one-unit income property, so a 9 to 10 percent return is extremely "iffy." I'd just put the money into well-rated ("A" or better) corporate bonds yielding about 8 percent and save far more than one or two percentage points of headaches.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I have a tenant who is about three months behind in her rent (for no good reason — she has an excellent job). I have thought of locking her out. Is this a good idea? — Mrs. A.S.B., Pittsburgh, Pa.

A. Highly unlikely. State laws vary widely, of course, but in some areas, you can get into deep trouble locking out a delinquent tenant. Check with your lawyer and start eviction proceedings — strictly according to the law.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I was interested in a piece you wrote recently about how a landowner can actually lose his property if somebody occupies it for a given number of years under some sort of "squatter's right" law. I find this hard to believe in the 20th century. What's the catch? — P.J.V., Philadelphia.

A. "Hard to believe" or not, easement by "prescription" is still very much with us. Depending on local laws, that is, an individual continually using your land for 10 or 20 years — without protest from you — can be assumed to have gained easement from you that can't be taken back. For all intents and purposes, the land becomes his.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I recently purchased a mobile home. I had planned on putting it on a small lot I own near town, but have been told that I can't do this because of zoning laws. What have zoning laws got to do with where I put my mobile home? The land is mine. — Mrs. T.V.C., Allentown, Pa.

A. All structures are subject to zoning laws, particularly mobile homes. It's all a throwback to the days when most mobile homes were "trailers" and tended to look like chicken coops — something of a blight on practically any neighborhood.

Now, of course, many of them are as attractive as conventional homes, but unfortunately, those old zoning laws are still on the books. Your best bet is to not fight city hall, but sell the lot and buy one in an area that already has been properly zoned.

Housing questions clarified

CHICAGO — Is the American dream of single-family home ownership becoming an impossible one? What is the proper role of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in regulating the housing industry?

These are just a few of the questions frequently asked of Harry G. Elmstrom, president of the National Association of Realtors.

Q. Is the American dream of single-family housing gradually being replaced by "more practical" goals?

A. There is no evidence of that happening, and we don't consider ownership of a single-family home "impractical." Furthermore, the construction of multi-family dwellings continues at low ebb. As rent controls are coming into play in more areas each year, apartment ownership or construction becomes less rewarding.

Q. How is the condominium market faring following difficulties of the early 70's?

A. Condominiums are regaining popularity, thanks to the work of professional management firms and techniques that have resolved many of the previous difficulties. Construction has taken a turn upward and conversions are on the increase but for the wrong reason—rent controls—in some instances.

Q. What are the current prospects for inner-city rehabilitation?

A. Government apparently has decided that rehabilitation is less disruptive and far less expensive than the old idea of leveling an area and starting from scratch. In that regard also, the National Association of Realtors has begun a nationwide program of its own, aimed at involving its 540,000 members in assisting cities, towns and individuals with revitalization of their neighborhoods and communities.

Q. When does "reasonable federal regulation" become "excessive interference" in the real estate industry?

A. When it adds appreciably to the cost of housing or delays a transaction well beyond normal limits.

Q. What can be done to minimize governmental regulation?

A. All members of the housing industry should voice their opinions and make it clear to the public what effect governmental actions have on their ability to buy, sell or make payments on a home.

Q. What is the proper role of HUD in the housing industry?

A. The Department should work to achieve a balance between service to the public and to the industry.

Q. How do Realtors feel about the no-growth or slow-growth policies and ordinances that seek to limit density of housing?

A. The effect of no-growth or slow-growth regulations is that they create an artificial barrier between buyer and seller, causing new and existing home prices to soar. Also, these policies cause taxes to rise at a faster rate than normal because virtually the same number of properties must carry the burden for increasing costs of governmental services.

Canyon Country available

Canyon Country, American National Housing Corp. community of large executive homes in Brea, offers a few homes which have come back onto the market.

"These view-oriented three to five bedroom homes are the last available in the first three phases of Canyon Country and are scheduled for completion before the end of this year," said Jim Lenon, sales and marketing vice president for the Southern California builder. "The fourth unit of Canyon Country is planned to open in January, but families seeking outstanding location, views, spaciousness and quality will find the available Canyon Country homes to be of special interest now."

"UNTIL RECENTLY we were completely 'sold out' however, several prime view sites and various plans are available for occupancy before the Holidays and at this year's prices," he said.

Inside these luxurious homes, priced from $121,995, the discerning buyer will find Vista kitchens richly appointed with island Barbecue and range tops set in ceramic tile and brick (500 and 600 plans), microwave and self-cleaning ovens; three-part sinks with center disposal, dishwasher, trash compactor and furniture-finished hardwood cabinetry. Family rooms with wet bars. Ceramic tile entries, and carpeting throughout are standard features.

Each of the six large plans boasts its own magnificently designed Master Suite and Bath featuring ceramic tile Roman Bathing Pools, double lavatories and vanities set in rich cultured onyx and large walk-in closets.

The community of Canyon Country offers many unique and innovative ideas; colored and textured concrete around the landscaped cul-de-sac islands, large expanses of green area and street side landscaping to give the area an instantly "mature" appearance.

"THE LOCATION in the Brea Hills offers a desirable combination of views, elegance and value, in a community which has pioneered many innovative ideas and maintains the integrity of the natural environment, providing a tremendous advantage regarding property value protection," added Mr. Lenon.

The models may be reached easily by taking the Orange Freeway (57) to the Lambert Road exit. West on Lambert to Brea Blvd., turn right on Brea Blvd. 2½ miles to Canyon Country. For more information call (714) 990-1130.

What's Your Problem?

Norwalk woman advised on second income property move

By Don G. Campbell

There's an old philosophical argument which says: "Everyone should try almost EVERYTHING at least once." How else can you sort out the bad from the good during the more restful years of your life?

Dear Mr. Campbell: What is the best way, in your opinion, to invest $30,000? I sold some income property and now I am debating whether to invest again in income property, or to buy shares, such as with Edison Co., gas company, etc. Where would I earn more with fewer headaches? (Some tenants can give you plenty of headaches.)

—Mrs. E. V. Norwalk.

A. Being a landlord can be a very rewarding and interesting experience — sometimes more interesting than rewarding. You don't seem particularly enchanted with it, so why are you thinking about trying it a second time?

How old are you? What percentage of your cash income is dependent on going back into the rental market? What kind of "tenant" have you had experience with — residential or commercial?

In general terms you should be able to get a return of about 9 to 10 percent a year on rental property, but such success is in direct proportion to the size of the holding

(that is, 30 units are more likely to "cut it" than 20 units, 20 units more so than 10, and so on).

A $30,000 investment sounds to me like a one-unit income property, so a 9 to 10 percent return is extremely "iffy." I'd just put the money into well-rated ("A" or better) corporate bonds yielding about 8 percent and save far more than one or two percentage points of headaches.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I have a tenant who is about three months behind in her rent (for no good reason — she has an excellent job). I have thought of locking her out. Is this a good idea? — Mrs. A.S.B., Pittsburgh, Pa.

A. Highly unlikely. State laws vary widely, of course, but in some areas, you can get into deep trouble locking out a delinquent tenant. Check with your lawyer and start eviction proceedings — strictly according to the law.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I was interested in a piece you wrote recently about how a landowner can actually lose his property if somebody occupies it for a given number of years under some sort of "squatter's right" law. I find this hard to believe in the 20th century. What's the catch? — P.J.V., Philadelphia.

A. "Hard to believe" or not, easement by "prescription" is

Dear Mr. Campbell: I recently purchased a mobile home. I had planned on putting it on a small lot I own near town, but have been told that I can't do this because of zoning laws. What have zoning laws got to do with where I put my mobile home? The land is mine. — Mrs. T.V.C., Allentown, Pa.

A. All structures are subject to zoning laws, particularly mobile homes. It's all a throwback to the days when most mobile homes were "trailers" and tended to look like chicken coops — something of a blight on practically any neighborhood.

Now, of course, many of them are as attractive as conventional homes, but unfortunately, those old zoning laws are still on the books. Your best bet is to not fight city hall, but sell the lot and buy one in an area that already has been properly zoned.

Housing questions clarified

CHICAGO — Is the American dream of single-family home ownership becoming an impossible one? What is the proper role of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in regulating the housing industry?

These are just a few of the questions frequently asked of Harry G. Elmstrom, president of the National Association of Realtors.

Q. Is the American dream of single-family housing gradually being replaced by "more practical" goals?

A. There is no evidence of that happening, and we don't consider ownership of a single-family home "impractical." Furthermore, the construction of multi-family dwellings continues at low ebb. As rent controls are coming into play in more areas each year, apartment ownership or construction becomes less rewarding.

Q. How is the condominium market faring following difficulties of the early 70's?

A. Condominiums are regaining popularity, thanks to the work of professional management firms and techniques that have resolved many of the previous difficulties. Construction has taken a turn upward and conversions are on the increase but for the wrong reason — rent controls — in some instances.

Q. What are the current prospects for inner-city rehabilitation?

A. Government apparently has decided that rehabilitation is less disruptive and far less expensive than the old idea of leveling an area and starting from scratch. In that regard also, the National Association of Realtors has begun a nationwide program of its own, aimed at involving its 540,000 members in assisting cities, towns and individuals with revitalization of their neighborhoods and communities.

Q. When does "reasonable federal regulation" become "excessive interference" in the real estate industry?

A. When it adds appreciably to the cost of housing or delays a transaction well beyond normal limits.

Q. What can be done to minimize governmental regulation?

A. All members of the housing industry should voice their opinions and make it clear to the public what effect governmental actions have on their ability to buy, sell or make payments on a home.

Q. What is the proper role of HUD in the housing industry?

A. The Department should work to achieve a balance between service to the public and to the industry.

Q. How do Realtors feel about the no-growth or slow-growth policies and ordinances that seek to limit density of housing?

A. The effect of no-growth or slow-growth regulations is that they create an artificial barrier between buyer and seller, causing new and existing home prices to soar. Also, these policies cause taxes to rise at a faster rate than normal because virtually the same number of properties must carry the burden for increasing costs of governmental services.

Quail Ridge has homes available

There are still a few homes remaining for sale in Quail Ridge, the successful townhome development in Fullerton.

When the unusual circular complex of homes opened in May, 1977, it received wide spread praise from the housing industry for the architecture, lush landscaping and exciting aquascaping. It wasn't long before all 72 homes were sold or placed in reserved status.

However, some buyers have been forced to withdraw their purchase.

According to Don Woods, exclusive sales agent for The Konwiser Corp., the developer, "Transfers to other areas have made a few homes still available for sale."

The remaining homes have two bedrooms and are priced from $52,950 to $65,950.

QUAIL RIDGE homes have a gas operated fireplace in the living room, a private patio or balcony and carpeting throughout except in kitchen and bathrooms where vinyl or indoor/outdoor carpet covers the floor.

Kitchens have self-cleaning electric ovens and cooktops. There is a double sink with disposer. Most kitchens include a breakfast bar.

Recreation facilities within the Quail Ridge community include two lighted tennis courts, swimming pool, therapeutic pool and a recreation building with party hall, card room and billiard area. Across the street from Quail Ridge is a public golf course and a regional park.

Maintenance of exteriors, common areas, landscaping and recreational facilities is performed by the homeowners' association. All home buyers automatically become members and pay a monthly fee of $51.10.

The remaining homes may be viewed by contacting Don Woods or his associates at the sales offices.

To reach Quail Ridge exit the Orange Freeway (57) at Yorba Linda, proceed west to Associated Road then north less than a mile. Additional information may be obtained by calling (714) 990-0101.

The search for self-control

Stories by Walt Murray
Staff Writer

"We want the power to control our lives" was the most potent slogan of the radicals of the 1960s.

The students, the blacks and the feminists who used the phrase in its many forms were talking about getting a voice in the political decisions that affected them.

In the 1970s, researchers in psychology are giving a new meaning to the slogan, saying that each person's power to control his life begins with his own body and mind.

It's under your own skin where your helplessness starts, according to Dr. Elmer Green and his wife, Alyce, directors of the Voluntary Controls Program of the prestigious Menninger Foundation.

How can a hyperactive child heed demands by his parents and teachers that he control himself if they haven't taught him how? Green asks.

How, he asks, can a person feel he's master of his own life if he can't control how he responds to everyday events? How can people get political power if they can't tap their personal power?

How, in short, can the psychiatric patient or the average person suffering from job stress get control of their nervous systems without relying entirely on high-priced specialists and high-cost drugs?

In search of the answer, the Greens once went to India to study holy men who appeared to have total control of their bodies.

The Greens brought an Indian yogi, Swami Rama, to their Topeka, Kan., laboratory to demonstrate, they said, how he could stop his heart with no ill effects.

In the same laboratory, Dutch-born Jack Schwarz, who considers himself a Sufi mystic, showed how he could stick knitting needles through his arm without pain or bleeding, the Greens said.

ESOTERIC stuff, that. Weird curiosities. Hardly useful to Mrs. and Mr. America. Or is it?

"Swami Rama is just an extreme example of what all of us can do to some degree," said Mrs. Green in a recent interview.

She said most people can teach themselves to control headaches, calm anxieties and even speed their own healing powers.

The Greens said some of their patients in Topeka have brought chronic diseases under control by using the same techniques.

They have spelled out the results of their 14 years of laboratory research in their book, "Beyond Biofeedback," (Delacorte Press, $10.95).

Although they sometimes talk

'UNLESS techniques like biofeedback and meditation come into wider use — techniques that are preventative medicine and teach people to take care of themselves — I doubt there's ever going to be national health insurance.' — Dr. Elmer Green of psychic phenomena and Eastern religion in the book and in interviews, the Greens are scientists

'I'VE WORKED with women whose children have grown up and left home, women who don't know what to do with themselves. Too many doctors tell them to take pills. The idea is, if you don't like life, take a pill. — Alyce Green with the best Establishment credentials.

Green, who worked on guided missile systems at the Naval Ordnance Test Station at China Lake, looks like a man you'd expect to see carrying a slide rule in his pants pocket and a row of drafting pencils in his shirt pocket.

He worked as a physicist in optics, electronics and computers before taking a doctorate in biopsychology at the University of Chicago.

His wife, who grew up as a North Dakota farmgirl and taught all grades in a country school after graduating from high school, looks like a prim, well-educated Midwest housewife. She does brain wave research.

Both Greens have always been interested in psychic phenomena. Some psychic experiences of their own helped lead them into a quest for scientific explanations for what most laymen consider "the occult."

The supernatural, they say, is simply what science can't explain yet.

THE WORK the Greens are famous for is their pioneer biofeedback research.

They showed how biofeedback can be used to help housewives control migraine headaches or as a tool to speed up therapy for psychiatric patients.

Biofeedback machines are merely sensitive electronic devices that amplify and display body temperature, pulse rate or skin electricity.

Using those signals — translated into lights or sound — the Greens' patients gain control over hand temperature or pulse rate or breathing. That brings corresponding mental changes. Pain ebbs or tension diminishes.

The Greens teach their patients to bring about the desired physical changes by using autogenic training phrases ("I am feeling more and more relaxed") or visualization ("Picture yourself lying on a warm beach") as tools to lower their tension.

Their patients are weaned from the machines as soon as they can gain control of their bodily processes without the electronic feedback.

There's nothing mysterious about it. Barbara Brown, another biofeedback pioneer, pointed out that children use biofeedback when they stand in front of a mirror to teach themselves to wink.

Beyond controlling headaches, asthma and anxiety attacks, the Greens see the most useful aspect of their work as the changes in self-image and self-confidence that they

...therapy helps people be aware

Biofeedback is helping spine injury patients at Long Beach Memorial Hospital control their pain.

It's also helping outpatients such as housewives and hard-driving business executives to reduce the hypertension they've suffered from for years.

Therapist Ken Armbruster teaches respiratory patients to regulate their breathing, migraine sufferers to control their headaches and workers who cringe at the sound of their boss' voice to take it all in stride.

DR. S.C. PEARSON believes biofeedback gives a truer indication of how relaxed a patient really is during rehabilitation therapy. Staff photo by CHUCK SUNDQUIST

"Most people are unaware of what goes on in their bodies," Armbruster said. "We use biofeedback devices as one tool to make people aware."

"I try to get the idea across to people that once they are aware of their bodies they can make changes in their lives."

Armbruster works in the psychology services division of the hospital's medical rehabilitation department. Like many counselors and psychologists, he's using biofeedback as a tool to help people learn to control their lives.

The therapist, who has his own counseling practice in Huntington Beach and teaches at Long Beach City College, said he has always been interested in "concepts of self-control and self-regulation." The practicality of biofeedback appeals to him, he said.

Dr. S. C. Pearson, who heads the department's psychological services, said biofeedback has the advantage of "giving an objective indication of how well you are relaxing."

"In other methods, the therapist has to rely on the patient's subjective reports," he said. "But a patient using biofeedback can see or hear how he's doing on meters or by audio tones."

RELAXATION is the key. Sometimes it's a matter of relaxing specific muscles or body regions, as with spine pain patients. Sometimes it's general relaxation. Often both.

"We usually can't stop all pain in spine injury patients," Armbruster said. "But we can teach them to control pain. Just because you have pain doesn't mean you have to suffer so much."

With people suffering from stress, Armbruster tries to lower their level of emotional arousal. "The adrenalin doesn't have to start flowing every time you hear your boss' voice or your neighbor's dog has a barking fit," he said.

But he emphasizes that like any other skill, self-control takes effort.

"We get some people who have made the rounds trying every cure they hear about," Armbruster said. "Usually they leave after two or three sessions. They want instant cures."

"Relaxation takes practice and motivation and

THERAPIST Ken Armbruster notes readings on biofeedback gear that tells him how relaxed Mary Jo O'Connor is. The device, an electromyograph, measures

muscle tension and amplifies it in an audio tone. That way Mary Jo can try different self-relaxation techniques and learn what works best. Staff photo by TOM SHAW work, just like everything else," he said.

All of Armbruster's patients, whom he calls clients, must be referred by their doctors.

Memorial's basic biofeedback device is an electromyograph, which measures the body's muscular action in microvolts and amplifies it in an audio tone.

Armbruster has most of his patients practice general relaxation techniques in which they move their concentration throughout their bodies, slowly relaxing each region.

Using the machines, he shows them what parts of their bodies are particularly tense and teaches them relaxation techniques.

SPINE INJURY patients, often victims of falls or industrial accidents, sometimes suffer from back muscles that are in continual contraction from damage or in response to pain.

To relax muscles, he uses stretching exercises, breathing, visualization — "whatever we can find that will work," he said.

Biofeedback, he said, is only one therapeutic tool among many. Used by itself, it's not worth much, he said. He sometimes teaches other "coping skills" such as assertiveness training.

Armbruster educates his patients on how their bodies and minds are interconnected — how they influence each other. "People will try harder if they understand what they're doing," he said.

Armbruster and Pearson agreed that patients won't profit much from biofeedback if they don't practice what they learn in the lab at home and on the job.

"Success sometimes requires considerable changes in lifestyle," Pearson said. "A busy executive with hypertension and stress problems must change his lifestyle. He has to take 20 or 30 minutes twice a day to practice relaxation techniques."

...Biofeedback called a tool, not a treatment

Barbara Brown, the UCLA pharmacologist who has written several books on biofeedback, once said the technique "appears to be the closest thing to a panacea ever discovered."

While Brown is a careful researcher who warned that the state of the art isn't to that point yet, biofeedback — like most fledgling fields — has proved fertile ground for euphoric oversell and exploitation by con artists.

Reputable therapists emphasize that it's not the ultimate cure-all.

Dr. Charles Leeb, a Claremont psychologist who has headed the certification committee of the Biofeedback Society of California, cautioned that while biofeedback has proven effective in certain areas like controlling migraines, the limits of the new art are still unknown.

Some practitioners have claimed it can "cure" epilepsy or liver dysfunctions, claims for which there's no scientific proof, he said. He said biofeedback-taught relaxation may eventually help control all psychosomatic diseases, but years of research will be necessary to prove it.

"The important thing to remember is that biofeedback is a tool, not a medical treatment," he said.

"Learning how to relax or control pain is like learning to ride a bike. Biofeedback devices are like the training wheels kids put on bicycles when they're first learning."

"When you've learned the skill, you can do away with the training wheels."

ANYONE who says he can teach relaxation through biofeedback should be able to show that he can do what he tells his patients they can do, Leeb said.

"There are few good swimming coaches who don't know how to swim," he said.

Dr. Elmer Green of the Menninger Foundation, a pioneer in biofeedback research, warned that biofeedback is no substitute for a doctor's diagnosis.

Biofeedback therapists should ask for medical records or clearance from a physician, he said.

Biofeedback, Leeb said, helps a person "restore his physical balance." So if he's taking drugs, both he and the trainer should be aware that the dosage of the drugs may need to be cut as he relaxes.

"Many diabetics find as they relax more, they need less insulin," he said.

Biofeedback therapists without degrees in psychology or medicine shouldn't try to practice psychotherapy or medicine, Leeb said.

Ken Armbruster, a therapist who uses biofeedback at Memorial Hospital, said there are presently no legal guidelines regulating the new therapy in California. There should be, he said.

The Biofeedback Society of California does certify qualified therapists, requiring experience using the machines and knowledge of psychology, physiology, electronics, law and ethics.

Therapists must spend some time treating patients under supervision and then take written and oral tests.

Persons seeking a biofeedback therapist should make sure the therapist is certified or is working in a situation such as a hospital where he is supervised by doctors or psychologists, Armbruster said.

Green warned against buying fancy biofeedback gear for home use.

"All that most people need to invest is nine cents," he said. "That's the cost of a little thermometer on cardboard backing that can be used to monitor hand temperature."

"After you've used the machines in a training lab, you don't need them anymore. The idea is to get off the machines as soon as possible."

He also warned against biofeedback therapists who charge huge fees like $60 an hour to teach general relaxation. The basics can be learned more cheaply in university extension courses, he said.

Other dangers?

"Well," Green chuckled, "there's always the danger that when people relax they may find out some things about themselves they don't want to know. When you relax, every once in awhile you get ideas about what your problems are..."

TELEVISION game show host Peter Marshall and his sister, Joanne Dru — he recently tied knot again.

SINGER Jack Jones — has decided to avoid show business love affairs.

Q: Where is Clare Boothe Luce these days and why did she stop writing plays?

A: When her husband, publishing tycoon Henry Luce, died 10 years ago, Clare gave up their homes in Connecticut, Arizona and New York to move to Hawaii. Now 74, she regrets quitting playwrighting for politics and says her husband played a major role in her decision.

"He did not discourage me from being a playwright," she says, "but strongly encouraged me in another direction. Our life together was altogether more agreeable when we did things that interested Henry . . ."

Q: Every article I read has different advice on which of Elvis Presley's records are the most valuable. Can you help?

A: Probably the single most valuable piece of vinyl with the King's voice on it is "The March of Dimes Presents Elvis Presley." A public service announcement, it was to be aired on radio in January, 1957, and destroyed after one-time use. The plug, which ends with "Love Me Tender," is worth more than $8,000 today.

Q: Please settle a bet. Is Peter Marshall married or not?

A: Not as square as he might seem on "Hollywood Squares," Peter recently married Sally Ihnat, widow of actor Steve Ihnat, after playing a romantic game of tick tack toe with her for three years. Marshall has four children from a previous marriage — pro baseball player Peter Le Cock (Marshall's real name), Seymour, who lives in a tree-house in Hawaii, Susan, who is a model, and Jamie, who is still at school.

Peter also has a famous lookalike sister — Joanne Dru, a popular movie actress in the 1940s and '50s (pictured in her heyday).

Q: Any chance Jack Jones and Susan George will become a twosome again?

A: Although he has just bought a house a few miles down the road from where the "Straw Dogs" star lives in the Hollywood hills, Jones says the highly-publicized relationship, which ended two years ago, will never be revived. "I knew when it had to stop," says the thrice-married singer. "I like to come home from work and forget about the image I'm supposed to have. When you're living with someone else who also has a big ego to look after, you can never get away from work."

J.J., 39, is apparently trying to fly from his problems — his third wife was an airline stewardess, and he is currently dating another stewardess, Kathy Simmons, 25.

Q: How many homes count as one point on the Nielsen ratings?

A: This season, 729,000 homes are the equivalent of one point on TV's all-powerful popularity scale. Last season, a rating point equaled 712,000 homes.

Q: Does Sally Struthers have a regular boyfriend, and if so, who is he?

A: TV's Gloria is keeping it "all in the family" in a California hilltop home with psychiatrist William Rader, 39, with whom she is writing and producing an ABC Movie of the Week. Rader, a divorced father of three children, also travels the television circuit, appearing on panel shows and producing documentaries.

Rader says he needs Sally as much as she needs him. "There are times when I want Sally to hold me just like a child," he says, "and tell me everything is going to be all right."

FANS of the late Elvis Presley, above, clamor for his records — his albums are all collectors' items, but one is worth more than any of the others.

FORMER playwright and ambassador Clare Boothe Luce — calls Hawaii home since death of her husband.

Jimmy Stewart recalls Hollywood 'golden era'

LONDON — Jimmy Stewart at 70 is, shucks, pretty much like an old man playing Jimmy Stewart at 20. "Well — uh — c'mon in, your tea's gettin' cold." The drawl, even in the formality of a Victorian drawing room at the stuffy old Connaught Hotel, is the same drawl that stopped Harvey in his tracks and got Mr. Smith to Washington.

The gangly walk has slowed to a septuagenarian shuffle now, but Jimmy Stewart is moving right along. "My heart's in good shape, knock on wood. Duke Wayne's had cancer, Hank Fonda had a heart attack, and Walter Pidgeon is recovering from a blood clot on the brain, but I just keep rollin' along like Ol' Man River."

Right now he's rollin' through London, playing a small part in a new movie remake of "The Big Sleep," the '40s private-eye melodrama immortalized by Bogart and Bacall. "When you come right down to it, it's a cameo, or whatever they call these roles old actors get to keep going. I play a sick old general who calls in Robert Mitchum because I'm being blackmailed. Sarah Miles and Candy Clark play my two daughters."

"It's just a day and a half of work, and then I'm on my way home. I don't believe in remakes and it isn't much of a part, but I like to keep a finger in the pie. There isn't much work for an old codger like me back home."

HOME IS STILL Hollywood, where Jimmy and Gloria Stewart live on a tree-lined street next door to Lucille Ball, but you're likely to find this survivor of 45 years in show business (he's never had an acting lesson) anywhere on the Rand McNally the work takes him. Somehow he has miraculously managed to plough through the mud of changing social values with blinders on ("just like a mule," he grins), symbolizing solidarity, reliability, apple pie and the American way of life. It is not surprising that his next movie role will be in a new Lassie movie with Mickey Rooney.

At 70, he just turned down his first offer to do a porno film, and when he tells it, he scratches his white hair and looks plumb baffled, like Huck Finn getting his first look at the wide Missouri. "I tried to play a villain once, in 1935, in 'After the Thin Man.' It's the only time I ever played a murderer and the audience laughed me off the screen. I've been playing Jimmy Stewart ever since."

"Now if I turned up in one of those porno things, if I were a member of the audience I'd ask, 'what in the hell is Stewart trying to prove?' It's a long time between roles because I've got the old image to live with. Kate Hepburn will go on forever because she can go from movies to the stage and back again. But she's a special case. Most of us don't get offered anything. They're just not writing the roles."

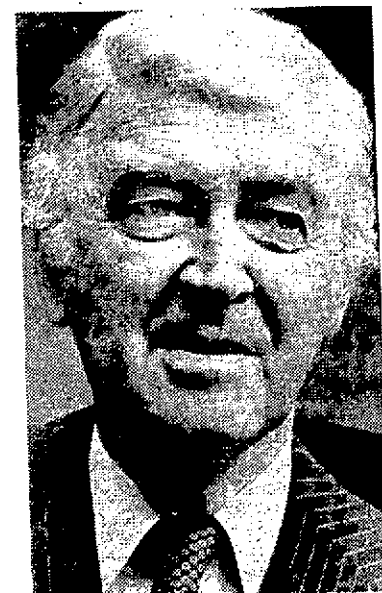

If the role is in London, he's likely to take it. His daughter lives there and London audiences have always greeted him with open arms. "I played here recently for seven months in 'Harvey.' I hadn't played London for 25 years. Whenever everything else fails, I can always drag out of 'Harvey.' I've played in that so many times that white rabbit has become part of my life. Whenever I feel blue, I turn around and Harvey's always there. I'm touring Australia next year with Mildred Natwick in 'Harvey,' but Helen Hayes told me to just stop calling her, she's just sick and tired of Harvey."

"I'm very superstitious and I talk to myself a lot, just like Elwood P. Dowd. I can be in a crowd of folks or waiting for a plane and a man will come up to me and he'll shabbily dressed and he's been hittin' the booze, see — he'll say, 'Jim, is Harvey with you?' I turn around and he's not smiling. This is no joke. I say, 'No, he's home with a cold,' and the guy will say, 'Well, give him my best regards.' It's happened many, many times."

WITH OR WITHOUT Harvey, the Stewarts are hitting the road more these days than they did when Jimmy was a big star. "Now that the kids have moved away and left us with a big, empty house in Beverly Hills, we think more about what we're gonna do than we did before. Gloria is head of the World Wildlife Fund and the East African Wildlife Federation, so we travel a lot. We're planning a trip to the Antarctic soon. But I've never felt like retiring. I had pneumonia in May, but it was nothing serious."

His talk is as slow as his sips of English tea. There are moments when his hands shake, especially when he talks about the "good old days," and at times it's an even bet as to whether he'll get to the end of a sentence. "I did a doctor role in 'The Shootist' with Duke Wayne for old time's sake, and it didn't work. Westerns are too soft. You can't do psychology in spurs. I can't wait to get back into a real saddle. We've got to get back to real shoot-em-ups like John Ford used to do."

When conversation turns to the Golden Era of movies, he brightens. A soft blue horizon focuses in his clouded eyes. It's a subject he cherishes, for obvious reasons. He was one of the foundations. "We don't have any more men like Thalberg, Harry Cohn, Louis B. Mayer or the Warner brothers. These men were not only moguls — they also loved the picture business and had uncanny judgment about how to serve the public."

"I didn't know my movies like 'Philadelphia Story' or 'Ziegfeld Girl' or 'Destiny Rides Again' or 'The Stratton Story' would become classics. I was too busy making three pictures at the same time. My generation was so busy we all took it for granted. The minute you finished one, you were off on another one that was gonna be better. I don't feel the same creative attitude on today's films. They're made too much by committees."

"They get a young guy with a pretty good track record now and when he finishes a picture, it gets turned over to another bunch of guys who four months ago were bankers in New York and they're passing judgment on some other guy's picture. There are too many strangers to the trade and hell, they don't even stay around long enough for anyone to get to know them."

"It's easy enough to sit around and bitch about the thing. You can call it sour grapes. But they call my time in movies the Golden Era. I'll accept that. It was.

They say 'don't live in the past.' I quarrel with that. The invitations I get from college symposiums indicate that a whole new generation of respect is developing for old movies. It's not 'Give me the good old days,' because you ain't never gonna get the good old days back again."

"But it's not a bad idea to look back and learn from those days, to pull what was good from them. Eighty or 90 million people a week went to those movies. They say it's because they didn't have anything else to do, but I think there was more to it than that."

"TODAY YOU GET porno, sex, violence — the pictures are all alike. It's a medium that has a tremendous capacity for showing all sorts of things, but we're not getting any variety. Films have become cynical, hopeless, worrisome."

"There are no new trends. Everything's been done already. There are no new Jimmy Stewarts because there are no vulnerable heroes in the world. Today's heroes are all seeking some kind of violent revenge against society. The bad guys have become good guys, and the good guys have become villains."

He started out at $300 a week at the insistence of his chums Margaret Sullivan and Henry Fonda, landed a seven-year contract, and learned on the job. Nobody in Hollywood has ever accused him of harboring any secret vice. In his cracker-barrel philosophy, sex is sacred and drugs are things you get prescriptions for.

"I was too busy to get drunk or run around with broads. Then the war came and I was away for four years and when I came back I had to start all over. I was so in love with the magic of movies I didn't even get married till I was 40. After working all day, we'd all go out and Judy Garland would get up and sing for an hour. I just couldn't believe I was part of all this."

That homespun calico curiosity spilled onto the screen, where he played a number of American heroes with ab-

The search for self-control

Stories by Walt Murray
Staff Writer

"We want the power to control our lives" was the most potent slogan of the radicals of the 1960s.

The students, the blacks and the feminists who used the phrase in its many forms were talking about getting a voice in the political decisions that affected them.

In the 1970s, researchers in psychology are giving a new meaning to the slogan, saying that each person's power to control his life begins with his own body and mind.

It's under your own skin where your helplessness starts, according to Dr. Elmer Green and his wife, Alyce, directors of the Voluntary Controls Program of the prestigious Menninger Foundation.

How can a hyperactive child heed demands by his parents and teachers that he control himself if they haven't taught him how? Green asks.

How, he asks, can a person feel he's master of his own life if he can't control how he responds to everyday events? How can people get political power if they can't tap their personal power?

How, in short, can the psychiatric patient or the average person suffering from job stress get control of their nervous systems without relying entirely on high-priced specialists and high-cost drugs?

In search of the answer, the Greens once went to India to study holy men who appeared to have total control of their bodies.

The Greens brought an Indian yogi, Swami Rama, to their Topeka, Kan., laboratory to demonstrate, they said, how he could stop his heart with no ill effects.

In the same laboratory, Dutch-born Jack Schwarz, who considers himself a Sufi mystic, showed how he could stick knitting needles through his arm without pain or bleeding, the Greens said.

ESOTERIC stuff, that. Weird curiosities. Hardly useful to Mrs. and Mr. America. Or is it?

"Swami Rama is just an extreme example of what all of us can do to some degree," said Mrs. Green in a recent interview.

She said most people can teach themselves to control headaches, calm anxieties and even speed their own healing powers.

The Greens said some of their patients in Topeka have brought chronic diseases under control by using the same techniques.

They have spelled out the results of their 14 years of laboratory research in their book, "Beyond Biofeedback," (Delacorte Press, $10.95).

Although they sometimes talk

'UNLESS techniques like biofeedback and meditation come into wider use — techniques that are preventative medicine and teach people to take care of themselves — I doubt there's ever going to be national health insurance.' — Dr. Elmer Green of psychic phenomena and Eastern religion in the book and in interviews, the Greens are scientists with the best Establishment credentials. Green, who worked on guided missile systems at the Naval Ordnance Test Station at China Lake, looks like a man you'd expect to see carrying a slide rule in his pants pocket and a row of drafting pencils in his shirt pocket.

He worked as a physicist in optics, electronics and computers before taking a doctorate in biopsychology at the University of Chicago.

His wife, who grew up as a North Dakota farmgirl and taught all grades in a country school after graduating from high school, looks like a prim, well-educated Midwest housewife. She does brain wave research.

Both Greens have always been interested in psychic phenomena. Some psychic experiences of their own helped lead them into a quest for scientific explanations for what most laymen consider "the occult."

The supernatural, they say, is simply what science can't explain yet.

THE WORK the Greens are famous for is their pioneer biofeedback research.

They showed how biofeedback can be used to help housewives control migraine headaches or as a tool to speed up therapy for psychiatric patients.

Biofeedback machines are merely sensitive electronic devices that amplify and display body temperature, pulse rate or skin electricity.

Using those signals — translated into lights or sound — the Greens' patients gain control over hand temperature or pulse rate or breathing. That brings corresponding mental changes. Pain ebbs or tension diminishes.

The Greens teach their patients to bring about the desired physical changes by using autogenic training phrases ("I am feeling more and more relaxed") or visualization ("Picture yourself lying on a warm beach") as tools to lower their tension.

Their patients are weaned from the machines as soon as they can gain control of their bodily processes without the electronic feedback.

There's nothing mysterious about it. Barbara Brown, another biofeedback pioneer, pointed out that children use biofeedback when they stand in front of a mirror to teach themselves to wink.

Beyond controlling headaches, asthma and anxiety attacks, the Greens see the most useful aspect of their work as the changes in self-image and self-confidence that they

...therapy helps people be aware

Biofeedback is helping spine injury patients at Long Beach Memorial Hospital control their pain.

It's also helping outpatients such as housewives and hard-driving business executives to reduce the hypertension they've suffered from for years.

Therapist Ken Armbruster teaches respiratory patients to regulate their breathing, migraine sufferers to control their headaches and workers who cringe at the sound of their boss' voice to take it all in stride.

DR. S.C. PEARSON believes biofeedback gives a truer indication of how relaxed a patient really is during rehabilitation therapy. Staff photo by CHUCK SUNDQUIST.

"Most people are unaware of what goes on in their bodies," Armbruster said. "We use biofeedback devices as one tool to make people aware."

"I try to get the idea across to people that once they are aware of their bodies they can make changes in their lives."

Armbruster works in the psychology services division of the hospital's medical rehabilitation department. Like many counselors and psychologists, he's using biofeedback as a tool to help people learn to control their lives.

The therapist, who has his own counseling practice in Huntington Beach and teaches at Long Beach City College, said he has always been interested in "concepts of self-control and self-regulation." The practicality of biofeedback appeals to him, he said.

Dr. S. C. Pearson, who heads the department's psychological services, said biofeedback has the advantage of "giving an objective indication of how well you are relaxing."

"In other methods, the therapist has to rely on the patient's subjective reports," he said. "But a patient using biofeedback can see or hear how he's doing on meters or by audio tones."

RELAXATION is the key. Sometimes it's a matter of relaxing specific muscles or body regions, as with spine pain patients. Sometimes it's general relaxation. Often both.

"We usually can't stop all pain in spine injury patients," Armbruster said. "But we can teach them to control pain. Just because you have pain doesn't mean you have to suffer so much."

With people suffering from stress, Armbruster tries to lower their level of emotional arousal. "The adrenalin doesn't have to start flowing every time you hear your boss' voice or your neighbor's dog has a barking fit," he said.

But he emphasizes that like any other skill, self-control takes effort.

"We get some people who have made the rounds trying every cure they hear about," Armbruster said. "Usually they leave after two or three sessions. They want instant cures."

"Relaxation takes practice and motivation and

THERAPIST Ken Armbruster notes readings on biofeedback gear that tells him how relaxed Mary Jo O'Connor is. The device, an electromyograph, measures

muscle tension and amplifies it in an audio tone. That way Mary Jo can try different self-relaxation techniques and learn what works best. Staff photo by TOM SHAW work, just like everything else," he said.

All of Armbruster's patients, whom he calls clients, must be referred by their doctors.

Memorial's basic biofeedback device is an electromyograph, which measures the body's muscular action in microvolts and amplifies it in an audio tone.

Armbruster has most of his patients practice general relaxation techniques in which they move their concentration throughout their bodies, slowly relaxing each region.

Using the machines, he shows them what parts of their bodies are particularly tense and teaches them relaxation techniques.

SPINE INJURY patients, often victims of falls or industrial accidents, sometimes suffer from back muscles that are in continual contraction from damage or in response to pain.

To relax muscles, he uses stretching exercises.

breathing, visualization — "whatever we can find that will work," he said.

Biofeedback, he said, is only one therapeutic tool among many. Used by itself, it's not worth much, he said. He sometimes teaches other "coping skills" such as assertiveness training.

Armbruster educates his patients on how their bodies and minds are interconnected — how they influence each other. "People will try harder if they understand what they're doing," he said.

Armbruster and Pearson agreed that patients won't profit much from biofeedback if they don't practice what they learn in the lab at home and on the job.

"Success sometimes requires considerable changes in lifestyle," Pearson said. "A busy executive with hypertension and stress problems must change his lifestyle. He has to take 20 or 30 minutes twice a day to practice relaxation techniques."

...Biofeedback called a tool, not a treatment

Barbara Brown, the UCLA pharmacologist who has written several books on biofeedback, once said the technique "appears to be the closest thing to a panacea ever discovered."

While Brown is a careful researcher who warned that the state of the art isn't to that point yet, biofeedback — like most fledgling fields — has proved fertile ground for euphoric oversell and exploitation by con artists.

Reputable therapists emphasize that it's not the ultimate cure-all.

Dr. Charles Leeb, a Claremont psychologist who has headed the certification committee of the Biofeedback Society of California, cautioned that while biofeedback has proven effective in certain areas like controlling migraines, the limits of the new art are still unknown.

Some practitioners have claimed it can "cure" epilepsy or liver dysfunctions, claims for which there's no scientific proof, he said. He said biofeedback-taught relaxation may eventually help control all psychosomatic diseases, but years of research will be necessary to prove it.

"The important thing to remember is that biofeedback is a tool, not a medical treatment," he said.

"Learning how to relax or control pain is like learning to ride a bike. Biofeedback devices are like the training wheels kids put on bicycles when they're first learning."

"When you've learned the skill, you can do away with the training wheels."

ANYONE who says he can teach relaxation through biofeedback should be able to show that he can do what he tells his patients they can do, Leeb said.

"There are few good swimming coaches who don't know how to swim," he said.

Dr. Elmer Green of the Menninger Foundation, a pioneer in biofeedback research, warned that biofeedback is no substitute for a doctor's diagnosis.

Biofeedback therapists should ask for medical records or clearance from a physician, he said.

Biofeedback, Leeb said, helps a person "restore his physical balance." So if he's taking drugs, both he and the trainer should be aware that the dosage of the drugs may need to be cut as he relaxes.

"Many diabetics find as they relax more, they need less insulin," he said.

Biofeedback therapists without degrees in psychology or medicine shouldn't try to practice psychotherapy or medicine, Leeb said.

Ken Armbruster, a therapist who uses biofeedback at Memorial Hospital, said there are presently no legal guidelines regulating the new therapy in California. There should be, he said.

The Biofeedback Society of California does certify qualified therapists, requiring experience using the machines and knowledge of psychology, physiology, electronics, law and ethics.

Therapists must spend some time treating patients under supervision and then take written and oral tests.

Persons seeking a biofeedback therapist should make sure the therapist is certified or is working in a situation such as a hospital where he is supervised by doctors or psychologists, Armbruster said.

Green warned against buying fancy biofeedback gear for home use.

"All that most people need to invest is nine cents," he said. "That's the cost of a little thermometer on cardboard backing that can be used to monitor hand temperature."

"After you've used the machines in a training lab, you don't need them anymore. The idea is to get off the machines as soon as possible."

He also warned against biofeedback therapists who charge huge fees like $60 an hour to teach general relaxation. The basics can be learned more cheaply in university extension courses, he said.

Other dangers?

"Well," Green chuckled, "there's always the danger that when people relax they may find out some things about themselves they don't want to know. When you relax, every once in awhile you get ideas about what your problems are..."

RETIRED now from writing his Independent, Press-Telegram column, L.A.C. Says, Lawrence A. Collins has more time to enjoy his favorite pastime, lawn bowling

at Recreation Park. Collins has been a lawn bowler for nearly 30 years and has the number two position on his club's roster. Staff photo by ROGER COAR

Lawn bowling popular recreation for seniors

"That was 1949, and I have been lawn bowling

mark clutter

three times a week since then," said Larry A. Collins.

He had been working hard. He had a successful career as salesman and sales executive. He became the publisher of the Long Beach Independent. Until retirement in 1975, he was an editorial columnist for the I.P.T.

Lawn bowling, he believes, has made a great contribution to his health and happiness. There are men and women who share his enthusiasm wholeheartedly.

Lawn bowling, a game as old as history, is still a rarity in most parts of the United States. Anyone who wishes to see lawn bowlers in action in Long Beach may visit the greens at the northeast corner of Recreation Park daily, starting at 1 p.m. Starting time on Sunday is 11 a.m. No bowling is scheduled on Monday.

The game seems slow motion and almost stately—but any lawn bowler can tell you it has moments of drama and high excitement. In the United States it is a game preferred by persons with gray in their hair. This is not so true for Britain, Canada and Australia. In those nations the young, including teen-agers, are ardent bowlers. It is called "a game for the young which the old can play." The oldest of all here was Tom Fatherson, who died at the age of 104.

"I have lived in Long Beach for 62 years," Collins said, "and I have never met any finer men than the lawn bowlers."

IN LONG BEACH, lawn bowling is a truly classless society—with a touch of aristocracy. There are admirals, generals, millionaires, professional and political leaders. There are also men just getting by on old-age assistance. There is no way to tell the difference on the green.

But there is aristocracy in the good manners displayed by the players. Opponents are praised for good plays. Boasting is taboo. And rough language is frowned upon.

There are two clubs in Long Beach. The older one, the Long Beach Lawn Bowling Club, was founded in 1929. It meets on Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays. It is coeducational.

The younger Recreation Park Lawn Bowling Club meets on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

It is one of the least expensive sports. The dues are $52 a year. A new set of bowls might cost $50 or more, but they don't wear out. Flat, rubber-soled shoes are required.

New members are welcome. Recruits are assigned to veteran coaches to learn the basics of a very tough game.

It's tough because the bowls purposely do not roll straight toward the target, a small white ball called the jack, which resembles the cue ball in pool. Each bowl is weighted—"biased"—on one side and follows a curved line.

Skill is important, but it is not the same kind of skill required for shooting a rifle or even for rolling a ball in an alley. Wind and conditions of the grass have their influence. An almost intuitive judgment as to how the bowl will follow its curved line is important. Form and coordination are decisive as in other sports, but there are many intangibles. Even the finest player may have a bad day.

THE OBJECT of the game is to place the bowl as close to the jack as possible. Sometimes a bowl moves the jack, making a brand new ballgame.

A bowl, which fits into the player's cupped hand, weighs less than three pounds, eight ounces. It usually is made of a hard composition. Wooden bowls are rare and old-fashioned.

Bowls may be played as singles, doubles, trebles or foursomes. Teams here usually are made up of three players. There is the lead, who bowls first; the vice, who plays second, and the skip, who is captain and who plays last. Each player has three bowls. He plays by turns with his opponent. The side with the most bowls near the jack wins the "end." Fourteen ends are played for the game.

The game is played on greens, anywhere from 110 to 125 feet long. A rink, 14 to 21 feet wide, is the space for the game.

Upkeep of a good green requires skill in selection of seed, trimming, watering and fertilizing. Much of the dues goes to the Recreation Department for this purpose.

What does lawn bowling do for the player? Well, it provides exercise including considerable bending. It provides fresh air and sunshine. And most of all, it provides fun and good fellowship. Most players say they feel relaxed and refreshed.

LAWN BOWLING has a fascinating history. Many tribes have had games that required rolling something at targets. Lawn bowling may have been introduced into Britain by the Roman legions, who played a kind of bowling game, in 1299 A.D., the Hampton Old Bowling Green Club was established. It is still in existence.

For centuries the game was restricted to the nobility. There was a practical, wartime reason for this. The kings wanted the common people to compete and acquire skill with the bow and arrow.

It is said that Sir Francis Drake, first sea lord, was playing lawn bowls when he was informed that the Spanish Armada had been sighted in the Channel. He said he would attend to the matter as soon as he finished his game.

Nine pins, now ten pins, was originally played on greens. It is now the popular bowling alley game—and quite different from lawn bowling.

Lawn bowling was quite popular in the American Colonies. Washington maintained a green at Mount Vernon. The sport declined for awhile after the Revolution.

The British and their colonies are the greatest lovers of the game. Canadians have played their part in the history of lawn bowling here. The first lawn bowling club in Southern California was organized in Los Angeles in 1908.

The Long Beach clubs participate in tournaments up and down the coast and in other places. Long Beach was recently host to an international tournament in which 200 players competed daily. Oddly, so much traffic did not harm the greens.

One of the problems of game clubs is the formation of cliques. This is avoided here by making up the teams for each day's play by chance. Collins, who is No. 2 on his club's roster, has been making up the games for the club for 15 years.

"I believe that my record since retirement at age 65, 15 years ago, will at least equal the accomplishments of any other person in my age bracket," says Howard E. Hill, Long Beach. He has written and sold 28 books and study manuals. One of them, How to Think Like a Millionaire and Get Rich, has passed the million mark. "After 10 years, I am still receiving royalty checks from Prentice Hall every six months—nice fat ones too."

He has taught many classes in subjects related to writing. In 1973-74 he traveled coast to coast and in Hawaii for Ralston Purina to extoll the virtues of natural foods.

Their continuing project is collecting clothing for "little" half-G.I.-half Korean orphans. They work through World Vision and the clothing is shipped by the Navy.

TELEVISION game show host Peter Marshall and his sister, Joanne Dru — he recently tied knot again.

Q: Where is Clare Boothe Luce these days and why did she stop writing plays?

A: When her husband, publishing tycoon Henry Luce, died 10 years ago, Clare gave up their homes in Connecticut, Arizona and New York to move to Hawaii. Now 74, she regrets quitting playwriting for politics and says her husband played a major role in her decision.

"He did not discourage me from being a playwright," she says, "but strongly encouraged me in another direction. Our life together was altogether more agreeable when we did things that interested Henry . . ."

Q: Every article I read has different advice on which of Elvis Presley's records are the most valuable. Can you help?

A: Probably the single most valuable piece of vinyl with the King's voice on it is "The March of Dimes Presents Elvis Presley." A public service announcement, it was to be aired on radio in January, 1957, and destroyed after one-time use. The plug, which ends with "Love Me Tender," is worth more than $8,000 today.

Q: Please settle a bet. Is Peter Marshall married or not?

A: Not as square as he might seem on "Hollywood Squares," Peter recently married Sally Ihnat, widow of actor Steve Ihnat, after playing a romantic game of tick tack toe with her for three years. Marshall has four children from a previous marriage — pro baseball player Peter Le Cock (Marshall's real name), Seymour, who lives in a tree-house in Hawaii, Susan, who is a model, and Jamie, who is still at school.

Peter also has a famous lookalike sister — Joanne Dru, a popular movie actress in the 1940s and '50s (pictured in her heyday).

Q: Any chance Jack Jones and Susan George will become a twosome again?

A: Although he has just bought a house a few miles down the road from where the "Straw Dogs" star lives in the Hollywood hills, Jones says the highly-publicized relationship, which ended two years ago, will never be revived. "I knew when it had to stop," says the thrice-married singer. "I like to come home from work and forget about the image I'm supposed to have. When you're living with someone else who also has a big ego to look after, you can never get away from work."

J.J., 39, is apparently trying to fly from his problems — his third wife was an airline stewardess, and he is currently dating another stewardess, Kathy Simmons, 25.

Q: How many homes count as one point on the Nielsen ratings?

A: This season, 729,000 homes are the equivalent of one point on TV's all-powerful popularity scale. Last season, a rating point equaled 712,000 homes.

Q: Does Sally Struthers have a regular boyfriend, and if so, who is he?

A: TV's Gloria is keeping it "all in the family" in a California hilltop home with psychiatrist William Rader, 39, with whom she is writing and producing an ABC Movie of the Week. Rader, a divorced father of three children, also travels the television circuit, appearing on panel shows and producing documentaries.

Rader says he needs Sally as much as she needs him. "There are times when I want Sally to hold me just like a child," he says, "and tell me everything is going to be all right."

FANS of the late Elvis Presley, above, clamor for his records — his albums are all collectors' items; but one is worth more than any of the others.

LONDON — Jimmy Stewart at 70 is, shucks, pretty much like an old man playing Jimmy Stewart at 20. "Well — uh — c'mon in, your tea's gettin' cold." The drawl, even in the formality of a Victorian drawing room at the stuffy old Connaught Hotel, is the same drawl that stopped Harvey in his tracks and got Mr. Smith to Washington.

The gangly walk has slowed to a septuagenarian shuffle now, but Jimmy Stewart is moving right along. "My heart's in good shape, knock on wood. Duke Wayne's had cancer, Hank Fonda had a heart attack, and Walter Pidgeon is recovering from a blood clot on the brain, but I just keep rollin' along like Ol' Man River."

Right now he's rollin' through London, playing a small part in a new movie remake of "The Big Sleep," the '40s private-eye melodrama immortalized by Bogart and Bacall. "When you come right down to it, it's a cameo, or whatever they call these roles old actors get to keep going. I play a sick old general who calls in Robert Mitchum because I'm being blackmailed. Sarah Miles and Candy Clark play my two daughters."

"It's just a day and a half of work, and then I'm on my way home. I don't believe in remakes and it isn't much of a part, but I like to keep a finger in the pie. There isn't much work for an old codger like me back home."

HOME IS STILL Hollywood, where Jimmy and Gloria Stewart live on a tree-lined street next door to Lucille Ball, but you're likely to find this survivor of 45 years in show business (he's never had an acting lesson) anywhere on the Rand-McNally the work takes him. Somehow he has miraculously managed to plough through the mud of changing social values with blunders on ("just like a mule," he grins), symbolizing solidarity, reliability, apple pie and the American way of life. It is not surprising that his next movie role will be in a new Lassie movie with Mickey Rooney.

At 70, he just turned down his first offer to do a porno film, and when he tells it, he scratches his white hair and looks plumb baffled, like Huey Finn getting his first look at the wide Missouri. "I tried to play a villain once, in 1935, in 'After the Thin Man.' It's the only time I ever played a murderer and the audience laughed me off the screen. I've been playing Jimmy Stewart ever since."

"Now if I turned up in one of those porno things, if I were a member of the audience I'd ask, 'what in the hell is Stewart trying to prove?' It's a long time between roles because I've got the old image to live with. Kate Hepburn will go on forever because she can go from movies to the stage and back again. But she's a special case. Most of us don't get offered anything. They're just not writing the roles."

If the role is in London, he's likely to take it. His daughter lives there and London audiences have always greeted him with open arms. "I played here recently for seven months in 'Harvey.' I hadn't played London for 25 years. Whenever everything else fails, I can always drag out Ol' Harvey. I've played in that so many times that white rabbit has become part of my life. Whenever I feel blue, I turn around and Harvey's always there. I'm touring Australia next year with Mildred Natwick in 'Harvey,' but Helen Hayes told me to just stop calling her, she's just sick and tired of Harvey."

"I'm very superstitious and I talk to myself a lot, just like Elwood P. Dowd. I can be in a crowd of folks or waiting for a plane and a man will come up to me and he's shabbily dressed and he's been hittin' the booze, see — he'll say, 'Jim, is Harvey with you?' I turn around and he's not smiling. This is no joke. I say, 'No, he's home with a cold,' and the guy will say, 'Well, give him my best regards.' It's happened many, many times."

WITH OR WITHOUT Harvey, the Stewarts are hitting the road more these days than they did when Jimmy was a big star. "Now that the kids have moved away and left us with a big, empty house in Beverly Hills, we think more about what we're gonna do than we did before. Gloria is head of the World Wildlife Fund and the East African Wildlife Federation, so we travel a lot. We're planning a trip to the Antarctic soon. But I've never felt like retiring. I had pneumonia in May, but it was nothing serious."

His talk is as slow as his sips of English tea. There are moments when his hands shake, especially when he talks about the "good old days," and at times it's an even bet as to whether he'll get to the end of a sentence. "I did a doctor role in 'The Shootist' with Duke Wayne for old time's sake, and it didn't work. Westerns are too soft. You can't do psychology in spurs. I can't wait to get back into a real saddle. We've got to get back to real shoot-em-ups like John Ford used to do."

When conversation turns to the Golden Era of movies, he brightens. A soft blue horizon focuses in his clouded eyes. It's a subject he cherishes, for obvious reasons. He was one of the foundations. "We don't have any more men like Thalberg, Harry Cohn, Louis B. Mayer or the Warner brothers. These men were not only moguls — they also loved the picture business and had uncanny judgment about how to serve the public."

"I didn't know my movies like 'Philadelphia Story' or 'Ziegfeld Girl' or 'Destiny Rides Again' or 'The Stratton Story' would become classics. I was too busy making three pictures at the same time. My generation was so busy we all took it for granted. The minute you finished one, you were off on another one that was gonna be better. I don't feel the same creative attitude on today's films. They're made too much by committees."

"They get a young guy with a pretty good track record now and when he finishes a picture, it gets turned over to another bunch of guys who four months ago were bankers in New York and they're passing judgment on some other guy's picture. There are too many strangers to the trade and hell, they don't even stay around long enough for anyone to get to know them."

"It's easy enough to sit around and bitch about the thing. You can call it sour grapes. But they call my time in movies the Golden Era. I'll accept that. It was

"But it's not a bad idea to look back and learn from those days, to cull what was good from them. Eighty or 90 million people a week went to those movies. They say it's because they didn't have anything else to do, but I think there was more to it than that."

"TODAY YOU GET porno, sex, violence — the pictures are all alike. It's a medium that has a tremendous capacity for showing all sorts of things, but we're not getting any variety. Films have become cynical, hopeless, worrisome."

"There are no new trends. Everything's been done already. There are no new Jimmy Stewarts because there are no vulnerable heroes in the world. Today's heroes are all seeking some kind of violent revenge against society. The bad guys have become good guys, and the good guys have become villains."

He started out at $300 a week at the insistence of his chums Margaret Sullivan and Henry Fonda, landed a seven-year contract, and learned on the job. Nobody in Hollywood has ever accused him of harboring any secret vice. In his cracker-barrel philosophy, sex is sacred and drugs are things you get prescriptions for.

"I was too busy to get drunk or run around with broads. Then the war came and I was away for four years and when I came back I had to start all over. I was so in love with the magic of movies I didn't even get married till I was 40. After working all day, we'd all go out and Judy Garland would get up and sing for an hour. I just couldn't believe I was part of all this."

That homespun calico curiosity spilled onto the screen, where he played a number of American heroes with ab-

GREAT GALLOPING Ghouls, that guillotine at the Petroleum Club door sent shivers up the most fearless Rick Racker's back. Slithering past it warily, they skittered inside for dinner at tables lit by jack-o-lanterns.

Dancing with carefree abandon to disco music, the bunch looked like that bar scene from "Star Wars." Splendidly grotesque.

Sally and Gary Holmquist as Mr. Wolf and Mrs. Hood won the "Hollow Head" award, with Count and Mrs. Dracula in the persons of Barbara and Ned Gaylord coming in second.

"Dusty Broom" award went to Anne and Mike Nott representing Tinkerbell and Peter Pan, followed by a baseball team and coach composed of Kelly and Ben Bushman, Barbara and Jack Enlow, Karen and John Williams, Jane and Chris Conway, India and Joe Nangano.

As rough-n-tough Roller Derby queens and their coach, Mary Cantor and Sally and Scott Dickie were judged funniest. Bob Alban in a foreshortened costume with immense hat glommed onto the Most Unusual award. As a cavewoman and apeman, Marsha and Jim Fisher won the Best Over All prize, all of which were presented by Rick Racker social chairman, Jeannie Alban.

TRIP TALK occupied the gang congregated for cocktails at Caroline and Bill Hardcastle's Huntington Beach digs. All are anticipating fishing and sun at Freeport, Grand Bahamas. All except Ola and Don Murphy who sat with long faces. They'd planned to make the trip with the Long Beach Yacht Club Anglers until an accident put Ola's arm in a sling. The trip for them is out. Ditto the River Queen trip out of New Orleans when the Bahamas stay concludes.

All went on to the Yacht Club for dinner afterwards. In the crowd, among others, were Betsy and Don Richardson, who are planning the trip; Margie and Bob Pierce, Margie and Sid Peizer, Lilian and Larry McDowell, Pauline and Jim Worsham, Dr. Paul and Dorothy Southgate, Vera and Dick Brooks, Millie and Clay Hopper, Peggy and Bill Coultas, Anita and Claude Williams.

THE ARTS are alive and well and living it up. For instance: Chuckwagon fare was dished out for Art Alliance of Long Beach Museum of Art at a western party on the museum grounds celebrating the opening of John Alexander's exhibit. John himself flew in from Texas. Y'all come, suggested the Alliance, and be-all complied.

A fiddler scraped away in the sculpture garden, and almost everyone was duded up in western attire. Some of the hoe-downers were Kathy Soldate, Judy and David Comings, Dr. Charles and Margaret Durbin, Cathy and Peter Ridder, Ann and Fred Wilmshurst, Shirley Dann, Karen and Tom Logan, Tammy and Bruce Achauer and Myrna Augsberger.

Others were Hizzoner Tom Clark and Lois; Frances and Rod Henselman, Carol and Mike Coopersmith, Barbara Ferguson, Bobbi Vial, Mike Goldberg.

YOU GOTTA have a gimmick when peddling books. At times it seems there are more book pushers than bookworms. One of the newest publications in town is "Culinary Concertos" compiled by the Long Beach Symphony Guild. Recipes by members and notables in the music world, plus clever local photographs with various instruments prominent in the foreground.

To promote the cookbook's sale, the Guild gave a progressive tasting party on a torrid day this week. Each of the items on the menu is in the book. Tasty things like walnuts encased in a pastry crust for cocktail time; lahmajoon, an Armenian bread stuffed with meat filling, chocolate-mint cake, and various other delicacies that enticed at least one guest into buying eight copies for gifts.

Overture of the party began at Steve Marinoff's Belmont Shore florist shop, fragrant with pungent holiday odors. Sipping champagne, sampling hors d'oeuvre while exclaiming over Steve's 30 decorated Christmas trees were Roberta Carlson, Guild president, in a decorated lavender sleeveless jacket from Afghanistan (she does get around), Helen Kennedy, Ruth Price, Doris Nicely, Roberta Wakefield among dozens of others.

Steve said his display was year in the planning. His trees ranged in decoration from earthy tones and wood with birds and nests to all-white ones gleaming with mirrors, icicles, butterflies, snow maidens and spun glass. An all-Snoopy tree there, an Oriental one here decorated with colored eggshells, fans, dolls and felt dragons, an old fashioned one over there and a Scandinavian one nearby.

Allegro and finale of the day were in Park Estates. Enjoying casseroles and salads on the patio of Hazel and Martin Sussman's home were Pat Creighton, Virginia Dial, Barbara Buckley and so many more that many were perched on the low wall by the pool.

Desserts (note the plural) and coffee were served in the home of Dr. William and Nel Fogg. Among those in line were Bette Gallup, Tazuko Inui, Margie Masterson and chairlady Audrey Hyde.

AS DARKNESS fell that same day, Long Beach Art Association tossed a bloomin' reception. Unwilling to admit the holidays are close upon us, the artists and guests mingled in a springtime wonderland in the galleries at Recreation Department, viewing the all-floral display of paintings and magnificent live ferns, plants, trees and flowers (incredible orchids).

Among those studying the super-size floral art were Lee Tussing, Loa Sprung, Marian Bruce, Jo Ronna, Louise and Paul Anderson, Norma and Noel Roberts, Kathleen Neal, Walton McNulty, the Joel Dalys, Dorothy and Charles Regan, the Ray Heimbürgers, Jean and Herb Williams. Sue Brown, LBAA president, welcomed guests an hour or so after lugging in fresh mums and plants from her car.

Bob Barrett, Rec Department's creative supervisor, confessed the day was his and Barbara's ninth wedding anniversary. Since occupations presented a hazard observing the date with dinner, they'd breakfasted before dawn on champagne and eggs Benedict. Exchanged anniversary gifts, watched the sun come up as little son, Max, snoozed on and on.

TENNIS and Tahiti haven't much to do with the current season, but everything to do with an exhibit in Harbor Bank's Marina office. Large throngs of art appreciators banked on Betty Anne Kirkpatrick's talents when they attended a reception of a recent eve. Husband Gene was there, of course, plus the Kirkpatrick bairns, Gary and Sharon.

Among others were Jo and Warren Nute, Stephen Gantz, brothers Jim and John Moore, Marjorie Smith, Louise and Jim Sharp, Harriet Williams, Jan and Ralph Simonian, Ricky Simonian, Rita Buckley, Donna Warner, Agnes and Parker Markle, Joann and Jim Gray.

Fellow artist Sandra Beebe volunteered her services, and younger generation types assisting were Howard Green, Penny Combs, Jillyn Buckle and Suzy Sullivan.

Almost stealing the show was George Koppel, without a doubt the proudest grandfather in town. He strolled about with little Michael Ray Wells in his arms, greeting everyone in sight and introducing them to his first grandchild. Grandmother Harriet was there, somewhere. Having a built-in sitter for the evening, Melinda and Chris Wells had ample time for viewing BASK's art.

Footnote on the exhibition: Betty Anne insisted her young helpers be well dressed when hanging the show at the bank, it being a conservative institution and all that. They quietly enter the bank, paintings and hammers in hand, to find all employees in Halloween costume, from Jolly Green Giant to a gal with green hair.

At lunch break, all the employees at Hof's Hut were in costume, too.

Among the first nighters were Audrey and Ted Page, Jody and Tom Ramsey, Betty Butler and Jim Willingham (wedding bells due in December), Dr. Joe and Debi Dahlquist, Dr. George and Joan Gehring, Shirley and Bob Autrey, Dianne and Bill Glel, Vi Dovey, Valerie and Travis Montgomery, Arna and Bill Maas, he being president of CLO Association.

Undoubtedly the top celebrity opening night was show composer Meredith Wilson, who dined at Alfred's with wife Rosemary before going on to Jordan Theater.

After the show, Mr. Mason City-River City, Iowa, went backstage to congratulate the cast on "The finest company of 'The Music Man' I've ever seen." Direct quote.

He reminisced about the show, mentioned how hysterical "76 Trombones" sounded when a company produced it in oompap Germany, then borrowing a piccolo from one of the band members, soloed on the same rousing march, with the band chiming in.

Autograph seekers kept the Willsons close to an hour backstage. What a night!

'My waistline has become more blimp than beautiful.
Please give an exercise to whittle the middle.'

Women are asking

By Reba and Bonnie Churchill

Searching for an exercise that really peels off inches? According to nationally known physical conditioner and gymnast, Robert Carreiro, the one he and actress, Catherine Bergstrom, illustrate is a winner.

"Everyone likes to see results," Carreiro explained. When this routine is performed in three stages, it helps trim the waistline. After a few weeks, you usually find your belts getting loose. Naturally, the effectiveness of the calisthenics depends on age and physical condition. Check out the exercises with your doctor. Since the muscles around the abdomen respond more quickly than most others, your enthusiasm level remains high.

"You'll need two, three-pound dumbbells, or a substitute pair of books that weigh no more than three pounds. Begin slowly. Hold the weights in each hand. Stand erect, and simply lower first the right shoulder, then the left. As you gradually tilt from side-to-side, let the weight move down the outside of the leg. Perform three times on each side.

"Next, you are ready for Phase Two. As shown in the photograph, stand legs apart, hands grasping weights. Now, bend to the left, arching right hand over head, and letting left weight run down leg as far as possible without straining." (Note how Carreiro holds weight so arm actually brushes ear.) Perform two times and hold extended pose to count of four.

"Phase Three is the most advanced," the expert continued. "Stand erect, weight held overhead so knuckles face each other. Now, bend from side-to-side. If you do not have weights, place palms together and lock fingers. Turn palms out so they face ceiling, then go from side-to-side. Repeat two times."

Carreiro, famous for his gymnastic work on the trapeze and rings, has helped keep many of television's stars in shape. "Always keep active, for the body responds to exercise — whether it's walking, jogging, or working out on the rings or parallel bars," he reminded.

P.S. Would you like to wear a size smaller in your dress or suit? Check the Terry Hunt diet on which the average person loses a pound a day for four days. The 12-page booklet also features figure-contouring exercises. Teachers hear fresh excuses

When it comes to homework, educators have heard every excuse in the book.

"My mother wrapped the garbage in it."

"I put it in the family Bible to hold my place and forgot to take it out."

"My little brother peed on it."

The excuses often showed more imagination than the assignments turned in and invariably involved a third party who was totally responsible for their deficiency.

This fall, 850,000 women over 35 are returning to the classroom as students. They're not entering the academic world empty-handed. Thanks to their children, they have a couple of years' supply of excuses. Only a few words have to be changed to get them off the hook.

"I was going to do my homework last night, but my husband put me to bed early."

"My paper was typed neatly and ready to turn in when my brother spilled his martini all over it at the breakfast table."

"I had every intention of going to the library, but I couldn't find my car keys."

"My children were hanging on the phone all night and I couldn't call my best friend and get the assignment."

"I didn't feel well. I went into false labor 10 months early."

"I picked the same topic every other person in the class picked...The Evolution of Storm Doors in the Ming Dynasty...and all the books were out."

"OUR DOG is being paper trained...you may have noticed."

"I was absent yesterday because I was waiting for the washer repairman and didn't know you had made an assignment."

"Do you think just because this assignment is done in yellow crayon, my kids did it for me?"

"My husband wrapped his gun in it."

As the child of one of my best friends told his mother at breakfast one morning, "You just tell your teacher we got home late last night and we felt your sleep was more important to your health than that stupid assignment."

That's easy for him to say. He's not a 50-year-old second-semester freshman.

RETIRED now from writing his Independent, Press-Telegram column, L.A.C. Says, Lawrence A. Collins has more time to enjoy his favorite pastime, lawn bowling at Recreation Park. Collins has been a lawn bowler for nearly 30 years and has the number two position on his club's roster. Staff photo by ROGER COAR

Lawn bowling popular recreation for seniors

"That was 1949, and I have been lawn bowling

mark clutter

three times a week since then," said Larry A. Collins.

He had been working hard. He had a successful career as salesman and sales executive. He became the publisher of the Long Beach Independent. Until retirement in 1975, he was an editorial columnist for the L.P.T.

Lawn bowling, he believes, has made a great contribution to his health and happiness. There are men and women who share his enthusiasm wholeheartedly.

Lawn bowling, a game as old as history, is still a rarity in most parts of the United States. Anyone who wishes to see lawn bowlers in action in Long Beach may visit the greens at the northeast corner of Recreation Park daily, starting at 1 p.m. Starting there on Sunday is 11 a.m. No bowling is scheduled on Monday.

The game seems slow motion and almost stately — but any lawn bowler can tell you it has moments of drama and high excitement. In the United States it is a game preferred by persons with gray in their hair. This is not so true for Britain, Canada and Australia. In those nations the young, including teen-agers, are ardent bowlers. It is called "a game for the young which the old can play." The oldest of all here was Tom Fatherson, who died at the age of 101.

"I have lived in Long Beach for 62 years," Collins said, "and I have never met any finer men than the lawn bowlers."

IN LONG BEACH, lawn bowling is a truly classless society — with a touch of aristocracy. There are admirals, generals, millionaires, professional and political leaders. There are also men just getting by on old-age assistance. There is no way to tell the difference on the green.

But there is aristocracy in the good manners displayed by the players. Opponents are praised for good plays. Boasting is taboo. And rough language is frowned upon.

There are two clubs in Long Beach. The older one, the Long Beach Lawn Bowling Club, was founded in 1929. It meets on Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays. It is coeducational.

The younger Recreation Park Lawn Bowling Club meets on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

It is one of the least expensive sports. The dues are $52 a year. A new set of bowls might cost $50 or more, but they don't wear out. Flat, rubber-soled shoes are required.

New members are welcome. Recruits are assigned to veteran coaches to learn the basics of a very tough game.

It's tough because the bowls purposely do not roll straight toward the target, a small white ball called the jack, which resembles the cue ball in pool. Each bowl is weighted — "biased" — on one side and follows a curved line.

Skill is important, but it is not the same kind of skill required for shooting a rifle or even for rolling a ball in an alley. Wind and conditions of the grass have their influence. An almost intuitive judgment as to how the bowl will follow its curved line is important. Form and coordination are decisive as in other sports, but there are many intangibles. Even the finest player may have a bad day.

THE OBJECT of the game is to place the bowl as close to the jack as possible. Sometimes a bowl moves the jack, making a brand new ballgame.

A bowl, which fits into the player's cupped hand, weighs less than three pounds, eight ounces. It usually is made of a hard composition. Wooden bowls are rare and old-fashioned.

Bowls may be played as singles, doubles, trebles or foursomes. Teams here usually are made up of three players. There is the lead, who bowls first; the vice, who plays second, and the skip, who is captain and who plays last. Each player has three bowls. He plays by turns with his opponent. The side with the most bowls near the jack wins the "end." Fourteen ends are played for the game.

The game is played on greens, anywhere from 110 to 125 feet long. A rink, 14 to 21 feet wide, is the space for the game.

Upkeep of a good green requires skill in selection of seed, trimming, watering and fertilizing. Much of the dues goes to the Recreation Department for this purpose.

What does lawn bowling do for the player? Well, it provides exercise including considerable bending. It provides fresh air and sunshine. And most of all, it provides fun and good fellowship. Most players say they feel relaxed and refreshed.

LAWN BOWLING has a fascinating history. Many tribes have had games that required rolling something at targets. Lawn bowling may have been introduced into Britain by the Roman legions, who played a kind of bowling game. In 1299 A.D., the Hampton Old Bowling Green Club was established. It is still in existence.

For centuries the game was restricted to the nobility. There was a practical, warlike reason for this. The kings wanted the common people to compete and acquire skill with the bow and arrow.

It is said that Sir Francis Drake, first sea lord, was playing lawn bowls when he was informed that the Spanish Armada had been sighted in the Channel. He said he would attend to the matter as soon as he finished his game.

Nine pins, now ten pins, was originally played on greens. It is now the popular bowling alley game — and quite different from lawn bowling.

Lawn bowling was quite popular in the American Colonies. Washington maintained a green at Mount Vernon. The sport declined for awhile after the Revolution.

The British and their colonies are the greatest lovers of the game. Canadians have played their part in the history of lawn bowling here. The first lawn bowling club in Southern California was organized in Los Angeles in 1908.

The Long Beach clubs participate in tournaments up and down the coast and in other places. Long Beach was recently host to an international tournament in which 200 players competed daily. Oddly, so much traffic did not harm the greens.

One of the problems of game clubs is the formation of cliques. This is avoided here by making up the teams for each day's play by chance. Collins, who is No. 2 on his club's roster, has been making up the games for the club for 15 years.

15 years of doing

"I believe that my record since retirement at age 65, 15 years ago, will at least equal the accomplishments of any other person in my age bracket," says Howard E. Hill, Long Beach. He has written and sold 28 books and study manuals. One of them, How to Think Like a Millionaire and Get Rich, has passed the million mark. "After 10 years, I am still receiving royalty checks from Prentice Hall every six months — nice fat ones too."

He has taught many classes in subjects related to writing. In 1973-74 he traveled coast to coast and in Hawaii for Ralston Purina to extoll the virtues of natural foods.

"To me, my greatest achievement was taking part in the founding of the Literary Hall of Fame, and because of my strong views on quality and integrity, was elected president."

Their continuing project is collecting clothing for "little" half-G.I.-half Korean orphans. They work through World Vision and the clothing is shipped by the Navy.

Biofeedback a tool in self-control

say many of their patients have shown.

"As people begin to realize they are not totally the victims of their genetics, conditioning and accidents, their lives begin to change," Green said.

"They aren't tossed about so much by events. It isn't so much what happens to you that kills you, but how you react to it."

At present, we're a people not in control of our lives, the Greens say. We place our well-being completely in the hands of experts who prescribe high-priced tests, treatments and drugs.

THE GREENS aren't saying biofeedback should be substituted for diagnosis by doctors. Migraines can be caused by brain tumors as well as stress, they point out. They take only patients referred to them by doctors.

But they are saying that everyone should take some responsibility for their own health.

"We've been taught these ideas that we're helpless," Mrs. Green said. "Our schools and colleges are still teaching the same thing."

According to traditional science, anything that wasn't obviously a matter of will was considered "involuntary," which can be translated, "you can't do anything to control it."

To control headaches, hypertension or stress, you had to take drugs, have a few martinis or smoke grass.

Yet the mind and body are interconnected and the mind can control the body, the Greens say.

"Everytime you think a thought it has a biochemical effect on the body," Green said. "Everytime you have an emotion you have a huge biochemical reaction and also a hormonal reaction."

"If that weren't true, pornography wouldn't sell. Pornography sells because visualization can make hormonal changes and people become hormone addicts."

While it's obvious that anxiety, hatred or fear have negative effects on the heart and stomach, few people are aware how healthful positive emotions can be, the Greens say.

Hope, for instance, can cause great positive biochemical changes in a depressed person.

But people are so programmed to believe they are helpless that many of the Greens' patients expect the Greens or their biofeedback devices to do something to them.

"We tell them, 'if you don't do it, nothing is going to happen,'" Green said.

One woman asked him if

"faith" was needed to "operate" the machines.

Green told her that the machines are faith-enhancers. By showing her that she can gain some control over her body, the devices build her faith in herself.

"It's like driving a car," he said. "The more you do it, the better you get. Finally you do it almost without thinking."

The point of it all is to develop will power, which the Greens see as the primary problem facing people today.

To develop will, a person must be able to see himself as somewhat separate from his environment so he can become aware of his stress, consider how he reacts to it and take anti-stress measures.

"Control of the individual by society and by the state has taken away some of our own responsibility for our health, our education and our activities," Green said.

He emphasizes that the important thing is what patients do outside the biofeedback lab to practice relaxation techniques, develop will and change their attitudes toward life.

"That's so important in resisting all the propaganda and advertising that surrounds us," Mrs. Green said. "If you're free from your own hang-ups it's pretty hard for an advertiser — or anyone — to play on your selfishness, worry and fears."

Using a scientific approach, the Greens say they're trying to teach Americans what Indian yogis have practiced for centuries.

Stewart interviewed in London

sorbing honesty. Men like Charles Lindbergh, Monty Stratton, Glenn Miller. "I worked out with Stratton for three months before we shot 'The Stratton Story,' so I could pitch just like him."

"But I still can't play a note on the trombone. My music teacher quit because he said the sounds I made were so terrible he went home and yelled at his wife. So we plugged up the trombone and he taught me how to breathe and spit, and then he stood behind the curtain and played all the old Glenn Miller arrangements. Lindbergh was the hardest thing I ever had to do. I felt totally inadequate, but I wanted to keep Jimmy Stewart out of it."

HE HAS ALSO managed to keep a bevy of luscious leading ladies out of his life as well. "I love every one of them until quitting time," he says. But surely there were some duds in the batch. "Well," he draws, after being prodded for some dishy quotes, "you can't fault girls like Grace Kelly or June Allyson. But when I was doing 'Vertigo,' poor Kim Novak, bless her heart, said 'Mr. Hitchcock, what is my character feeling in relation to her surroundings?' There was silence on the set and Hitch said, 'It's only a movie, for godsakes.' She never asked another question."

That's it? The revelations don't get any more juicy than that? "Well, there was that Raquel Welch girl. She came onto the set of a western I did with Dean Martin and started asking a lotta questions about 'psychological motivation.' So Dean turned to me and said, 'what the hell is she talking about?' I said, 'I think she'll be fine, but let's loosen her up. So Dean and I had her over for dinner and got her good and drunk. She was OK from then on."

At this point, wife Gloria saunters in — tall, elegant, cool as taffeta. "Is he really this perfect?" I ask. Gloria says a lot of people think Jimmy is boring, but what you see is what you get. Any faults? "I'm lazy," says Jimmy, yawning. "You are not," counters Gloria.

No problems in 30 years of marriage? She thinks. After a long pause, she says, "No, after a day kissing June Allyson, he was always glad to get home at night."

If Jimmy Stewart ever dies, it won't be one of those violent, front page things. He'll go the way he planned it — choking to death on humble pie.

The Formula

Soot goes up in smoke

Fireplace smoke should go up the chimney — not in the house. But unfortunately this is not always the case. A frequent cause is a buildup of carbon deposits (soot) on the surfaces of the flue. Here's a simple low-cost way to reduce this buildup.

Dry mix one cup of sodium chloride (ordinary table salt) with one cup of powdered zinc oxide, available at most drug stores. Sprinkle one cup of this mixture on a hot fire. After about five minutes distribute the balance on the logs.

The cost for making your own Fireplace Soot Remover is about 12 cents per ounce. To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-bought brand by the number of ounces it contains. Then compare the per ounce cost — you'll be surprised at how much you can save for so little effort. Store in glass or plastic containers.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

If you enjoy The Formula, you might like The Formula Book and The Formula Book 2, available individually for $5.95 each or $11.90 for a slipcased set. Please indicate which volume and mail request to Independent, Press-Telegram, 6700 Squibb Road, Mission, Kan. 66202.

Flea Market

Squeezers are juicy finds

Q. "Our 'New Boss' lemon squeezer find prompts us to search for other examples in this category." — Claire and Tom, Albany, N.Y.

A. Any representative assortment of vintage lemon squeezers would include hinged and reamer types of glass, wood or iron. Some of the earliest maple or beech hand-crafted models fall into the "confusing collectible" department. The clear and colored glass reamer versions are avidly sought by rummagers. Patented extractors, composed of two hinged sections, proliferated in the late 19th century when such models as the "American Queen," "Standard" and "Quick and Easy" were manufactured. Value guide: "The New Boss," cast iron, circa 1910, $16.

Q. "Please enlighten me about a bowl marked 'Prescut.'" — Lynn, Augusta, Ga.

A. When the McKee Glass Company of Pennsylvania decided to market fine quality pressed glassware, resembling the more expensive cut glass patterns around the turn of the century, they adopted the "Prescut" symbol. The trademark, which appeared within a circle, was registered in 1904.

According to a 1908 catalog, the mark was utilized on numerous patterns such as "Aztec," "Carltee," "Liberty," "Martee" and "Sunburst." Value guide: Bowl, Doltec pattern, 9 inches diameter, $20.

Q. "Kindly discuss the Columbian doll." — Wendy, Colorado Springs, Colo.

A. Visitors to the Columbian Exposition of 1893 were enthusiastic about the rag dolls designed by Emma E. Adams. They were skillfully fashioned of firm muslin, and had hair and features painted by their creator. There were boy and girl dolls in sizes ranging from 15 inches to 20 inches tall.

Following Emma's death in 1900, the business was conducted by her sister Marietta. Dolls made prior to 1900 bore an ink stamped mark in the back of the cloth body which read: "Columbian Doll, Emma E. Adams, Oswego Centre, N.Y." One might suspect they were stuffed with dollars rather than cotton and sawdust for a 19-inch-tall version lists for $1,200.

Q. "We're seeking help in appraising a small collection of calendars." — Mr. and Mrs. G.L. Scotts-bluff, Neb.

A. Do collectors flip over old calendars? Definitely! Value guide: 1876, Centennial Home Insurance, $45; 1885, Contin-

'Twas a frightening eve

By Jean Sanders

GREAT GALLOPING Ghouls, that guillotine at the Petroleum Club door sent shivers up the most fearless Rick Racker's back. Sliding past it warily, they skittered inside for dinner at tables lighted by Jack-o-lanterns.

Dancing with carefree abandon to disco music, the bunch looked like that bar scene from "Star Wars." Splendidly grotesque.

Sally and Gary Holmquist as Mr. Wolf and Mrs. Hood won the "Hollow Head" award, with Count and Mrs. Dracula in the persons of Barbara and Ned Gaylord coming in second.

"Dusty Broom" award went to Anne and Mike Nott representing Tinkerbelt and Peter Pan, followed by a baseball team and coach composed of Kelly and Ben Bushman, Barbara and Jack Enlow, Karen and John Williams, Jane and Chris Conway, India and Joe Nangano.

As rough-n-tough Roller Derby queens and their coach, Mary Cantor and Sally and Scott Dickie were judged funniest. Bob Alban in a foreshortened costume with immense hat glommed onto the Most Unusual award. As a cavewoman and apeman, Marsha and Jim Fisher won the Best Over All prize, all of which were presented by Rick Racker social chairman, Jeannie Alban.

TRIP TALK occupied the gang congregated for cocktails at Caroline and Bill Hardesty's Huntington Beach digs. All are anticipating fishing and sun at Freeport, Grand Bahamas. All except Ola and Don Murphy who sat with long faces. They'd planned to make the trip with the Long Beach Yacht Club Anglers until an accident put Ola's arm in a sling. The trip for them is out. Ditto the River Queen trip out of New Orleans when the Bahamas stay concludes.

All went on to the Yacht Club for dinner afterwards. In the crowd, among others, were Betsy and Don Richardson, who are planning the trip; Margie and Bob Pierce, Margie and Sid Peizer, Lilian and Larry McDowell, Pauline and Jim Wortham, Dr. Paul and Dorothy Southgate, Vera and Dick Brooks, Millie and Clay Hopper, Peggy and Bill Coullas, Anita and Claude Williams.

THE ARTS are alive and well and living it up. For instance:

Chuckwagon fare was dished out for Art Alliance of Long Beach Museum of Art at a western party in the museum grounds celebrating the opening of John Alexander's exhibit. John himself flew in from Texas. Y'all come, suggested the Alliance, and he-all complied.

A fiddler scraped away in the sculpture garden, and almost everyone was duded up in western attire. Some of the hoe-downers were Kathy Soldate, Judy and David Comings, Dr. Charles and Margaret Durnin, Cathy and Peter Ridder, Ann and Fred Wilmshurst, Shirley Dann, Karen and Tom Logan, Tammy and Bruce Achauer and Myrna Augsberger.

Others were Hizzoner Tom Clark and Lois; Frances and Rod Henselman, Carol and Mike Cooper-Smith, Barbara Ferguson, Bobbi Vial, Mike Goldberg.

YOU GOTTA have a gimmick when peddling books. At times it seems there are more book pushers than bookworms. One of the newest publications in town is "Culinary Concertos" compiled by the Long Beach Symphony Guild. Recipes by members and notables in the music world, plus clever local photographs with various instruments prominent in the foreground.

To promote the cookbook's sale, the Guild gave a progressive tasting party on a torrid day this week. Each of the items on the menu is in the book. Tasty things like walnuts encased in a pastry crust for cocktail time; lahmajoon, an Armenian bread stuffed with meat filling, chocolate-mint cake, and various other delicacies that enticed at least one guest into buying eight copies for gifts.

Overture of the party began at Steve Marinoff's Belmont Shore florist shop, fragrant with pungent holiday odors. Sipping champagne, sampling hors d'oeuvre while exclaiming over Steve's 30 decorated Christmas trees were Roberta Carlson, Guild president, in a decorated lavender sleeveless jacket from Afghanistan (she does get around), Helen Kennedy, Ruth Price, Doris Nicely, Roberta Wakefield among dozens of others.

Steve said his display was year in the planning. His trees ranged in decoration from earthy tones and wood with birds and nests to all-white ones gleaming with mirrors, icicles, butterflies, snow maidens and spun glass. An all-Snoopy tree there, an Oriental one here decorated with colored eggshells, fans, dolls and felt dragons, an old fashioned one over there and a Scandinavian one nearby.

Allegro and finale of the day were in Park Estates. Enjoying casseroles and salads on the patio of Hazel and Martin Sussman's home were Pat Creighton, Virginia Dial, Barbara Buckley and so many more that many were perched on the low wall by the pool.

Desserts (note the plural) and coffee were served in the home of Dr. William and Nel Fogg. Among those in line were Bette Gallup, Tazuko Inui, Margie Masterson and charlatay Audrey Hyde.

AS DARKNESS fell that same day, Long Beach Art Association tossed a bloomin' reception. Unwilling to admit the holidays are close upon us, the artists and guests mingled in a springtime wonderland in the galleries at Recreation Department, viewing the all-floral display of paintings and magnificent live ferns, plants, trees and flowers (incredible orchids).

Among those studying the super-size floral art were Lee Tussing, Loa Sprung, Marian Bruce, Jo Ronna, Louise and Paul Anderson, Norma and Noel Roberts, Kathleen Neal, Walton McNulty, the Joel Dalys, Dorothy and Charles Regan, the Ray Heimburgers, Jean and Herb Williams. Sue Brown, LBAA president, welcomed guests an hour or so after lugging in fresh mums and plants from her car.

Bob Barrett, Rec Department's creative supervisor, confessed the day was his and Barbara's ninth wedding anniversary. Since occupations presented a hazard observing the date with dinner, they'd breakfasted before dawn on champagne and eggs Benedict. Exchanged anniversary gifts, watched the sun come up as little son, Max, snoozed on and on.

TENNIS and Tahiti haven't much to do with the current season, but everything to do with an exhibit in Harbor Bank's Marina office. Large throngs of art appreciators banked on Betty Anne Kirkpatrick's talents when they attended a reception of a recent eve. Husband Gene was there, of course, plus the Kirkpatrick bairns, Gary and Sharon.

Among others were Jo and Warren Nute, Stephen Gantz, brothers Jim and John Moore, Marjorie Smith, Louise and Jim Sharp, Harriet Williams, Jan and Ralph Simonian, Ricky Simonian, Rita Buckley, Donna Warner, Agnes and Parker Markle, Joann and Jim Gray.

Fellow artist Sandra Beebe volunteered her services, and younger generation types assisting were Howard Green, Penny Combs, Jillyn Buckle and Suzy Sullivan.

Almost stealing the show was George Koppel, without a doubt the proudest grandfather in town. He strolled about with little Michael Ray Wells in his arms, greeting everyone in sight and introducing them to his first grandchild. Grandmother Harriet was there, somewhere. Having a built-in sifter for the evening, Melinda and Chris Wells had ample time for viewing BASK's art.

Footnote on the exhibition: Betty Anne insisted her young helpers be well dressed when hanging the show at the bank, it being a conservative institution and all that. They quietly enter the bank, paintings and hammers in hand, to find all employees in Halloween costume, from Jelly Green Giant to a gal with green hair.

At lunch break, all the employees at Hof's Hut were in costume, too.

STILL ON THE arts scene — Guild of Long Beach Civic Light Opera had din-din at the Elks' Club before attending opening night of "The Music Man." Diane Coltrane, Guild president, welcomed everyone, plus a newpersonintown who digs musicals, Dr. David Rose, chief of intensive care unit at VA Hospital, and recently of the nation's capital.

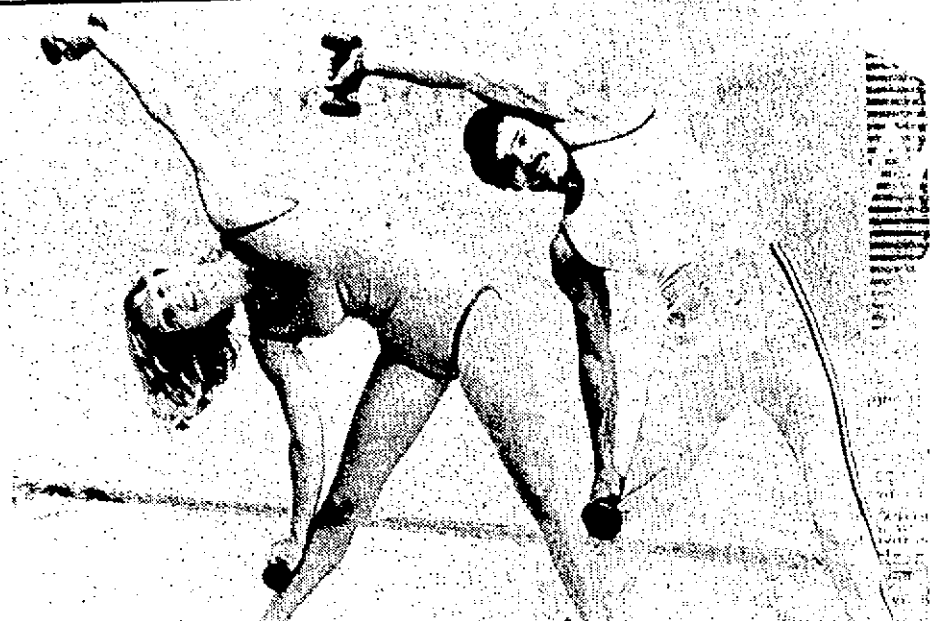

Among the first nighters were Audrey and Ted Page, Jody and Tom Ramsey, Betty Butler and Jim Willingham (wedding bells due in December), Dr. Joe and Debi Dahlquist, Dr. George and Joan Gehring, Shirley and Bob Autrey, Dianne and Bill Glei, Vi Dovey, Valerie and Travis Montgomery, Arna and Bill Maas, he being president of CLO Association.

Undoubtedly the top celebrity opening night was show composer Meredith Willson, who dined at Alfred's with wife Rosemary before going on to Jordan Theater.

After the show, Mr. Mason City-River City, Iowa, went backstage to congratulate the cast on "The finest company of 'The Music Man' I've ever seen." Direct quote.

He reminisced about the show, mentioned how hysterical "76 Trombones" sounded when a company produced it in compa-Germany, then borrowing a piccolo from one of the band members, soloed on the same rousing march, with the band chiming in.

Autograph seekers kept the Willsons close to an hour backstage. What a night!

'My waistline has become more blimp than beautiful.
Please give an exercise to whittle the middle.'

Women are asking

By Reba and Bonnie Churchill

Searching for an exercise that really peels off inches? According to nationally known physical conditioner and gymnast, Robert Carreiro, the one he and actress, Catherine Bergstrom, illustrate is a winner.

"Everyone likes to see results," Carreiro explained. When this routine is performed in three stages, it helps trim the waistline. After a few weeks, you usually find your belts getting loose. Naturally, the effectiveness of the calisthenics depends on age and physical condition. Check out the exercises with your doctor. Since the muscles around the abdomen respond more quickly than most others, your enthusiasm level remains high.

"You'll need two, three-pound dumbbells, or a substitute pair of books that weigh no more than three pounds. Begin slowly. Hold the weights in each hand. Stand erect, and simply lower first the right shoulder, then the left. As you gradually tilt from side-to-side, let the weight move down the outside of the leg. Perform three times on each side.

"Next, you are ready for Phase Two. As shown in the photograph, stand legs apart, hands grasping weights. Now, bend to the left, arching right hand over head, and letting left weight run down leg as far as possible without straining." (Note how Carreiro holds weight so arm actually brushes ear.) Perform two times and hold extended pose to count of four.

"Phase Three is the most advanced," the expert continued. "Stand erect, weight held overhead so knuckles face each other. Now, bend from side-to-side. If you do not have weights, place palms together and lock fingers. Turn palms out so they face ceiling, then go from side-to-side. Repeat two times."

Carreiro, famous for his gymnastic work on the trapeze and rings, has helped keep many of television's stars in shape. "Always keep active, for the body responds to exercise — whether it's walking, jogging, or working out on the rings or parallel bars," he reminded.

P.S. Would you like to wear a size smaller in your dress or suit? Check the Terry Hunt diet on which the average person loses a pound a day for four days. The 12-page booklet also features figure-contouring exercises. At Wit's End Teachers hear fresh excuses

When it comes to home-work, educators have heard every excuse in the book.

"My mother wrapped the garbage in it."

"I put it in the family Bible to hold my place and forgot to take it out."

"My little brother pee-ed on it."

The excuses often showed more imagination than the assignments turned in and invariably involved a third party who was totally responsible for their deficiency.

This fall, 850,000 women over 35 are returning to the classroom as students. They're not entering the academic world empty-handed. Thanks to their children, they have a couple of years' supply of excuses. Only a few words have to be changed to get them off the hook.

"I was going to do my homework last night, but my husband put me to bed early."

"My paper was typed neatly and ready to turn in when my brother spilled his martini all over it at the breakfast table."

"I had every intention of going to the library, but I couldn't find my car keys."

"My children were hanging on the phone all night and I couldn't call my best friend and get the assignment."

"I didn't feel well. I went into false labor 10 months early."

"I picked the same topic every other person in the class picked...The Evolution of Storm Doors in the Ming Dynasty...and all the books were out."

"OUR DOG is being paper trained...you may have noticed."

"I was absent yesterday because I was waiting for the washer repairman and didn't know you had made an assignment."

"Do you think just because this assignment is done in yellow crayon, my kids did it for me?"

"My husband wrapped his gun in it."

As the child of one of my best friends told his mother at breakfast one morning, "You just tell your teacher we got home late last night and we felt your sleep was more important to your health than that stupid assignment."

That's easy for him to say. He's not a 50-year-old second-semester freshman.

STENCILING in words on the hopscotch squares at Hudson Elementary School recently were third grade student Tai Ha Park, left, George Cameron.

Joan Nickerson and Shirley Wild. The project is designed to make students and their parents aware of the need for immunizations.

Graffiti spells out reminder

They're putting graffiti on the sidewalks — but for good reasons.

Long Beach's 55 elementary schools will be among the first in Los Angeles County to have hopscotch squares filled in with words as part of a project sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary to the Los Angeles County Medical Association.

The words school officials are stenciling in with paint are "measles," "polio," "tetanus," "diphtheria," "whooping cough" and "immunization."

"By making these hopscotch stencils available to schools, we're trying to elevate children's and parents' awareness to the need to be properly immunized," says Joan Nickerson, president of the Women's Auxiliary to the Long Beach Medical Association.

The project got underway last week with the first stenciling done on the asphalt playgrounds at Hudson Elementary School. The auxiliary is also working with school curriculum officials to create a lesson plan in connection with the hopscotch squares for teachers to use in classrooms.

The reasons for the project are simple.

says Nickerson. California law requires children attending public school to be immunized against those diseases and some 20 million American children under age 15 are believed to be inadequately protected against one or all of them.

"Long Beach schools did an excellent job in a massive measles immunization drive last year," says Nickerson. "But children and parents who are new to the local schools need to follow through to make certain all vaccinations are completed this fall."

Medicine and You

UCI opens liver tumor registry

UC Irvine College of Medicine has established a registry for liver tumors associated with oral contraceptives.

Researchers note that various benign and malignant liver tumors in young women who have taken oral contraceptives have been reported since 1972.

Prolonged uninterrupted usage is

ben zinser

considered a significant factor in bringing about the tumors.

At last report, the liver ruptured in 18 patients, and eight died.

About 85 percent of 71 women with liver tumors associated with use of oral contraceptives had taken the drugs continuously for more than four years.

Polio increases

Polio is on the increase in Britain, bringing a warning for better immunization.

The findings there could have application elsewhere.

Doctors at the Public Health Laboratory Service in Cambridge, England, and at the Communicable Disease Surveillance Center in London, say that up to the end of last July there have been 13 cases of confirmed paralytic polio. That compares with only four in the same period last year.

All 13 victims in early 1977 were children aged seven years or under. The disease, doctors say, is truly become "infantile paralysis" once more.

None had received polio vaccine.

Efforts should be intensified to vaccinate all children under five years old, the doctors say in the British Medical Journal.

Sympathy pains

You've no doubt heard of the pregnant woman whose husband begins to suffer from symptoms strikingly similar to those seen in pregnant women and women in labor.

Well, medical science has a name for the phenomenon — the couvade syndrome.

Couvade comes from a French word meaning to brood or to hatch.

Many physicians have noticed occasional cases of a pregnant woman's husband having morning nausea during the first three months or lower abdominal cramping pains near term.

There are reported cases of military men suffering "morning sickness" or developing an increased appetite ("eating for two") when learning of their wife's pregnancy. In World War II it was widely known that many men suffered diarrhea and abdominal bloating at about the time their wives were expected to be in labor.

The report is by Dr. Lawrence G. Wilson, psychiatrist at the University of Washington in Seattle. Details are in American Family Physician, a medical journal.

Treating epilepsy

Sodium valproate has been called "the drug of choice for generalized epilepsy" by a British expert, Dr. Peter M. Jeavons.

The drug has been widely used in England since 1974 and doctors in several countries have published more than 25 studies involving more than 1,000 patients treated with the compound.

"The drug probably will be released in the United States before long, reports MD, a medical newsmagazine.

In-Sights

Believes Laetrile use should be subject to negotiation

Howard Walker of Rossville, Kan., died peacefully in his sleep from advanced lung cancer on Oct. 15. Because his cancer had progressed to the point where physicians could offer no hope by traditional treatments, Walker had sought and won permission to receive Laetrile. His final days made the national news.

Howard Walker received Laetrile injections for four weeks before he died. That was three weeks longer than his doctor's original estimate of survival.

Walker had been required to go to court to obtain the drug.

Stating that he "felt great" after he began receiving the injections of the extract of apricot pits, Walker nevertheless was reluctant to credit his improved feeling to the drug.

The case of Howard Walker

illustrates the dilemma surrounding this controversial drug. The terminally ill patient, or any cancer patient for that matter, is searching for hope. And what price hope, even if it may be false?

Most of the respected medical research establishment finds no clear evidence to support claims that Laetrile cures cancer, despite some personal testimonials to its efficacy.

SO, IS IT ethical to prescribe medication for a patient, when the effectiveness of the medication is not supported by careful and repeated research studies?

Is it proper to encourage a patient who is already faced with the high cost of treatment to spend money for a preparation which may well be worthless?

When I posed these questions to a lay friend, she observed, "Why not? Physicians have been giving patients placebos for years without qualms. Why get so pious now?"

One can indeed rationalize the prescription. If the medication will provide the patient hope and peace of mind in his final days, is not that worth the price?

Even if it is ineffective, is it wrong to make Laetrile available to a terminally ill patient who has exhausted all other medically approved remedies? Is it wrong to make available such treatment if it will not harm and may actually be psychologically beneficial?

Walker's physician, a respected medical practitioner in his community, expressed his opinion: "I still don't see what the big furor is about Laetrile if it can be used in a setting of good supportive care for a patient."

Biofeedback a tool in self-control

what happens to you that kills you, but how you react to it."

At present, we're a people not in control of our lives, the Greens say. We place our well-being completely in the hands of experts who prescribe high-priced tests, treatments and drugs.

THE GREENS aren't saying biofeedback should be substituted for diagnosis by doctors. Migraines can be caused by brain tumors as well as stress, they point out. They take only patients referred to them by doctors.

But they are saying that everyone should take some responsibility for their own health.

"We've been taught these ideas that we're helpless," Mrs. Green said. "Our schools and colleges are still teaching the same thing."

According to traditional science, anything that wasn't obviously a matter of will was considered "involuntary," which can be translated, "you can't do anything to control it."

To control headaches, hypertension or stress you had to take drugs, have a few martinis or smoke grass.

Yet the mind and body are interconnected and the mind can control the body, the Greens say.

"Everytime you think a thought it has a biochemical effect on the body," Green said. "Everytime you have an emotion you have a huge biochemical reaction and also a hormonal reaction."

"If that weren't true, pornography wouldn't sell. Pornography sells because visualization can make hormonal changes and people become hormone addicts."

While it's obvious that anxiety, hatred or fear have negative effects on the heart and stomach, few people are aware how healthful positive emotions can be, the Greens say.

Hope, for instance, can cause great positive biochemical changes in a depressed person.

But people are so programmed to believe they are helpless that many of the Greens' patients expect the Greens or their biofeedback devices to do something to them.

"We tell them, 'if you don't do it, nothing is going to happen,'" Green said.

One woman asked him if

"faith" was needed to "operate" the machines.

Green told her that the machines are faith-enhancers. By showing her that she can gain some control over her body, the devices build her faith in herself.

"It's like driving a car," he said. "The more you do it, the better you get. Finally you do it almost without thinking."

The point of it all is to develop will power, which the Greens see as the primary problem facing people today.

To develop will, a person must be able to see himself as somewhat separate from his environment so he can become aware of his stress, consider how he reacts to it and take anti-stress measures.

"Control of the individual by society and by the state has taken away some of our own responsibility for our health, our education and our activities," Green said.

He emphasizes that the important thing is what patients do outside the biofeedback lab to practice relaxation techniques, develop will and change their attitudes toward life.

"That's so important in resisting all the propaganda and advertising that surrounds us," Mrs. Green said. "If you're free from your own hang-ups it's pretty hard for an advertiser — or anyone — to play on your selfishness, worry and fears."

Using a scientific approach, the Greens say they're trying to teach Americans what Indian yogis have practiced for centuries.

sorbing honesty. Men like Charles Lindbergh, Monty Stratton, Glenn Miller. I worked out with Stratton for three months before we shot 'The Stratton Story,' so I could pitch just like him.

"But I still can't play a note on the trombone. My music teacher quit because he said the sounds I made were so terrible he went home and yelled at his wife. So we plugged up the trombone and he taught me how to breathe and spit, and then he stood behind the curtain and played all the old Glenn Miller arrangements. Lindbergh was the hardest thing I ever had to do. I felt totally inadequate, but I wanted to keep Jimmy Stewart out of it."

HE HAS ALSO managed to keep a bevy of luscious leading ladies out of his life as well. "I love every one of them until quitting time," he says. But surely there were some duds in the batch. "Well," he draws, after being prodded for some dishy quotes, "you can't fault girls like Grace Kelly or June Allyson. But when I was doing 'Vertigo,' poor Kim Novak, bless her heart, said 'Mr. Hitchcock, what is my character feeling in relation to her surroundings?' There was silence on the set and Hitch said, 'It's only a movie, for godsake.' She never asked another question."

That's it? The revelations don't get any more juicy than that? "Well, there was that Raquel Welch girl. She came onto the set of a western I did with Dean Martin and started asking a lotta questions about 'psychological motivation.' So Dean turned to me and said, 'what the hell is she talking about?' I said, 'I think she'll be fine, but let's loosen her up. So Dean and I had her over for dinner and got her good and drunk. She was OK from then on."

At this point, wife Gloria saunters in — tall, elegant, cool as taffeta. "Is he really this perfect?" I ask. Gloria says a lot of people think Jimmy is boring, but what you see is what you get. Any faults? "I'm lazy," says Jimmy, yawning. "You are not," counters Gloria.

No problems in 30 years of marriage? She thinks. After a long pause, she says, "No, after a day kissing June Allyson, he was always glad to get home at night."

If Jimmy Stewart ever dies, it won't be one of those violent, front page things. He'll go the way he planned it — choking to death on humble pie.

Squeezers are juicy finds

Q. "Our 'New Boss' lemon squeezer find prompts us to search for other examples in this category." — Claire and Tom, Albany, N.Y.

A: Any representative assortment of vintage lemon-squeezers would include hinged and reamer types of glass, wood or iron. Some of the earliest maple or beech hand-crafted models fall into the "confusing collectible" department. The clear and colored glass reamer versions are avidly sought by rummagers. Patented extractors, composed of two hinged sections, proliferated in the late 19th century when such models as the "American Queen," "Standard" and "Quick and Easy" were manufactured. Value guide: "The New Boss," cast iron, circa 1910, $16.

Q. "Please enlighten me about a bowl marked 'Present.'" — Lynn, Augusta, Ga.

A. When the McKee Glass Company of Pennsylvania decided to market fine quality pressed glassware, resembling the more expensive cut glass patterns around the turn of the century, they adopted the "Present" symbol. The trademark, which appeared within a circle, was registered in 1901.

According to a 1908 catalog, the mark was utilized on numerous patterns such as "Aztec," "Carleton," "Liberty," "Martee" and "Sunburst." Value guide: Bowl, Doltec pattern, 9 inches diameter, $20.

Q. "Kindly discuss the Columbian doll." — Wendy, Colorado Springs, Colo.

A. Visitors to the Columbian Exposition of 1893 were enthusiastic about the rag dolls designed by Emma E. Adams. They were skillfully fashioned of firm muslin, and had hair and features painted by their creator. There were boy and girl dolls in sizes ranging from 15 inches to 29 inches tall.

Following Emma's death in 1900, the business was conducted by her sister Marietta. Dolls made prior to 1900 bore an ink stamped mark in the back of the cloth body which read: "Columbian Doll, Emma E. Adams, Oswego Centre, N.Y." One might suspect they were stuffed with dollars rather than cotton and sawdust for a 19-inch-tall version lists for $1,200.

Q. "We're seeking help in appraising a small collection of calendars." — Mr. and Mrs. G.L., Scottsbluff, Neb.

A. Do collectors flip over old calendars? Definitely! Value guide: 1876, Centennial Home Insurance, $45; 1885, Contin-

The Formula Soot goes up in smoke

Fireplace smoke should go up the chimney — not in the house. But unfortunately this is not always the case. A frequent cause is a buildup of carbon deposits (soot) on the surfaces of the flue. Here's a simple low-cost way to reduce this buildup.

Dry mix one cup of sodium chloride (ordinary table salt) with one cup of powdered zinc oxide, available at most drug stores. Sprinkle one cup of this mixture on a hot fire. After about five minutes distribute the balance on the logs.

The cost for making your own Fireplace Soot Remover is about 12 cents per ounce. To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-bought brand by the number of ounces it contains. Then compare the per ounce cost — you'll be surprised at how much you can save for so little effort. Store in glass or plastic containers.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

If you enjoy The Formula, you might like The Formula Book and The Formula Book 2, available individually for $5.95 each or $11.90 for a slipcased set. Please indicate which volume and mail request to Independent, Press-Telegram, 6700 Squibb Road, Mission, Kan. 66202.

STENCILING in words on the hopscotch squares at Hudson Elementary School recently were third grade student Tai Ha Park, left, George Cameron,

Joan Nickerson and Shirley Wild. The project is designed to make students and their parents aware of the need for immunizations.

Graffiti spells out reminder

They're putting graffiti on the sidewalks — but for good reasons.

Long Beach's 55 elementary schools will be among the first in Los Angeles County to have hopscotch squares filled in with words as part of a project sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary to the Los Angeles County Medical Association.

The words school officials are stenciling in with paint are "measles," "polio," "tetanus," "diphtheria," "whooping cough" and "immunization."

By making these hopscotch stencils

available to schools, we're trying to elevate children's and parents' awareness to the need to be properly immunized," says Joan Nickerson, president of the Women's Auxiliary to the Long Beach Medical Association.

The project got underway last week with the first stenciling done on the asphalt playgrounds at Hudson Elementary School. The auxiliary is also working with school curriculum officials to create a lesson plan in connection with the hopscotch squares for teachers to use in classrooms.

The reasons for the project are simple.

says Nickerson. California law requires children attending public school to be immunized against those diseases and some 20 million American children under age 15 are believed to be inadequately protected against one or all of them.

"Long Beach schools did an excellent job in a massive measles immunization drive last year," says Nickerson. "But children and parents who are new to the local schools need to follow through to make certain all vaccinations are completed this fall."

Medicine and You

UCI opens liver tumor registry

UC Irvine College of Medicine has established a registry for liver tumors associated with oral contraceptives.

Researchers note that various benign and malignant liver tumors in young women who have taken oral contraceptives have been reported since 1972.

Prolonged uninterrupted usage is

ben zinser

considered a significant factor in bringing about the tumors.

At last report, the liver ruptured in 18 patients, and eight died.

About 85 percent of 71 women with liver tumors associated with use of oral contraceptives had taken the drugs continuously for more than four years.

Source: American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology. A summary appears in Drug Therapy, a periodical for doctors.

Polio increases

Polio is on the increase in Britain, bringing a warning for better immunization.

The findings there could have application elsewhere.

Doctors at the Public Health Laboratory Service in Cambridge, England, and at the Communicable Disease Surveillance Center in London, say that up to the end of last July there have been 13 cases of confirmed paralytic polio. That compares with only four in the same period last year.

All 13 victims in early 1977 were children aged seven years or under. The disease, doctors say, is truly become "infantile paralysis" once more.

None had received polio vaccine.

Efforts should be intensified to vaccinate all children under five years old, the doctors say in the British Medical Journal.

Sympathy pains

You've no doubt heard of the pregnant woman whose husband begins to suffer from symptoms strikingly similar to those seen in pregnant women and women in labor.

Well, medical science has a name for the phenomenon — the couvade syndrome.

Couvade comes from a French word meaning to brood or to hatch.

Many physicians have noticed occasional cases of a pregnant woman's husband having morning nausea during the first three months or lower abdominal cramping pains near term.

There are reported cases of military men suffering "morning sickness" or developing an increased appetite ("eating for two") when learning of their wife's pregnancy. In World War II it was widely known that many men suffered diarrhea and abdominal bloating at about the time their wives were expected to be in labor.

The report is by Dr. Lawrence G. Wilson, psychiatrist at the University of Washington in Seattle. Details are in American Family Physician, a medical journal.

Treating epilepsy

Sodium valproate has been called "the drug of choice for generalized epilepsy" by a British expert, Dr. Peter M. Jeavons.

The drug has been widely used in England since 1974 and doctors in several countries have published more than 25 studies involving more than 1,000 patients treated with the compound.

The drug probably will be released in the United States before long, reports MD, a medical newsmagazine.

In-Sights

Believes Laetrile use should be subject to negotiation

Howard Walker of Rossville, Kan., died peacefully in his sleep from advanced lung cancer on Oct. 15. Because his cancer had progressed to the point where physicians could offer no hope by traditional treatments, Walker had sought and won permission to receive Laetrile. His final days made the national news.

Howard Walker received Laetrile injections for four weeks before he died. That was three weeks longer than his doctor's original estimate of survival.

Walker had been required to go to court to obtain the drug.

Stating that he "felt great" after he began receiving the injections of the extract of apricot pits, Walker nevertheless was reluctant to credit his improved feeling to the drug.

The case of Howard Walker

illustrates the dilemma surrounding this controversial drug. The terminally ill patient, or any cancer patient for that matter, is searching for hope. And what price hope, even if it may be false?

Most of the respected medical research establishment finds no clear evidence to support claims that Laetrile cures cancer, despite some personal testimonials to its efficacy.

SO, IS IT ethical to prescribe medication for a patient, when the effectiveness of the medication is not supported by careful and repeated research studies?

Is it proper to encourage a patient who is already faced with the high cost of treatment to spend money for a preparation which may well be worthless?

When I posed these questions to a lay friend, she observed, "Why not? Physicians have been giving patients placebos for years without quails. Why get so pious now?"

One can indeed rationalize the prescription. If the medication will provide the patient hope and peace of mind in his final days, is not that worth the price?

Even if it is ineffective, is it wrong to make Laetrile available to a terminally ill patient who has exhausted all other medically approved remedies? Is it wrong to make available such treatment if it will not harm and may actually be psychologically beneficial?

Walker's physician, a respected medical practitioner in his community, expressed his opinion: "I still don't see what the big furor is about Laetrile if it can be used in a setting of good supportive care for a patient."

KATHE KOLLWITZ (1867-1945) drew 'Muttergluck' in 1931. It is one of the German artist's few expressions of happiness. The drawing is in exhibit which opens today at Long Beach Museum of Art. The 31 works of art date from the 16th to the 20th centuries.

Many 'Images of Women'

Barbara Hendrick has been named acting manager to head the staff of Long Beach Museum of Art pending appointment of a permanent manager. On the museum staff for 11 years, Hendrick has been Museum Bookshop manager and manager of publications since 1972.

A new exhibit, "Images of Women," opens today at the museum, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. It will hang through Dec. 4. The 31 drawings and prints depict women in various roles and moods as seen by artists from the 16th to the 20th centuries. Among artists represented are George Bellows, Isabel Bishop, Peter Brueghel, Winslow Homer, Edvard Munch, Pablo Picasso, Francisco Zuniga, Jost Amman, Mel Ramos, Alan Jones and Kathe Kollwitz. Kollwitz's drawing, "Muttergluck" is one of the artist's rare representations of carefree, maternal happiness.

The museum is open Wednesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

MONDAY, a show by three local artists/illustrators will open in Long Beach City College Fine Arts Gallery, 4901 E. Carson St., with a public reception from 7 to 9 p.m.

Said Mike Daniel, gallery director, "This show will feature commercial artists who also are fine artists. To demonstrate their versatility, we will display examples of both their commercial and personal works."

Dick Oden, a full-time member of the art faculty at Long Beach State University, is an illustrator for Rolling Stone magazine.

Peter Mendez teaches medical illustration at LBSU and has done illustrations for a medical textbook to be published this month.

James Endicott is an instructor in commercial illustration at LBSU. His posters for Fender Guitars will be displayed in the gallery beside the original illustrations.

Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday, and 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays through Wednesdays.

ELSA WARNER, whose last public exhibit opened Jan. 4, 1973, at Long Beach Museum of Art, has a retrospective show opening today and continuing through Nov. 26 at Tanega-Maher Gallery, 214 Avenida del Norte, Redondo Beach.

Warner is known in this area not only as an artist whose work has been nationally exhibited and collected, but also as a beloved educator. She began teaching at Polytechnic High School in 1940 and was chairman of the art department from 1949 to 1962. From 1961 to 1963, she taught drawing and painting at Long Beach City College and from 1964 to 1968 conducted workshops for Long Beach Art Association. Her awards are many.

The artist will be honored at a reception today from 2 to 5 p.m. at the gallery.

FROM NEARLY 200 entries in Long Beach Art Association's Floral Show, juror Dorothy Browdy Kushner selected these artists for awards: Char Sharpless, first; Ruth Boyd, second; M.L. Martin, third; Robert Adams, Louise Anderson, Judith Jacobson, Ethel Johnson and Jean Williams, honorable mention.

The show will hang in the main gallery and adjacent Fireside Room in Long Beach Recreation Department, 155 Queens Way Landing, through Nov. 30. Gallery hours have been extended for this event.

JEANETTE PADILLA is the only Long Beach recipient of an award by the California Arts Council. A total of 95 special projects awards amounting to $333,047 was announced by the CAC at its Oct. 28 meeting in Los Angeles. Grants were made for unique projects in literature, music, film/video and multi-arts. It is in this latter category that Padilla was included, receiving $4,500 "to produce a book of photos, illustrations, commentary, etc., which will document the life of 'Shorty Padilla,' a Mexican/Chicano boxer who made it from the barrio environment to become a top boxer during the 1920s, '30s and '40s."

PCA seeks solutions to two major problems

By Elise Emery
Arts Editor

Meeting Wednesday in the Main Library, the board of the Public Corporation of the Arts faced two thorny questions.

How can the 48 arts groups which comprise the PCA participate most effectively in the opening of the Pacific Terrace Convention Center Jan. 21-23?

How, in the future, can Pacific Terrace facilities be made available to those arts groups at rates they can afford?

These problems faced the board of directors and Michael Alexander who only the day before had assumed his new position as executive director of PCA.

Time is the major obstacle for the Pacific Terrace project, said PCA president Laura Killingsworth. A plan must be presented immediately to the Mayor's Committee which is organizing the opening events.

After discussion which evoked suggestions for tours, performances and exhibits, the board voted to direct Alexander to "find specifics of budget, time, etc., then contact the arts groups for participation."

KILLINGSWORTH introduced the second question.

"All of the arts groups and many individuals interested in the arts in Long Beach are concerned because we now have a fine complex but it is beyond the financial reach of local groups that want to use it. At this point, the city can't renegotiate Pacific Terrace contracts — we understand that. But the PCA should let the city and the unions know that the arts groups are concerned, all 48 of them, and that they want to be considered."

Added Alexander, "Locally based organizations don't want to be driven from the new theaters simply because they can't afford the price. However, this is a delicate, difficult matter; we cannot expect workers to accept reduced pay for their work."

AGREED JOHN WATTS, "The unions are essential to the facility. The local groups must be subsidized in some way. A pattern must be devised to generate a fund which will make it possible for them to use the new facilities."

After discussing the feasibility of an endowment, fund, grants and the earmarking of a percentage of each Pacific Terrace event for a cultural fund, Watts offered this three point motion:

1. Long Beach shortly will have in operation one of the best facilities in the country.

2. It is important for this facility to be alive in the life of the community and for the community to be active in Pacific Terrace buildings.

3. We must find ways to make it possible for our own Long Beach organizations to use this facility and to be kept alive and active.

The motion passed unanimously.

ALEXANDER reported on the California Confederation of the Arts which met Oct. 28-30 in Los Angeles to consider "The Economic Impact of the Arts Industry."

Main speaker was Livingston Biddle who is expected to be confirmed soon as the new chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, replacing Nancy Hanks. Although he often is asked whether his approach to the arts is populist or elitist, Biddle said, he does not consider the two terms in conflict. "Populism means access and elitism means the best; therefore, we simply want the best to be available to the greatest number."

Alexander told of the advice given to the audience by Jesse M. Unruh, state treasurer: "If you must deal with politicians, make friends before your issue comes up for consideration — not at election time, because then every politician is a friend. Find yourself a legislator who knows nothing about your subject — he'll take your word for it."

John Hyer, who has been serving as interim consultant to the PCA, urged the board to "sit down as soon as possible with city officials and lay before them the need to help the arts. It is urgent that we move as early as is practical to make our concern known."

NYCO bills 18 works

New productions are Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Pirates of Penzance" on Nov. 20, Dec. 3 and 10; Puccini's "La Fanciulla del West" Nov. 23 and 30; Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" Nov. 25 and Dec. 9, and "Trilogy" Dec. 8 and 11. "Trilogy" includes Mozart's "The Impresario," Poulenc's "La Voix Humaine" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole."

ON OPENING night, the Music Center Opera Association will hear a special benefit performance in French of Massenet's "Manon" with Beverly Silis, Henry Price, Richard Fredricks and Samuel Ramey; NYCO director Julius Rudel will conduct.

Opening night's performance will begin at 8:15 p.m.; other evening curtains will be at 8 p.m. Matinees will begin at 2 p.m. Casting is subject to change without notice or refund.

'Roar—Smell' opens Friday

"The Roar of the Greasepaint—the Smell of the Crowd" by Anthony Newley and Leslie Bricusse will open Friday at 8 p.m. in the Studio Theater of Long Beach State University. Additional performances will be Nov. 12, 13, 16, 17, 18 and 19.

The plot explores the "game of life," in which each level of society, rich to poor, is made up of "haves" and "have-nots." Those who have, make up the rules as they go along in order to remain "havers" and the "have-nots" never really know that the game is being played.

"All is fair in the game of power and self-worth," say life "haves." Meanwhile, the "have-nots" desperately plead, "I'm a human being, too — please allow me that dignity."

Notes stage director Betsy Hamilton, LBSU professor of dance and movement, "Everyone knows these two ex-trêmes well; after all, in some small way we are one of them."

COST MEMBERS are Kelly Danyluk as The Sir That Became a Man, Patrick Rainville as The Cocky One, and Constance Orlicki as The Snivelling Brat. Urchin Types are i-Lean Arcosti, Shairrie Braly, Debbie Calhoun, Leslie Mulock, Layne Nielson, Eleanor Packwood and Kathleen Sykora. Robin Volisky is the Bully and Bryan Worch is the Homosexual.

Anne Givson, visiting professor from Pennsylvania State University, is scenic designer; costumes are by Barbara Cox of the theater arts department. William Smith of the theater arts department, has designed makeup; and Susan Steiger is responsible for lighting.

Tickets are on sale at the fine arts ticket office, priced from $1.50 to $3.50. They also will be sold at the box office before performances.

Hail to Handel's unusual date!

The abused word "unique" applies literally to the performance of the Long Beach Symphony and Chorus will give Handel's "The Messiah" Sunday, Nov. 20, at 2 p.m. in First Baptist Church, 1000 Pine Ave.

First, the audience will be invited to sing with the choir such favorite, well-known choruses as "Hallelujah" and "For Unto Us a Child Is Born." Robert L. Collins will conduct the concert which will mark the debut of the Long Beach Symphony Chorus, a group of 70 singers from the Long Beach area. In the future, the chorus will perform frequently with the orchestra.

In the second place, George Frideric Handel will make his first appearance in 200 years. At a champagne brunch at Jungry Jose's Restaurant, 190 Marina Drive, Seaport Village, from 8 a.m. to noon Nov. 20, Handel will play his Sonata in F major and his Sonata in A minor, both written for recorder and harpsichord. Maria-chis and a string quartet also will be on hand for the festivities.

Tickets for the concert alone will be available in advance at the symphony office, 121 Linden Ave., and at the door for $3. Price for the concert and brunch is $5.95; advance reservations are required. For additional information, write to the Long Beach Symphony or phone 436-3203.

The texts are succinct and lively; the color reproductions superb — 113 of them in the National Gallery volume, 134 in the British Museum book, 124 in Vatican Museums.

The Brick Book. By Robert Hayward. Crowell, $12.95. From a barbecue to a summer house, this is a volume full of ideas and practical projects, fully illustrated in black and white. Many illustrations go hand in hand with the textual instructions.

A Collector's Guide to Spoons Around the World. By Dorothy T. Rainwater and Donna H. Felger. Photos by H. Ivan Rainwater. Thomas Nelson, $19.95. The most thoroughgoing book we have ever seen on historical, commemorative and souvenir spoons. Some 2,000 spoons are illustrated in the 416 pages of the volume, with makers' marks identifying many.

Colonies in Space. By T. A. Heppenheimer. Stackpole, $12.95. A planetary scientist's fascinating study of a giant step man is sure to make — vast numbers of people colonizing and working in space communities and maybe even solving energy problems. Also — two fine how-to's from Stackpole — The Hook Book, by Alice Beatty and Mary Sargent ($12.95) — patterns, instructions and special touches for creating heirloom rugs, and Foil-craft, by Cyril Marshall ($12.95), a lucid guide to modeling with metal foils, describing tools and techniques for many projects.

Star Acting: Gish, Garbo, Davis. By Charles Affron, $16.95. Lushly illustrated (some 750 frame enlargements) capture Lillian Gish, Greta Garbo and Bette Davis in motion. A first-rate evocation of the three of the screen's most noted actresses.

Artists of Hawaii: Volume Two. Photographs and interviews by Francis Haar. Edited by Murray Turnbull. University Press of Hawaii, $25. Another volume, as lovely as its predecessor, in the Artists of Hawaii series, this richly illustrated book shows the vitality and diversity of 18 Hawaiian painters and sculptors, as well as artists in ceramics, architecture, weaving, design and stained glass.

Lewis Carroll: An Illustrated Biography. By Derek Hudson. Clarkson N. Potter, $12.95. Derek Hudson has drawn on much previously unpublished material, and the 200 illustrations include many of the famous Tenniel drawings for the Alice books, drawings by Carroll himself, by Arthur Rackham, photographs by Carroll of many small girls who were inspirations for his works, and of the famous people he knew.

The Horse Soldier 1776-1913: Volume I. The Revolution, The War of 1812, The Early Frontier 1776-1850. Text and illustrations by Randy Steffen. University of Oklahoma Press, $25. More than a score of years of careful research went into the planned 4-volume work on the American horse soldier, of which this is the first volume. Judging by the first volume, it will be a magnificent, definitive series. The Continental Dragoons Light Dragoons, the Mounted Ranger Battalion of the War of 1812, later the United States Dragoons. Uniforms, insignias, decorations, arms, horse equipment are described and illustrated in 11 color plates and 96 black-and-white drawings.

Great Gardens of Britain. By Peter Coats. Morrow, $15.95. Britain is the land of lovely gardens, and this large volume describes and illustrates 33 of the most beautiful. Grouped by region, from Scotland to the Scilly Isles, the author describes special features to be seen in each, such as Sissinghurst's old roses or Exbury's azaleas.

Wheels West 1590-1900. By Richard Dunlop. Rand McNally, $16.95. Two hundred pre-1900 photographs, 16 full-color plates, and paintings and maps enrich this engrossing history by Richard Dunlop of wheeled transportation — wagons, trails and drives — in the settling and building of the West, from the Spanish carretas to the ox-drawn huge freight wagons and the Conestogas to the common farm wagon.

Mirror, Mirror: A Social History of Fashion. By Michael and Ariane Batterberry. Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $29.95. From the cave people to the ancient Egyptians, Creteans, Greeks and Romans, from the Renaissance princes and princesses to the democratic house-dresses and denims of this day, this is a charming and historically important study of fashion. There are 700 illustrations, 120 in color.

Architectural Digest Celebrity Homes. Edited by Paige Rense. Viking, $35. Paige Rense, editor-in-chief of Architectural Digest, takes us into the private worlds of 30 world personalities, into the homes of Truman Capote, Coco Chanel, Sen. Edward Kennedy, Lee Radziwell, Yves Saint Laurent and Gore Vidal, among others. All the fine taste and the elegance of Architectural Digest go into these pages along with a wealth of photographs, a great many in color.

The Ancient Near East. By Charles Burney. Cornell University Press, $15. An 8,000-year journey with Man, (with a wealth of just the right kind of illustrations), in his many environments in the Near East, from the Neolithic period until 612 B.C., when the great Assyrian empire crumbled. British archaeologist Charles Burney gives us not only superb histories of the various civilizations, but uses archaeology as a tool to probe daily life, social structures, and the developments in religion and art.

Bebe: The Films of Brigitte Bardot. By Tony Crawley. Citadel, $14.95 cloth, $5.95 paperbound. In her heyday, Brigitte Bardot's pictures packed them in around the world and she was the very symbol of the sex kitten. Tony Crawley's book covers B.B.'s entire professional and personal life, picturing her in every role she had from that of a rebellious teenager in 1952 to her latest film, in 1974, which she says is her final one. There are some 400 photographs.

LUPE CUNNINGHAM French Riviera welcomes children

SOME YEARS AGO, a wealthy man enjoyed entertaining his millionaire friends at the French Riviera restaurant. Often he told the host, only half-jokingly: "I love this place. I like the food. But couldn't you raise your prices so my friends won't think I'm a cheapskate?"

Raise prices? What a horrible thought. The French Riviera, South Street near Paramount Boulevard, has been successful and highly praised for many years because of its ability to serve delicious, extra-large luncheons and dinners at unbelievably low prices. Repeatedly, customers smile at owners Bob and Lupe Cunningham and comment: "Your food is really good and you serve a lot of it to every customer. But we can't believe these prices! How do you do it?"

Bob and Lupe do it with lots of good, old-fashioned hard work. Both are on the job at the French Riviera day and night. They watch food costs and food wastage like hawks. They eliminated linen napkins in favor of paper napkins in order to keep the quality of their food as high as always and, in some cases, better than in the past. The prime rib au jus cut, for example, is now a full eight-ounce slice for $3.95, served with many courses including hot, fresh soup in a tureen for second helpings; salad, baked potato, vegetable of the day and hot bread with butter.

Also featured on that big dinner are the 5½-ounce petite filet mignon, merely $3.45; whitefish deep-fried in fresh batter, $2.75; beef Stroganoff, $3.25; filet of sole Marguery with a cream-style wine sauce, $3.50, and sweetbreads Parisienne, sautéed with wine and served with mushroom sauce, $3.25. No other restaurant in town has such quality items for such low prices with so many courses.

Petite Lupe is a cheerful, smiling hostess whose many jobs include assistant manager, bartender, and occasional waitress. She and husband Bob receive many compliments about the superb soups, different each day, prepared by No. 1 chef Milt Gradke. Families with small children are delighted with the French Riviera because the Cunninghams love youngsters and make them welcome. (In the past, children less than 5 years old weren't admitted.) Families are asked to order the child's dinner, $1.90, for children aged 5 through 8. Those under 5 can share the adult dinners.

Open every day, the French Riviera serves double Manhattans and Margaritas for $1 and inexpensive tap wines. The $1.95 luncheons, Mondays through Fridays, are terrific values, including cup of soup, salad, potatoes, entree, vegetable, roll, butter and coffee. Pot roast of beef with mushroom sauce and beef ribs with barbecue sauce are featured on that luncheon every day. A second special entree is also offered each day.

YOUTHFUL ENERGY... desire... foresight... a willingness to work hard and be kind to others. Those ingredients still bring success in America as they did generations ago, despite all the doom-sayers who insist young Americans are lazy, selfish and don't care about anyone except themselves.

Which brings us to the subject of the Galley restaurant and party catering service, 4500 E. Los Coyotes Diagonal, just northeast of the Traffic Circle. If you've lived in Long Beach since the 1950s, you're aware that originally the building was a Currie's ice cream store. Then it became a sandwich shop which was mildly successful.

Seven years ago, John Choura and his wife Marie took over the Galley sandwich shop, aided by their energetic son Jim and daughter Susie. Their remarkable success, in such a comparatively short time, can be a lesson to others in what can be accomplished with hard work, perception and desire. Open for breakfast, luncheon and dinner, the Galley (closed Sundays) is an extremely popular self-service restaurant with two dining rooms, a delicatessen and a takeout department. Its specialties are inexpensive hot meat sandwiches and such dinners as barbecue spareribs and knockwurst.

The Galley is also one of the busiest party-catering centers in Long Beach, handling all the details for wedding receptions, parties and banquets catered in homes, meeting halls or businesses. Groups of 10 to 1,000 are accommodated easily. The parties can cost less than $3 per person or more than $15 per person for elaborate gourmet affairs including linen, crystal, bar and a dance band.

That catering business was built up largely through the ideas and energy of young Jim and his sister Susie. A graduate of Lakewood High and Long Beach City College, Susie was formerly an executive secretary at McDonnell Douglas. At the Galley her duties include supervising the preparation of hundreds of party platters and banquet meals. She inspects each platter to make certain everything is correct.

Now Jim, Susie and their parents have taken still another step. They recently opened the Galley Banquet Center in its own building at 4139 Norse Way near Lakewood Boulevard and Carson Street. Built for $175,000, the center has a handsome antique French Quarter motif, with blue carpeting, blue walls and brown accents. It's available for wedding receptions, breakfast meetings, luncheons, luaus, elaborate dinner banquets and other affairs, accommodating groups from 25 to 250. The food is prepared at the Galley on the Diagonal and transported in special hot containers.

The Banquet Center has its own kitchen. So it is also open to groups who wish to bring their own food. It is already heavily booked for Christmas parties, but many December dates are still open. It has bingo equipment for licensed, non-profit groups which wish to use the center for fund-raising projects.

KATHIE KOLLWITZ (1867-1945) drew 'Muttergluck' in 1931. It is one of the German artist's few expressions of happiness. The drawing is in exhibit which opens today at Long Beach Museum of Art. The 31 works of art date from the 16th to the 20th centuries.

Many 'Images of Women'

Barbara Hendrick has been named acting manager to head the staff of Long Beach Museum of Art pending appointment of a permanent manager. On the museum staff for 11 years, Hendrick has been Museum Bookshop manager and manager of publications since 1972.

A new exhibit, "Images of Women," opens today at the museum, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. It will hang through Dec. 4. The 31 drawings and prints depict women in various roles and moods as seen by artists from the 16th to the 20th centuries. Among artists represented are George Bellows, Isabel Bishop, Peter Brueghel, Winslow Homer, Edvard Munch, Pablo Picasso, Francisco Zúñiga, Jost Amman, Mel Ramos, Alan Jones and Kathie Kollwitz. Kollwitz's drawing, "Muttergluck" is one of the artist's rare representations of carefree, maternal happiness.

The museum is open Wednesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

MONDAY, a show by three local artists/illustrators will open in Long Beach City College Fine Arts Gallery, 4901 E. Carson St., with a public reception from 7 to 9 p.m.

Said Mike Daniel, gallery director, "This show will feature commercial artists who also are fine artists. To demonstrate their versatility, we will display examples of both their commercial and personal works."

Dick Oden, a full-time member of the art faculty at Long Beach State University, is an illustrator for Rolling Stone magazine.

Peter Mendez teaches medical illustration at LBSU and has done illustrations for a medical textbook to be published this month.

James Endicott is an instructor in commercial illustration at LBSU. His posters for Fender Guitars will be displayed in the gallery beside the original illustrations.

Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday, and 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays through Wednesdays.

ELSA WARNER, whose last public exhibit opened Jan. 4, 1973, at Long Beach Museum of Art, has a retrospective show opening today and continuing through Nov. 26 at Tanega-Maher Gallery, 214

PCA seeks solutions to two major problems

By Elise Emery
Arts Editor

Meeting Wednesday in the Main Library, the board of the Public Corporation of the Arts faced two thorny questions:

•How can the 48 arts groups which comprise the PCA participate most effectively in the opening of the Pacific Terrace Convention Center Jan. 21-28?

•How, in the future, can Pacific Terrace facilities be made available to those arts groups at rates they can afford?

These problems faced the board of directors and Michael Alexander who only the day before had assumed his new position as executive director of PCA.

Time is the major obstacle for the Pacific Terrace project, said PCA president Laura Killingsworth. A plan must be presented immediately to the Mayor's Committee which is organizing the opening events.

After discussion which evoked suggestions for tours, performances and exhibits, the board voted to direct Alexander to "find specifics of budget, time, etc., then contact the arts groups for participation."

KILLINGSWORTH introduced the second question.

"All of the arts groups and many individuals interested in the arts in Long Beach are concerned because we now have a fine complex but it is beyond the financial reach of local groups that want to use it. At this point, the city can't renegotiate Pacific Terrace contracts — we understand that. But the PCA should let the city and the unions know that the arts groups are concerned, all 48 of them, and that they want to be considered."

Added Alexander, "Locally based organizations don't want to be driven from the new theaters simply because they can't afford the price. However, this is a delicate, difficult matter; we cannot expect workers to accept reduced pay for their work."

AGREED JOHN WATTS, "The unions are essential to the facility. The local groups must be subsidized in some way. A pattern must be devised to generate a fund which will make it possible for them to use the new facilities."

After discussing the feasibility of an endowment fund, grants and the earmarking of a percentage of each Pacific Terrace event for a cultural fund, Watts offered this three-point motion:

1. Long Beach shortly will have in operation one of the best facilities in the country.
2. It is important for this facility to be alive in the life of the community and for the community to be active in Pacific Terrace buildings.
3. We must find ways to make it possible for our own Long Beach organizations to use this facility and to be kept alive and active.

The motion passed unanimously.

ALEXANDER reported on the California Confederation of the Arts which met Oct. 28-30 in Los Angeles to consider "The Economic Impact of the Arts Industry."

Main speaker was Livingston Biddle who is expected to be confirmed soon as the new chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, replacing Nancy Hanks. Although he often is asked whether his approach to the arts is populist or elitist, Biddle said, he does not consider the two terms in conflict. "Populism means access and elitism means the best; therefore, we simply want the best to be available to the greatest number."

Alexander told of the advice given to the audience by Jesse M. Unruh, state treasurer: "If you must deal with politicians, make friends before your issue comes up for consideration — not at election time, because then every politician is a friend. Find yourself a legislator who knows nothing about your subject — he'll take your word for it."

John Hyer, who has been serving as interim consultant to the PCA, urged the board to "sit down as soon as possible with city officials and lay before them the need to help the arts. It is urgent that we move as early as is practical to make our concern known."

"A PARODY of Albrecht Durer's Etching of St. Jerome in His Study" by James Endicott may be seen at LBCC show which opens Monday.

'Roar—Smell' opens Friday

"The Roar of the Greasepaint-the Smell of the Crowd" by Anthony Newley and Leslie Bricusse will open Friday at 8 p.m. in the Studio Theater of Long Beach State University. Additional performances will be Nov. 12, 13, 16, 17, 18 and 19.

The plot explores the "game of life," in which each level of society, rich to poor, is made up of "haves" and "have-nots." Those who have, make up the rules as they go along in order to remain "havers," and the "have-nots" never really know that the game is being played.

"All is fair in the game of power and self-worth," say the "haves." Meanwhile, the "have-nots" desperately plead, "I'm a human being, too — please allow me that dignity."

Notes stage director Betsy Hamilton, LBSU professor of dance and movement, "Everyone knows these two ex-

Hail to Handel's unusual date!

The abused word "unique" applies literally to the performance the Long Beach Symphony and Chorus will give Handel's "The Messiah" Sunday, Nov. 20, at 2 p.m. in First Baptist Church, 1000 Pine Ave.

First, the audience will be invited to sing with the choir such favorite, well-known choruses as "Hallelujah" and "For Unto Us a Child Is Born." Robert L. Collins will conduct the concert which will mark the debut of the Long Beach Symphony Chorus, a group of 78 singers from the Long Beach area. In the future, the chorus will perform frequently with the orchestra.

In the second place, George Frideric Handel will make his first appearance in 200 years. At a champagne brunch at Jungry Jose's Restaurant, 190 Marina Drive, Seaport Village, from 8 a.m. to noon Nov. 20, Handel will play his Sonata in F major and his Sonata in A minor, both written for recorder and harpsichord. Maria-chis and a string quartet also will be on hand for the festivities.

Tickets for the concert alone will be available in advance at the symphony office, 121 Linden Ave., and at the door for $3. Price for the concert and brunch is $5.95; advance reservations are required. For additional information, write to the Long Beach Symphony or phone 435-3203.

Dear Mr. Smith: I notice that you respond to questions concerning large amounts. I think the most appropriate answer would be:

own equipment, gas for trips and other expenses. To help me on the tax problem I formed a business. The only income for the business comes from charging students for boat trips. (I own a boat that is used 99 percent for diving outings). Without the business setup it would be too expensive for me to teach scuba, although in the four years of the business, I have yet to make a profit. The school district is not about to pick up my expenses. Am I correct in deducting them on my income tax returns? — K.B.

Have the school district give you a written memo of your understanding and their policy. It should state that your salary includes all compensation and no supplemental amount can be authorized for the scuba (or any other) courses that you are required to teach. Your cash expenses and depreciation that are properly allocable to your teaching function, less income collected, should be listed with your itemized deductions.

IN 1975, WE purchased a ranch for $95,000 on which we still owe $70,000 on two mortgages. We anticipate redeeming the $52,000 note when we sell our residence. The $18,000 mortgage is being paid out $200 per month. Neither my wife nor I are 65 years of age and do not intend to purchase a comparable home. I expect to sell for $140,000 net, which will result in a profit of $90,000. I will ask for a down payment of $43,500 and a second $43,500 to be paid in next calendar year, the balance in monthly installments principal and interest — 25-year pay out — interest at full current rate. Is there a better solution? — L.M.

Have you been living at your ranch? Are you building a unit for yourself? Does it operate at a loss? What other income, deductions, capital gains or losses will you have in the year of sale? Is your residence free and clear?

Your new principal residence could reduce your capital gain, even if you don't invest the full $140,000. With your figures, every dollar over $50,000 that you put into your new residence, is a dollar off on your taxable gain. You count all costs within the 18-month periods before and after sale. If you decide to build, an extra six months is tacked on at the end. That ends up to a possible total of 42 months available to you to get into a new residence.

As to the proposed sale, both notes must call for at least 6 percent interest and specify that no additional principal payment may be made. (not even the small monthly payments you mention) until the year following the sale. Great care is needed, to avoid acceleration of taxable gain and the specific tax on tax preferences.

Over the years we have received many requests for an outdoor Christmas display that captures the winsome quality of the "Little Drummer Boy." So we created one that is equally at home outdoors or indoors (for instance, next to a fireplace or as part of a Christmas tree arrangement).

The charming face reflects the innocence of a child who comes to the stable bearing the only gift he can afford ... the music of his drum.

Printed in full color on heavy weatherproof paper (like a billboard), just glue the poster onto plywood and cut it out. Measuring 42 inches x 53 inches, this display is perfect for homes, churches, office buildings, stores and schools.

To order the full-color poster, Little Drummer Boy #509, send $3.50 (includes postage and handling).

Christmas bonus — Order our special #C-35 Christmas Package consisting of eight different displays for indoor or outdoor use ... including a Santa's Head, Christmas stockings, candles, giant outdoor cards and a seven foot tree. A $15 value is yours for only $6.50 (includes postage and handling). Send check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press-Telegram Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2333, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409

Dear Abby

Not keen on kilometers

DEAR ABBY: I am boiling mad and need to let off some steam, so you're elected.

When I start thinking about that metric system they (whoever "they" are) want to put over on us Americans, I get so mad I can hardly contain myself. It will cost millions of dollars to change textbooks and other publications, not to mention highway signs!

Our system was good enough for our forefathers and it's good enough for me. If our neighboring countries don't like us to be different from them, let THEM change their system!

It's too hard for us older people to change. I am 82, and proud of it. — MAD IN ALABAMA

DEAR MAD: Sorry old-timer, but the United States is the ONLY major nation in the world still clinging to pounds, inches, gallons and acres. The whole world is adopting the metric system of weights and measures. And the benefits to this country of ira corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

We had 40 on score and both sides were vulnerable. With this hand, what do you consider the best bid after a one-club opening on my right?

♠ K J 10 9
♥ Q J 10 8 7 6 5
♦ J

Strategic Sam, Carmel, Ind.

Answer: I would bid four hearts as a preemptive maneuver. Against some opponents, it might be better to overcall only one heart and then "allow" them to push you higher. However, with distributional hands, it's my view that the higher and quicker the better.

Dear Mr. Corn: Partner opened with a game demand two-spade bid, and I held this hand:

♠ 3 7 4
♥ 8 7 6 3
♦ A K Q 2
♣ 7

I responded three hearts and we later played in spades. My three-heart response was criticized as a poor choice. Do you agree? — Anemic Suit, Jamaica, L.I.

Answer: Yes, I would have bid three diamonds. When partner opens a game demand and you have support for his suit, it's a virtual certainty that his suit is going to be the trump suit.

Therefore, for slam purposes, it may be vital for opener to know about the diamond strength. Why introduce an anemic suit that has little hope of ever becoming the trump suit?

Dear Mr. Corn: Should responder always bid a four-card major suit in response to an opening one club or one diamond? — Likes No Trump, Nashville

Answer: Providing one has the strength for a response, the major suit response is preferred over a response of one no trump. Playing a five-card major system, any four-card major is biddable. In a four-card major system, most partnerships stipulate a holding of J-10-x-x or better.

Dear Mr. Corn: During a duplicate game I was the dummy when an infraction took place. I called for the game director and started to explain what had happened. The director advised me that I was in violation of the laws. What law did I violate? — Habeas Corpus, San Francisco

Answer: Law 43 of the duplicate code outlines dummy's limitations. Among them are:

"a. Dummy should not call the director during play."

"b. Dummy may not call attention to an irregularity during play except to try to prevent an irregularity before it occurs."

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband and I attended a wedding. We sent the newlyweds a sterling silver candle snuffer for a gift. I just received a note from the bride, thanking us for the "darling little gravy dipper!"

I was stunned when I read it. Should I call the bride and tell her? I'm sure she'd be very much embarrassed if she had guests for dinner and used the candle snuffer to ladle gravy. — SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: If you really fear that she will use the candle snuffer as a gravy ladle, call her and tip her off.

YOUTHFUL ENERGY.... desire... foresight... a willingness to work hard and be kind to others. Those ingredients still bring success in America as they did generations ago, despite all the doom-sayers who insist young Americans are lazy, selfish and don't care about anyone except themselves.

Which brings us to the subject of the Galley restaurant and party catering service, 4500 E. Los Coyotes Diagonal, just northeast of the Traffic Circle. If you've lived in Long Beach since the 1930s, you're aware that originally the building was a Currie's ice cream store. Then it became a sandwich shop which was mildly successful.

Seven years ago, John Choura and his wife Marie took over the Galley sandwich shop, aided by their energetic son Jim and daughter Susie. Their remarkable success, in such a comparatively short time, can be a lesson to others in what can be accomplished with hard work, perception and desire. Open for breakfast, luncheon and dinner, the Galley (closed Sundays) is an extremely popular self-service restaurant with two dining rooms, a delicatessen and a takeout department. Its specialties are inexpensive hot meat sandwiches and such dinners as barbecue spareribs and knoekwurst.

The Galley is also one of the busiest party-catering centers in Long Beach, handling all the details for wedding receptions, parties and banquets catered in homes, meeting halls or businesses. Groups of 10 to 1,000 are accommodated easily. The parties can cost less than $3 per person or more than $15 per person for elaborate gourmet affairs including linen, crystal, bar and a dance band.

That catering business was built up largely through the ideas and energy of young Jim and his sister Susie. A graduate of Lakewood High and Long Beach City College, Susie was formerly an executive secretary at McDonnell Douglas. At the Galley her duties include supervising the preparation of hundreds of party platters and banquet meals. She inspects each platter to make certain everything is correct.

Now Jim, Susie and their parents have taken still another step. They recently opened the Galley Banquet Center in its own building at 4139 Norse Way near Lakewood Boulevard and Carson Street. Built for $175,000, the center has a handsome antique French Quarter motif, with blue carpeting, blue walls and brown accents. It's available for wedding receptions, breakfast meetings, luncheons, luaus, elaborate dinner banquets and other affairs, accommodating groups from 25 to 250. The food is prepared at the Galley on the Diagonal and transported in special hot containers.

The Banquet Center has its own kitchen. So it is also open to groups who wish to bring their own food. It is already heavily booked for Christmas parties, but many December dates are still open. It has bingo equipment for licensed, non-profit groups which wish to use the center for fund-raising projects.

LUPE CUNNINGHAM
French Riviera welcomes children

SOME YEARS AGO, a wealthy man enjoyed his millionaire friends at the French Riviera restaurant. Often he told the host, only half-jokingly: "I love this place. I like the food. But couldn't you raise your prices so my friends won't think I'm a cheapskate?"

Raise prices? What a horrible thought. The French Riviera, South Street near Paramount Boulevard, has been successful and highly praised for many years because of its ability to serve delicious, extra-large luncheons and dinners at unbelievably low prices. Repeatedly, customers smile at owners Bob and Lupe Cunningham and comment: "Your food is really good and you serve a lot of it to every customer. But we can't believe these prices! How do you do it?"

Bob and Lupe do it with lots of good, old-fashioned hard work. Both are on the job at the French Riviera day and night. They watch food costs and food wastage like hawks. They eliminated linen napkins in favor of paper napkins in order to keep the quality of their food as high as always and, in some cases, better than in the past. The prime rib an jus cut, for example, is now a full eight-ounce slice for $3.95, served with many courses including hot, fresh soup in a tureen for second helpings; salad, baked potato, vegetable of the day and hot bread with butter.

Also featured on that big dinner are the 5½-ounce petite filet mignon, merely $3.45; whitefish deep-fried in fresh batter, $2.75; beef Stroganoff, $3.25; file of sole Marguery with a cream-style wine sauce, $3.50, and sweetbreads Parisienne, sauteed with wine and served with mushroom sauce, $3.25. No other restaurant in town has such quality items for such low prices with so many courses.

Petite Lupe is a cheerful, smiling hostess whose many jobs include assistant manager, bartender, and occasional waitress. She and husband Bob receive many compliments about the superb soups, different each day, prepared by No. 1 chef Mill Gradke. Families with small children are delighted with the French Riviera because the Cunninghams love youngsters and make them welcome. (In the past, children less than 5 years old weren't admitted.) Families are asked to order the child's dinner, $1.90, for children aged 5 through 8. Those under 5 can share the adult dinners.

Open every day, the French Riviera serves double Manhattan and Margaritas for $1 and inexpensive tap wines. The $1.95 luncheons, Mondays through Fridays, are terrific values, including cup of soup, salad, potatoes, entree, vegetable, roll, butter and coffee. Pot roast of beef with mushroom sauce and beef ribs with barbecue sauce are featured on that luncheon every day. A second special entree is also offered each day.

ROW COTTAGES OF SHAFTESBURY IN DORSET ARE OFF THE BEATEN TOURIST PATH

Seeking the literary scene far from the madding crowd

Gal-Ivating

England is as quaint as a tea cozy when it comes to picturesque villages. Some may be a bit cutesy — tourist baunts — but for everyone of those, there are hundreds that have eluded the tourist circuit.

I recently made a sweep of some within a two-hour drive south of London. An ideal vacation would be to spend at least three weeks experiencing them in depth.

Some, like the sea resort of Lyme Regis in Dorset, are popular enough with English weekenders to have plenty of accommodations. At others you have to settle for tiny inns or a bed and breakfast establishment.

Lyme Regis acquired its name because King George III once went swimming there in the buff accompanied by a band that followed him into the sea playing "God Save the King." You can see the place where he did it from the Mariners Hotel overlooking Lyme Bay.

The village is loaded with atmosphere. Winding lanes lined with bright vacation cottages and Georgian houses thread through forests of Scotts pine. Views are spectacular. Equipment for sailing, canoeing, powerboating and fishing is available, or you can spend your time just loafing on the beach.

It was while on a visit here in 1815 that Jane Austen started her classic novel Persuasion. Literary buffs get a kick out of rereading it and locating landmarks.

Another Dorset point of literary reference is the charming town of Shaftesbury, whose thatched cottages and steep cobbled streets have hardly changed since Thomas Hardy described the location under the pseudonym of Shaston.

Moreton-in-Marsh in Gloucestershire is a treasure we came upon quite accidentally. Our driver shot through it while we were en route from Cirencester, a medieval market town, to Shakespeare's birthplace at Stratford-on-Avon.

"There isn't anything there to interest a tourist," the driver advised, when I asked him to turn back.

That, precisely, is the town's attraction.

A booming fire in the man-sized stone fireplace of the bar of the Rodesdale Arms Inn lured us in for drafts of beer served in crystal steins. From there we wandered into the restaurant of the old 17th century hotel.

Low beamed ceilings, oak-paneled wainscoting and antique chairs and tables hinted of home-cooked food even before we had investigated the luncheon buffet. It did not disappoint us — roast beef with Yorkshire pudding, horseradish sauce and a great variety of salads, vegetables and pickled delicacies.

THE BREAD, I shall never forget. Served in chunks torn from a loaf, it is baked of bran flour by country craft bakers in a stone oven several centuries old. The bakery lies a few doors from the hotel. Don't leave town without buying a loaf.

Bread is not all that Moreton-in-Marsh has to offer. Its broad street with a marketplace is lined with honey-colored, 17th century stone buildings typical of the Cotswold district. Most of them house antique shops. Prices are lower than in London.

On Tuesdays, market day, farmers, craftsmen and merchants of every description set up stalls in the town center and the village becomes very busy. Otherwise, the village enjoys a sense of quiet undisturbed by the 20th century.

Why Milford-on-Sea, my favorite village, has not become notoriously chic is due only to a conspiracy on the part of local squires. When you wander its wooded lanes fringing upon New Forest, you will see their manors tucked among the trees. Most of the houses accommodate guests.

The village is tiny, with only two pubs and one tea room. I frequented them all and then walked and walked in big ugly English negative-heel hiking shoes purchased from the local cobbler.

New Forest with towering trees and myriad trails has been one of England's loveliest retreats since Saxon times. When you wander its sun-dappled paths where columbine and holly and moss-cloaked logs fall in profusion along the sides of a rippling stream, your lungs almost explode with the fresh, clear scent of the woods. When it rains and the forest grows murky and dark, that is beautiful, too.

Just a shaggy dragon tale

The Tatzelwurm was a fearsome dragon. He ate nothing but young virgins. He had an enormous appetite and a terrible temper when he was hungry, which was once a year.

He lived in Kitzbuehel in the snowy Austrian Tyrol. In the lively ski season, half the people look like they live there. The others are on crutches, drinking little cups of black coffee and steaming grog with der Jamaica rum. Listening to accordion music in Praxmar's where the Tatzelwurm is painted behind the bar.

I hope so anyway. I'm planning Christmas there. In the Grand Hotel where an iron militiaman stands guard forever. A fringe of snow on his iron moustache. His 18th century musket frozen in his hands.

In the evening, the windows are squares of warm golden light. On street corners, women sell Christmas table decorations. Small slabs of aromatic pine with thick red candles and sprigs of evergreen mounted on them.

And the Tatzelwurm. The terrified people of Kitzbuehel, short on virgins, offered him the king's daughter. They did not know that secretly she'd been playing hide-bo with a wandering troubador. She was not a virgin after all.

The Tatzelwurm was not fooled, being a true gourmet. He gave a horrid cry, threw down his napkin and split. Not even tipping the waiter.

He has not been seen since. Which shows you can't keep a first-class restaurant going if you let the quality of the food run down.

stan delaplane

rant going if you let the quality of the food run down.

RUSSIA does not change for the American tourist: "We were on a first-class tour. The highways were two lanes, full of holes. We had several near misses and finally we were hit by a truck near Leningrad.

"There were no rest rooms. We had 'bush stops.'

"The vending machines in the subways and museums serve a kind of orangeade in ONE glass which EVERYONE uses over and over."

This from a reader just returned who adds: "It was very depressing on the whole."

Best of Russia (from readers) is to get into Leningrad and stay there. Some adventurous types take the Trans-Siberian railroad. Best points reported: "Interesting." And "by railroad for a week and flying back to Moscow is very inexpensive."

"I HEAR that Europeans wear their military decoration ribbons. Would that be suitable for an American overseas?"

I should think so. An American friend of mine wears his Croix de Guerre ribbon on his lapel. In France sometimes I put on a show with a ribbon of La Confrerie des Chevaliers du Tastevin. (It's a Burgundy wine-tasters' society.) Everybody in ANY kind of uniform wears his medal ribbons. The doorman at the Savoy. The elevator operator in the Plaza-Athenee.

There are dozens of military supply houses in the yellow pages of the Manhattan phone book. French ribbons you get from Cartier on Fifth Avenue.

Problem (I found) is they don't make suits with lapel buttonholes anymore. You have to get ribbons sewn on. But with that status wine-tasters' ribbon, I don't get any back talk from the Paris wine waiter. Ha!

Caribbean cruise connection

Two-week Caribbean cruises aboard the Norwegian American luxury liner Vistafjord are available from Los Angeles on 24-hour connections via National Airlines.

The new seasonal package arrangement offers savings on the cost of arrangements if made separately. The air portion of the package includes round-trip jet economy fare to Fort Lauderdale-Miami, transportation to and from the airport and the Port Everglades pier and one stopover en route in addition to the 14-day cruise period.

Morning departures from Los Angeles aboard National DC10s are on alternate Saturdays, timed to put passengers on the pier before the evening embarkation.

The ship returns from the cruises in the morning, allowing passengers to return to Los Angeles the same day if they choose.

The Vistafjord accommodates 600 passengers on the cruises, which continue through April. Passengers sailing November 19 will visit Haiti, Curacao, Venezuela, St. Vincent, Barbados, St. Lucia, Guadeloupe, St. Thomas and Puerto Rico. The itinerary will be repeated in alternate sailings January through April.

Another series of cruises starting December 3 will stop at Jamaica, the Canal Zone, Colombia, Aruba, Martinique, St. Barthelemy, St. Maarten and St. Croix.

Advice to the Taxlorn

No price tag on advice

Dear Mr. Smith: I notice that you respond to questions concerning large amounts. I think the most appropriate answer would be:

"This column does not give free advice to persons in the 50 percent tax bracket. You can well afford to pay an accountant for such advice." Is this answer unreasonable? — W.J.B.

Your newspaper provides all sorts of information, service, and advice. If you read something on health by an M.D., it is a reminder to see your own physician. My files are full of clippings from clients with notations, "What do you think? Should I be doing this?" This column is intended as a public service, providing information to anyone who asks.

jacob smith

I TEACH five classes of physical education of which two are scuba. The students and I provide our

School menus

The following menus will be served in Long Beach elementary schools in the week of Nov. 7-11. All lunches include milk.

MONDAY: Chopped steak on mashed potatoes, Spanish coleslaw, chocolate pudding with marshmallow topping, peanut butter sandwich.

TUESDAY: Toastie dog, green beans, autumn fruit cup, peanut butter cookie.

WEDNESDAY: Chili macaroni, garden salad, applesauce, hot corn bread.

THURSDAY: Pizza, carrots, pear halves, whole wheat bread, oatmeal cookie.

FRIDAY: Veterans Day.

JUNIOR-SENIOR HIGH

own equipment, gas for trips and other expenses. To help me on the tax problem I formed a business. The only income for the business comes from charging students for boat trips. (I own a boat that is used 99 percent for diving outings). Without the business setup it would be too expensive for me to teach scuba, although in the four years of the business, I have yet to make a profit. The school district is not about to pick up my expenses. Am I correct in deducting them on my income tax returns? — K.B.

Have the school district give you a written memo of your understanding and their policy. It should state that your salary includes all compensation and no supplemental amount can be authorized for the scuba (or any other) courses that you are required to teach. Your cash expenses and depreciation that are properly allocable to your teaching function, less income collected, should be listed with your itemized deductions.

IN 1975, WE purchased a ranch for $95,000 on which we still owe $70,000 on two mortgages. We anticipate redeeming the $52,000 note when we sell our residence. The $18,000 mortgage is being paid out $200 per month. Neither my wife nor I are 65 years of age and do not intend to purchase a comparable home. I expect to sell for $140,000 net, which will result in a profit of $90,000. I will ask for a down payment of $13,500 and a second $43,500 to be paid in next calendar year, the balance in monthly installments principal and interest — 25-year pay out — interest at full current rate. Is there a better solution? — L.M.

Have you been living at your ranch? Are you building a unit for yourself? Does it operate at a loss? What other income, deductions, capital gains or losses will you have in the year of sale? Is your residence free and clear?

Your new principal residence could reduce your capital gain, even if you don't invest the full $140,000. With your figures, every dollar over $50,000 that you put into your new residence, is a dollar off on your taxable gain. You count all costs within the 18-month periods before and after sale. If you decide to build, an extra six months is tacked on at the end. That ends up to a possible total of 42 months available to you to get into a new residence.

As to the proposed sale, both notes must call for at least 6 percent interest and specify that no additional principal payment may be made, (not even the small monthly payments you mention) until the year following the sale. Great care is needed, to avoid acceleration of taxable gain and the specific tax on tax preferences.

The workshop

Over the years we have received many requests for an outdoor Christmas display that captures the winsome quality of the "Little Drummer Boy." So we created one that is equally at home outdoors or indoors (for instance, next to a fireplace or as part of a Christmas tree arrangement).

The charming face reflects the innocence of a child who comes to the stable bearing the only gift he can afford — the music of his drum.

Printed in full color on heavy weatherproof paper (like a billboard), just glue the poster onto plywood and cut it out. Measuring 42 inches x 58 inches, this display is perfect for homes, churches, office buildings, stores and schools.

To order the full-color poster, Little Drummer Boy #509, send $3.50 (includes postage and handling).

Christmas bonus — Order our special #C-35 Christmas Package consisting of eight different displays for indoor or outdoor use ... including a Santa's Head, Christmas stockings, candles, giant outdoor cards and a seven foot tree. A $15 value is yours for only $6.50 (includes postage and handling). Send check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press-Telegram, Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409

Dear Abby

Not keen on kilometers

DEAR ABBY: I am boiling mad and need to let off some steam, so you're elected.

When I start thinking about that metric system they (whoever "they" are) want to put over on us Americans, I get so mad I can hardly contain myself. It will cost millions of dollars to change textbooks and other publications, not to mention highway signs!

Our system was good enough for our forefathers and it's good enough for me. If our neighboring countries don't like us to be different from them, let THEM change their system!

It's too hard for us older people to change. I am 82, and proud of it. — MAD IN ALABAMA

DEAR MAD: Sorry old-timer, but the United States is the ONLY major nation in the world still clinging to pound, inches, gallons and acres. The whole world is adopting the metric system of weights and measures. And the benefits to this country of promoting an "international language of measurements" are too numerous to detail here.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband and I attended a wedding. We sent the newlyweds a sterling silver candle snuffer for a gift. I just received a note from the bride, thanking us for the "darling little gray dipper!"

I was stunned when I read it. Should I call the bride and tell her? I'm sure she'd be very much embarrassed if she had guests for dinner and used the candle snuffer to ladle gravy. — SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: If you really fear that she will use the candle snuffer as a gravy ladle, call her and tip her off.

Dear Mr. Corn: We had 40 on score and both sides were vulnerable. With this hand, what do you consider the best bid after a one-club opening on my right?

diamond strength. Why introduce an anemic suit that has little hope of ever becoming the trump suit?

Dear Mr. Corn:

Should responder always bid a four-card major suit in response to an opening one club or one diamond? — Likes No Trump, Nashville

Answer: I would bid four hearts as a preemptive maneuver. Against some opponents, it might be better to overcall only one heart and then "allow" them to push you higher. However, with distributional hands, it's my view that the higher and quicker the better.

Dear Mr. Corn: Partner opened with a game demand two-spade bid, and I held this hand:

♥ 58763
♣ 7

I responded three hearts and we later played in spades. My three-heart response was criticized as a poor choice. Do you agree? — Anemic Suit, Jamaica, L.I.

Answer: Yes, I would have bid three diamonds. When partner opens a game demand and you have support for his suit, it's a virtual certainty that his suit is going to be the trump suit.

Therefore, for slam purposes, it may be vital for opener to know about the

Dear Mr. Corn:

During a duplicate game I was the dummy when an infraction took place. I called for the game director and started to explain what had happened. The director advised me that I was in violation of the laws. What law did I violate? — Habeas Corpus, San Francisco

Answer: Law 43 of the duplicate code outlines dummy's limitations. Among them are:

"a. Dummy should not call the director during play."

"b. Dummy may not call attention to an irregularity during play except to try to prevent an irregularity before it occurs."

Designer Pattern

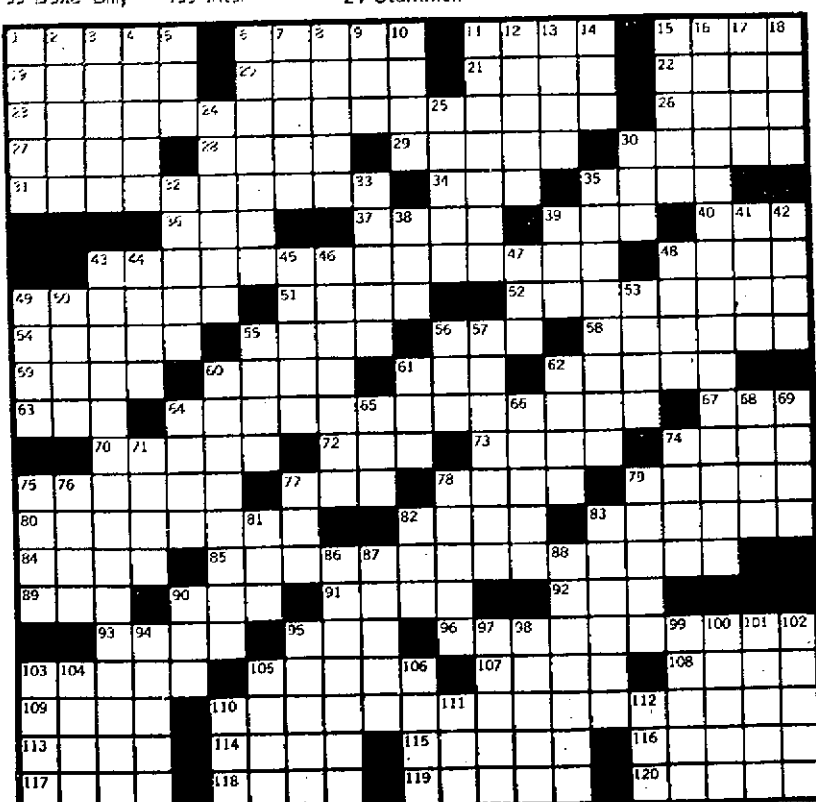

Estevez looks ahead to yule

Dramatically slit front and back — otherwise, a perfectly quiet fall of slenderness. California's famed Estevez has the design artistry to combine excitement with subtlety. Long, full sleeves frame the bodice above a semi-attached cummerbund that's long enough to drape and knot gracefully. The original of Printed Pattern A675 is boldly printed knit. Make your version print or solid color in crepe de chine, jersey, shantung, faille. Then, watch all eyes turn to you.

Printed Pattern A675 is available in misses' sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) takes 4 1/2 yards 60-inch fabric.

ROW COTTAGES OF SHAFTESBURY IN DORSET ARE OFF THE BEATEN TOURIST PATH

Seeking the literary scene far from the madding crowd

Gal-ivanting

England is as quaint as a tea cozy when it comes to picturesque villages. Some may be a bit cutesy — tourist haunts — but for everyone of those, there are hundreds that have eluded the tourist circuit.

I recently made a sweep of some within a two-hour drive south of London. An ideal vacation would be to spend at

It was while on a visit here in 1815 that Jane Austen started her classic novel Persuasion. Literary buffs get a kick out of rereading it and locating landmarks.

Another Dorset point of literary reference is the charming town of Shaftesbury, whose thatched cottages and steep cobbled streets have hardly changed since Thomas Hardy described the location under the pseudonym of Shaston.

Moreton-in-Marsh in Gloucestershire is a treasure we came upon quite accidentally. Our driver shot through it while we were en route from Cirencester, a medieval market town, to Shakespeare's birthplace at Stratford-on-Avon.

"There isn't anything there to interest a tourist," the driver advised, when I asked him to turn back.

That, precisely, is the town's attraction.

A booming fire in the man-sized stone fireplace of the bar of the Rodesdale Arms lured us in for drafts of beer served in crystal steins. From there we wandered into the restaurant of the old 17th century hotel.

Low beamed ceilings, oak-paneled wainscoting and antique chairs and tables hinted of home-cooked food even before we had investigated the luncheon buffet. It did not disappoint us — roast beef with Yorkshire pudding, horseradish sauce and a great variety of salads, vegetables and pickled delicacies.

THE BREAD, I shall never forget. Served in chunks torn from a loaf, it is baked of bran flour by country craft bakers in a stone oven several centuries old. The bakery lies a few doors from the hotel. Don't leave town without buying a loaf.

Bread is not all that Moreton-in-Marsh has to offer. Its broad street with a marketplace is lined with honey-colored, 17th century stone buildings typical of the Cotswold district. Most of them house antique shops. Prices are lower than in London.

On Tuesdays, market day, farmers, craftsmen and merchants of every description set up stalls in the town center and the village becomes very busy. Otherwise, the village enjoys a sense of quiet undisturbed by the 20th century.

Why Milford-on-Sea, my favorite village, has not become notoriously chic is due only to a conspiracy on the part of local squire. When you wander its wooded lanes fringing upon New Forest, you will see their manors tucked among the trees. Most of the houses accommodate guests.

The village is tiny, with only two pubs and one tea room. I frequented them all and then walked and walked in shoeg ugly English negative-heel hiking shoes purchased from the local cobbler.

New Forest with towering trees and myriad trails has been one of England's loveliest retreats since Saxon times. When you wander its sun-dappled paths where columbine and holly and moss-cloaked logs fall in profusion along the sides of a rippling stream, your lungs almost explode with the fresh, clear scent of the woods. When it rains and the forest grows murky and dark, that is beautiful, too.

Just a shaggy dragon tale

The Tatzelwurm was a fearsome dragon. He ate nothing but young virgins. He had an enormous appetite and a terrible temper when he was hungry, which was once a year.

He lived in Kitzbuehel in the snowy Austrian Tyrol. In the lively ski season, half the people look like they live there. The others are on crutches, drinking little cups of black coffee and steaming grog mit der Jamaica rum. Listening to accordion music in Praxmar's where the Tatzelwurm is painted behind the bar.

I hope so anyway. I'm planning Christmas there. In the Grand Hotel where an iron millifamian stands guard forever. A fringe of snow on his iron moustache. His 18th century musket frozen in his hands.

In the evening, the windows are squares of warm golden light. On street corners, women sell Christmas table decorations. Small slabs of aromatic pine with thick red candles and sprigs of overgreen mounted on them.

And the Tatzelwurm. The terrified people of Kitzbuehel, short on virgins, offered him the king's daughter. They did not know that secretly she'd been playing hide-ho with a wandering troubador. She was not a virgin after all.

The Tatzelwurm was not fooled, being a true gourmet. He gave a horrid cry, threw down his napkin and split. Not even tipping the waiter.

He has not been seen since. Which shows you can't keep a first-class restaur-

stan delaplane

rant going if you let the quality of the food run down.

RUSSIA does not change for the American tourist: "We were on a first-class tour. The highways were two lanes, full of holes. We had several near misses and finally we were hit by a truck near Leningrad.

"There were no rest rooms. We had 'bush stops'.

"The vending machines in the subways and museums serve a kind of orangeade in ONE glass which EVERYONE uses over and over."

This from a reader just returned who adds: "It was very depressing on the whole."

Best of Russia (from readers) is to get into Leningrad and stay there. Some adventurous types take the Trans-Siberian railroad. Best points reported: "Interesting." And "by railroad for a week and flying back to Moscow is very inexpensive."

"I HEAR that Europeans wear their military decoration ribbons. Would that be suitable for an American overseas?"

I should think so. An American friend of mine wears his Croix de Guerre ribbon on his lapel. In France sometimes I put on a show with a ribbon of La Confrerie des Chevaliers du Tastevin. (It's a Burgundy wine-tasters' society.) Everybody in ANY kind of uniform wears his medal ribbons. The doorman at the Savoy. The elevator operator in the Plaza-Athenae.

There are dozens of military supply houses in the yellow pages of the Manhattan phone book. French ribbons you get from Cartier on Fifth avenue.

Problem (I found) is they don't make suits with lapel buttonholes anymore. You have to get ribbons sewn on. But with that status wine-tasters' ribbon, I don't get any back talk from the Paris wine waiter. Ha!

Troy's No. 1 horse

Charles White makes a nice run for 14 yards and USC's fourth touchdown Saturday. On a day when numerous Trojans stood out in a 49-0 rout of Stanford at the Coliseum, White ran for two TDs and also caught a scoring pass from Rob Hertel.

USC wins one it had to, 49-0

By Dave Wielenga
Staff Writer

USC had just crushed Stanford 49-0 before 65,101 appreciative on-lookers, administering the worst defeat in the history of the series between the schools, but coach John Robinson appeared physically and emotionally drained.

"We put together a great football game," he said with relief, "because we had to."

After three losses in four games, Saturday's duel with the Cardinals on the soggy Coliseum turf was not just a battle to sustain USC's Rose Bowl hopes, it was a matter of pride.

"I'm proud of the way our kids have behaved the past few weeks," Robinson continued. "They never lost faith, they never wavered. They have fought their way through a lot of frustration and I admire them for that."

The Trojans may have entered the game with their backs against the wall but most of the afternoon they were launching them into the Stanford defense, where they ram-bled for 456 of USC's 592 total yards.

Charles White led the way with 126 yards on just 16 carries — giving him 1,114 for the year to break Anthony Davis' Pacific-8 rushing record for sophomores.

"I'd carry the ball 70 times a game if they gave it to me," White said, "but sharing the load like this keeps me fresh."

It also gave reserve tailback Dwight Ford (124) and fullback Mose Tatupu (101) an opportunity crack the 100-yard mark.

Tatupu, who has spent most of the season clearing the way for one or another of USC's speedy tailbacks, was the mainstay of the Trojan attack in the first half, when he churned for 88 yards on 12 attempts.

"We called his number a lot because it was working," Robinson shrugged.

Tatupu likewise denied that his sudden activity was part of any switch in tactics.

"Our only game plan was to take it to 'em instead of running away from 'em," he said.

USC wasted no time doing that.

The Trojans took the opening kickoff at their 23 and plugged methodically away for 12 plays until — on fourth-and-two on the Stanford six — quarterback Rob Hertel slipped a quick pass to tight end Dan Burns in the end zone for a 7-0 lead.

Robinson opted for the play despite losing a similar gamble last week at Cal when USC faced a fourth-and-one on the Bears' 11 yard line.

"Sure, we would have been disappointed if we didn't make it," Robinson admitted. "But I don't believe that if we had failed it would have turned the game around."

Neither did Stanford's middle linebacker Gordy Ceresino, who had to endure the force of USC's relentless attack.

"There was really nothing we could do about it," he said. "They didn't try anything we didn't expect. They just had a great day."

Although the Trojans scored just once in the opening period, they kept the ball out of the dangerous hands of Stanford quarterback Guy Benjamin by controlling it for 11 minutes and 24 seconds of the quarter.

Things weren't much better for the Cardinals even when Benjamin had the ball.

It has long been a theory that the best way to control an outstanding offense is to not let it have the football.

Long Beach State came up with a variation of that axiom Saturday night, but it was a wrinkle that will forever be etched on the already harrowed brow of head coach Dave Currey.

The 49ers limited Fresno State's vaunted offense to three

Vince Petrucci field goals, but fell victim to a pair of kick return touchdowns and bowed to the Bulldogs, 23-14.

The defeat was the fourth in a row for the 49ers (3-4) and the triumph was the sixth in a row for the Bulldogs (7-2), who clinched at least a tie for their first-ever Pacific Coast Athletic Association football title with the victory.

The beleaguered 49er defense, led by linebacker Dan Bunz and a downright heroic Eddie Johnson, did a masterful job of stifling a Fresno offense that was averaging a league-leading 436.1 yards total offense entering the Anaheim Stadium contest.

The 49ers bottled up that part of the Bulldog game, but were victimized by an 85-yard scoring punt return by Gary Hayes and a 95-yard kickoff return by Steve Woods.

Those scores, and two of Petrucci's three-pointers had Fresno in

Will winning become habit with Trojans?

Bill Walsh was impressed. Maybe even awed. "I think USC will make an excellent Rose Bowl representative for our conference," said the Stanford football coach Saturday after his team had staged a spectacular flameout at the Coliseum.

Then Walsh realized what he had said. "I mean the Trojans will make an excellent representative if they get in there."

Getting in there still is a problem for the Trojans, despite a 49-0 victory over the Cardinals Saturday.

But at least they've decided that a balanced offense isn't as important as winning.

At long last they've learned that they're a running team, with an occasional pass to keep the opposition honest.

MAYBE GRINDING it out isn't as spectacular as going all the way in one play, but it's the kind of football that has won national championships for USC. And Rose Bowl berths.

There are some horses up front for the Trojans, guys who don't dare put both feet on a scale. Big, burly blockers like Pat Howell, Brad Budde, Anthony Munoz, John Schumacher, Gary Bethel and Bill Gay.

There also are some guys who can fly with the ball—Charles White, Dwight Ford, Mose Tatupu, Lynn Cain and Rod Connors.

For the first time this season, someone decided to turn 'em loose.

What they did to Stanford was brutal. On one play, tight end Bill Gay blocked a Cardinal linebacker so far into the defensive backfield that the guy looked as though he were running interference for White.

By the end of the afternoon, USC had compiled 453 yards on the ground, White, Ford and Tatupu gaining more than 100 apiece.

The Trojans added another 139 yards by passing for a total of 592.

By the end of the game, people were beginning to believe what John Robinson had said prior to the start of the season about this being the "best offensive line the school has ever had."

WALSH WASN'T shocked by what had transpired. He had confided to friends on Friday night that he expected the Trojans to score six times if they tested Stanford's defensive line.

UCLA tough when it counts, 21-3

By Gary Rausch
Staff Writer

EUGENE, Ore. — Oregon, a team headed nowhere, played as well it could. UCLA, a team nearing a showdown for a trip to Pasadena, played as well it needed to — and the result was a 21-3 Bruin victory Saturday afternoon.

Playing in half-empty Autzen Stadium, under a pelting rain and on a green ice cube called Astro-Turf, UCLA slipped and slid its way to victory No. 6 on the season while running its Pacific-8 Conference record to 4-1.

That gives the Bruins a three-way tie with USC and Washington in the frantic Rose Bowl race, with Stanford one-half game behind at 4-2. The Trojans or Huskies will bow out next week when they collide at Seattle.

UCLA can look forward to a home date with Oregon State, a 24-10 loser to Washington State Saturday. That contest won't be any cakewalk. Oregon proved it wasn't any patsy, at least to Terry Donahue.

"People are going to think I'm saying things to be nice to Rich Brooks because he's my friend, but Oregon played outstanding defense all day," said the Bruin head coach while toweling off in the winners' dressing room. "Oregon is to be commended."

"Its defense played far and away better than I thought it could. If Rich would have a better passer to go with his offense, it could have been a different game."

The Ducks were severely limited without senior quarterback Jack Henderson, who suffered strained knee ligaments last week. An outstanding passer as well as a leader, he's within 38 yards of breaking into the all-time Pac-8 passing list.

"There's no question, it was not the same type offensive team without Jack," Donahue continued. "Oregon didn't have the ability to throw the ball and that was a tremendous advantage for UCLA."

How much of an advantage? Try the key play of the game.

Only 38 seconds remained in a tight first half. UCLA led, 7-0, on an eight-yard pass from Rick Bashore to Theotis Brown a half-minute earlier. The Bruin defense was chomping at freshman Dan Daly's chintstrap.

Frank Stephens had sacked him on first down; Billy Don Jackson batted down a second-down pass, and Daly's third-down throw hit Jeff Munro in the back.

On fourth-and-12 from its own 47, Daly sent split end Ken Page deep down the right sideline and fullback Vince Williams curling short in front of the UCLA bench.

Strong safety Mike Molina slipped in front of Williams, intercepted Daly and zipped 52 unimpeded yards for his first touchdown as a Bruin.

"That was the key play of the game," said Donahue. "It gave us momentum and we certainly needed it because we were hanging on at the end."

Molina agreed.

"We needed a lift, we needed somebody to take charge," he said. "Jerry (Robinson) is the guy who's known for that (three interceptions for touchdowns)."

Molina was fortunate the ball came right to him. He plays with a heavily bandaged hand, protecting the broken thumb he suffered before he season started.

"No, the thumb didn't bother me a bit," said Molina, smiling. "Ones that hit you in the hands are the hardest to catch. Once I grabbed it, my only thought was not getting caught from behind. Dave

Norton is ready for shot at Ali

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — As Ken Norton and Jimmy Young walked past a row studded with star personalities en route to their fight Saturday night, a star by the name of Muhammad Ali had a message for them.

"You're next," Ali told Young, and then told Norton, "I'm waiting for you."

At the end of a tough 15 rounds, it was Norton who answered Ali's message.

Ali had promised the winner of this fight a shot at the heavyweight title, and now he must put up or risk losing a share of that title.

The World Boxing Council gave him 60 days, effective Saturday, to commit himself to a fight against the Norton-Young winner.

Norton earned the shot with a devastating body attack when he found Young's head a very elusive target.

UCLA can look forward to a home date with Oregon State, a 24-10 loser to Washington State Saturday. That contest won't be any cakewalk. Oregon proved it wasn't any patsy, at least to Terry Donahue.

"People are going to think I'm saying things to be nice to Rich Brooks because he's my friend, but Oregon played outstanding defense all day," said the Bruin head coach while toweling off in the winners' dressing room. "Oregon is to be commended."

"Its defense played far and away better than I thought it could. If Rich would have a better passer to go with his offense, it could have been a different game."

The Ducks were severely limited without senior quarterback Jack Henderson, who suffered strained knee ligaments last week. An outstanding passer as well as a leader, he's within 38 yards of breaking into the all-time Pac-8 passing list.

"There's no question, it was not the same type offensive team without Jack," Donahue continued. "Oregon didn't have the ability to throw the ball and that was a tremendous advantage for UCLA."

How much of an advantage?

Try the key play of the game.

Only 38 seconds remained in a tight first half. UCLA led, 7-0, on an eight-yard pass from Rick Bashore to Theotis Brown a half-minute earlier. The Bruin defense was chomping at freshman Dan Daly's chinstrap.

Frank Stephens had sacked him on first down; Billy Don Jackson batted down a second-down pass, and Daly's third-down throw hit Jeff Munro in the back.

On fourth-and-12 from its own 47, Daly sent split end Ken Page deep down the right sideline and fullback Vince Williams curling short in front of the UCLA bench.

Strong safety Mike Molina slipped in front of Williams, intercepted Daly and zipped 52 unimpeded yards for his first touchdown as a Bruin.

"That was the key play of the game," said Donahue. "It gave us momentum and we certainly needed it because we were hanging on at the end."

Molina agreed.

"We needed a lift, we needed somebody to take charge," he said. "Jerry (Robinson) is the guy who's known for that (three interceptions for touchdowns)."

Molina was fortunate the ball came right to him. He plays with a heavily bandaged hand, protecting the broken thumb he suffered before he season started.

"No, the thumb didn't bother me a bit," said Molina, smiling. "Ones that hit you in the hands are the hardest to catch. Once I grabbed it, my only thought was not getting caught from behind. Dave

Norton is ready for shot at Ali

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — As Ken Norton and Jimmy Young walked past a row studded with star personalities en route to their fight Saturday night, a star by the name of Muhammad Ali had a message for them.

"You're next," Ali told Young, and then told Norton, "I'm waiting for you."

At the end of a tough 15 rounds, it was Norton who answered Ali's message.

Ali had promised the winner of this fight a shot at the heavyweight title, and now he must put up or risk losing a share of that title.

The World Boxing Council gave him 60 days, effective Saturday, to commit himself to a fight against the Norton-Young winner.

Norton earned the shot with a devastating body attack when he found Young's head a very elusive target.

Bama pastes LSU, captures SEC title

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Coach Bear Bryant of second-ranked Alabama captured another Southeastern Conference football championship Saturday, but he wasn't especially moved.

"We've got bigger things ahead," Bryant said after his Crimson Tide defeated No. 18 Louisiana State, 24-3, despite losing four fumbles.

Tony Nathan provided the scoring punch with two touchdowns on one-yard plunges and a 20-yard scoring pass to Keith Pugh as Alabama captured its sixth SEC title in seven years and earned a berth in the Sugar Bowl.

But Bryant is more concerned about national championships and always has been during his 20 seasons at Alabama.

"They had a little too much manpower and it took its toll in the second half," said LSU coach Charles McClendon.

Alabama took control of the game late in the third quarter when LSU failed to cash in on a fumble recovery at the Crimson Tide 46.

With LSU trailing 10-3 and facing a fourth-and-seven, Wayne Hamilton slammed Steve Ensminger for a 16-yard loss at the Tiger 45 and Alabama moved from there to a game-breaking touchdown, helped by a 26-yard pass interference penalty.

Nathan scored that touchdown on a one-yard run in the final minute of the third quarter and came back early in the final period to throw his 20-yard halfback scoring pass to Pugh.

While Nathan was taking care of the scoring, 227-pound fullback Johnny Davis punched out 126 yards for the Tide.

It was the seventh successive victory for Alabama since an early defeat by Nebraska and lifted the Tide's record to 8-1 over-all and 6-0 in the SEC.

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young quarterback Marc Wilson broke the NCAA single game passing yardage record Saturday, throwing for 571 yards and five touchdowns as 14th-ranked BYU rolled over Utah, 38-0.

offense played almost flawlessly.

Rob Hertel rebounded from a dismal passing performance last week by completing six of 11 for 108 yards and two touchdowns but Robinson took special pleasure in the third-down statistic. It showed the Trojans successfully converting 11 of 15 opportunities after a 10-for-36 showing in their last two games.

"Moving the ball had not been our problem," he said, "but sustaining drives had."

Only two of USC's scoring marches were less than 65 yards Saturday.

One was a two-play, 27-yarder that followed a fumble recovery by Walt Underwood late in the second quarter. Kevin Williams gained five yards on an end-around, then Hertel passed to White, who danced 22 yards for the TD that made the halftime score 21-0.

The other was the Trojans last touchdown, a 49-yard drive steered by reserve quarterback Paul McDonald that Rod Connors concluded on the 12th play with a five-yard burst.

Huskies shoot for the Moon, rip Cal, 50-31

BERKELEY (AP) — Quarterback Warren Moon ran for two touchdowns in the decisive third quarter and Michael Jackson of the ball-hawking Washington defense intercepted two passes as the Huskies, sharing the Pacific-8 football lead, beat 17th-ranked California, 50-31, Saturday.

Washington trailed 21-17 at halftime before exploding for 21 points in the third period. Moon scored on runs of one and 12 yards, halfback Joe Steele got his second touchdown of the game on a one-yard plunge and linebackers Jackson and Bruce Harrell made the third and fourth interceptions of the day for the Huskies.

The victory set up an important clash next Saturday in Seattle between Washington and USC. The Huskies, USC and UCLA share the conference lead with 4-1 records.

Moon, a senior, set up Washington's first two touchdowns with long passes and enjoyed perhaps the finest day of his varsity career. Steve Robbins, the Huskies'

Morton threw a great block on the quarterback.

MOLINA said the secondary call came from coaches Foster Anderson and Jed Hughes in the press box. "It was a 45-switch," said Molina, "a great call."

Many of the Oregon critics — and there are legions of them — believed the first offensive mistake of the afternoon was Brooks choosing to start Daly rather than Tim Durando, a redshirt sophomore.

Statistics would prove them correct. Daly suffered 23 yards in losses on first-half sacks by Manu Tuiasosopo, Morton and Stephens while completing only six of 13 passes for 67 yards.

In the final 30 minutes, Durando took command. He became OU's leading rusher on the day with 45 yards on 14 carries. He also completed five of seven passes for 59 yards.

"Putting Durando in there changed the tempo of the game," said Donahue.

Brooks, who coached at UCLA a year ago, refused to blame Daly or go overboard in praising Durando. "We were pleased with some of the play of both quarterbacks. We knew we'd play them both because we wanted a good look at them," he said, diplomatically.

THE DUCKS, who converted only three of 16 third downs (0-for-8 the first half), didn't manage a drive longer than seven plays until the final quarter and then they ate up almost eight minutes.

Bell, A.D.: Is O.J.'s lot their destiny?

When O.J. Simpson, Anthony Davis and Ricky Bell are found together in the Southland in November, something must be terribly, terribly wrong.

Why aren't they all off scoring touchdowns somewhere?

Davis, of course, could be anywhere. Since leaving USC, he has played for three professional teams in three different leagues, one defunct. With Bell, he now plays for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, as in winless Buccaneers, and one would gather he is not delighted to do so.

In nine pro seasons Simpson has played for only one team, the Buffalo Bills, although at times he has wished he could play for others. Now, because of impending knee surgery, he may never play again, a prospect he has been considering while in seclusion in Laguna Beach the past week.

One Heisman Trophy winner, two near misses. Trojans all, reunited in spirit if not in presence at the Coliseum this weekend.

"I never lost in the Coliseum," says Davis, who is best remembered for scoring six touchdowns against Notre Dame as a sophomore in 1972.

"Hopefully," says Bell, who has hardly been away, "we can come back to the Coliseum and show off a little . . . show people that the Tampa Bay Buccaneers are more talented than our record projects."

BELL'S REMARKS reflect a polarity in attitudes. Since Davis departed the scene for Canada with the breakdown of the Southern California Sun and the World Football League, he seems to have become less buoyant and more subdued. He doesn't smile as much.

"I'm in the middle of concentrating on the game," he explains, "trying to get ready for things we have to do Sunday. I'd like to get something going, individually, along with the team, so we can put something together. I don't like losing. I don't like the feeling of losing."

But he also admits he is homesick for the things that feed his id and satisfy his ego.

"Sure, I'd like to play in L.A.," he says, "because this is my home. My people are here. And I have to think about my mother. I'd like to be close with her."

"I may be wrong for saying this, but I'm just a California kind of a guy. Not that I have anything against playing in Canada or Tampa, but I played my best ball in California, even with the World (Football League)."

DAVIS HAS started three games for the Bucs and is their leading rusher with 212 yards (3.5 average). But with Bell healthy he won't be starting today. That is one good reason for being unhappy.

But there could be another. All three men are financially secure and, like Simpson, the other two have the ability to approach O.J.'s level of achievement in football. But O.J. has not played for a winner, and the early struggles of Tampa Bay strike a parallel of frustration.

"I wouldn't like that," Davis says. "I don't think any athlete with a competitive attitude wants to be on a loser."

"Things can change. I don't see us losing consistently like this. If we do, it's going to be a long, hard career. If O.J. retires, I hate to see the man go out like that."

Bell says, "I don't think O.J. is happy with his career. I think he would have liked to play in the Super Bowl. But O.J. doesn't have to play football anymore. Football has opened so many doors for him that he can do almost anything he wants to do now."

Bell also reminds that Simpson "played on a national champion in college and won a lot of games. Every dream is not going to come true, but for him many dreams have."

RICH ROBERTS

RICKY, NOT Tony Dorsett, who won the Heisman Trophy, was the NFL's top draft pick last spring. But Dorsett wound up with the Dallas Cowboys, whose '77 record is the exact opposite of the Bucs'.

Dorsett is a virtual cinch to be NFL rookie of the year, and Bell concedes the honor.

"Half the season's gone and I've rushed for only 150, 160 yards (actually, 188, he is told). I can't even conceive of being rookie of the year with those kind of stats."

"He is very fortunate to be playing with the Dallas Cowboys, but the way I look at it is that I'm with a team that's just beginning to grow, and I can be there and be part of whatever happens. Someday people will look back and say, 'Remember when the Buccaneers started?' and I can be one of the names mentioned in the building of a champion."

Davis says, "It's good to be in the NFL where I should have been in the first place, but I'd like to get a win in. It's tough getting up for practice and stuff like that."

Bell says, "I see a chance for us to win every game we play. You've gotta be positive. There are no negative feelings, especially for me. We're a young team. We have the talent. It's just a matter of putting it together."

"I expect this team to be a winner someday—I mean, to make it to the playoffs. But it would be a full effort, not just one guy, like myself rushing for a lot of yards. Of course, I'd like to do that, but if you win, those individual things come naturally."

BELL SAYS he is feeling fit at 220 pounds. Davis, smaller of stature, appears to be heavier than before, an observation that strikes a nerve.

"How much heavier?" he retorts.

"I heard you came into camp at 202," he is told.

"I came in at 200 pounds, yeah," he says. "I don't know why people worry about my weight. Several people come in overweight. I wish people would quit talking about my weight. That has nothing to do with our wins and losses."

"People have been talking about my weight the last month or so. My speed and quickness are still there. I've had the longest runs of anybody from scrimmage."

A.D. says he weighs about 190, at the most five pounds heavier than he played at USC.

He keeps his collection of cars in L.A. and drove the Rolls-Royce around while the Bucs were quartered at the Newporter Inn the past week.

In Canada, he did some fashion modeling and took an active role in the national Big Brothers movement, giving much of his time to that youth project.

"Now that I'm in Florida," he says, "we're trying to get something going with the Big Brothers there."

He plans to do more TV acting when he returns to L.A. after the season.

BELL BOUGHT his mother a home in View Park, presented himself with a new Mercedes-Benz and seems to be content with his lot.

"I accomplished a lot just to be a candidate for the Heisman Trophy," he says. "I would like to have won it, but I didn't even think I'd be drafted on the first round, much less be the number one pick."

So despite Tampa Bay's adversity, Bell still manages to smile.

"How much can a guy ask for?" he says.

Five different players scored for the Buckeyes, who boosted their Big Ten record to 6-0 and 8-1 overall. Illinois dropped to 2-4 in the conference and 3-6 for the season.

Limited to only eight plays in the first quarter, Ohio State finally put together a 73-yard drive in the second quarter with two minutes Leach scored again on a 4-yard sweep.

Northwestern, 0-7 in the Big Ten and 0-9 overall, briefly stunned Michigan by taking a 7-0 lead at 10:25 of the first quarter on Scott Stranski's 1-yard quarterback sneak.

Sooners boom, 61-28

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Loft engineered a 61-28 slaughter of Oklahoma State Saturday to keep the Sooners firmly in control of the Big Eight Conference lead.

Loft rushed for 103 yards on 17 carries, including an 80-yard touchdown jaunt, and passed for 85 more yards before leaving the game late in the third quarter with a slightly bruised shoulder.

Oklahoma State opened the game as though the Cowboys were going to make a game of it. They took the opening kickoff and drove 75 yards in nine plays for the score, a 2-yard burst by Terry Miller. Then a few minutes later Miller tacked on a 71-yard scoring burst to give the Cowboys a 14-7 lead.

GAME OF THE WEEK
At Denver
Pittsburgh 17, Denver 16

Both are in highly-unlikely spots in the standings as the NFL enters the second half of the season—Pittsburgh in second place in the AFC Central behind surprising Cleveland and Denver tied for first with Oakland in the AFC West. Loss would probably knock Steelers out of playoff contention. A Pittsburgh win, by the same token, could put a crimp in Denver's hopes for its first postseason competition ever, considering its tough remaining schedule. These are two of the finest defenses in the NFL, last Sunday's results notwithstanding. Steelers must correct turnover problem. Denver not likely to be sulking, despite Oakland defeat. In final analysis, Steelers can lose another another loss than can Broncos. Denver leads the series, 3-1-1.

Handicapping the rest of the schedule:
HOME TEAMS CAPITALIZED
SR: Series record indicates regular-season games only.

TODAY
RAMS 31, Tampa Bay 0—Just McKay's luck. He and his former Trojans face an angry Ram squad. Rams defense, pounded by Saints' rushing game, could, and probably will, take out its wrath on impotent Bucs, whose offense has scored in only two games all season.

SR: First meeting.
ATLANTA 13, San Francisco 10—Former coaching associates, Bennett and Meyer, meet in tough rematch. Atlanta had TDs called back in first meeting. 49ers entered Falcon territory only twice. Atlanta defense has not allowed rushing TD yet, and San Francisco, despite two consecutive wins, no certainty to crack that remarkable record.

SR: San Francisco, 13-9.
CHICAGO 17, HOUSTON 14—Don't want to over-react to Chicago's 26-0 number on Green Bay, but it may be signal that Bears are ready to live up to preseason assessment. Windy City offensive guide Gillman should have some surprises for his old club, which is laboring with a wounded Pastorini. Oilers 15-1 vs. two outside AFC Central since Phillips took over. However, favor Chicago's superior attacking weapons.

SR: Chicago, 1-0.
CLEVELAND 23, Cincinnati 17—Cleveland victory in opener vs. archrival proving to be no fluke. "Best ever" Cincy club continues to flounder. Something missing besides weak pass rush and Anderson's ailments. Red-hot Browns 16-6 straight-up last 22 at home vs. Central Division opponents.

SR: Cleveland, 8-1.
DALLAS 20, N.Y. GIANTS 13—Dallas won first in steam-bath—led 31-0 at one point. Vaunted Cowboy defense, No. 2 in NFL, will make life miserable for Piscarek and weak-rushing Giants. Only caution is that substantial home team underdogs (11 points or more) are 8-1-1 vs. spread this season.

SR: Dallas, 21-9-2.
KANSAS CITY 17, Green Bay 13—Both absorbed terrible beatings last week, as each was betrayed by year-long weaknesses—KC, its defense; GB, its offense. Packers' high mark last six games is 13 points. So KC's porous defense may not be overvalued.

SR: Green Bay, 1-0-1.
MIAMI 24, NEW YORK JETS 20—Though Miami has handled Jets by an average 27-6 average margin past five meetings, this is fighting Jets team, which continues to improve with every start. Michaels has Jets believing in themselves, but should seldom loses a game he figures to win—certainly not two in a row.

SR: Miami, 13-10.
MINNESOTA 21, St. Louis 20—Contest matches Minnesota's lock-hustler offense against St. Louis's inconsistent defense. Cards 2-1-1 vs. spread last 10 road games, but team's offense seems to be getting act together. However, unless script suddenly reverses, Vikes probably will find a way to get there.

SR: Green Bay, 2-4.
NEW ENGLAND 30, Buffalo 10—Don't know if Buffalo can recover from total humiliation at Seattle. Bills supposed to be building for future, but that future is looking farther off every week. Classic example of two extremes in how to operate a football franchise.

SR: Buffalo, 18-16-1.
OAKLAND 31, Seattle 13—Provided Oakland didn't spend all its fury at Denver, Raiders should have more than enough left to demolish Seattle. Seahawks are 1-6 vs. spread last seven on road. Raiders are 6-2 vs. odds last eight at home. Stabler will give visitors' pathetic defense a textbook lesson, and Zorn will find the song somewhat harder than he did against Buffalo.

SR: First meeting.
PHILADELPHIA 20, New Orleans 17—Pretty well established that New Orleans at home and New Orleans on road are two completely different ball clubs. Strong Saint rushing game (252 yards vs. Rams) will be going against strongest part of Philly's game—its rush defense.

SR: New Orleans, 4-3.
SAN DIEGO 26, DETROIT 10—Hudspeth's days at Detroit seem to be numbered. Lions' situation probably terminal, offense at odds with defense and neither is doing the job. San Diego has to be feeling good about gutty last-second win at Miami.

MONDAY
BALTIMORE 24, Washington 12—It's possible Theismann can punch some life into pathetic Washington offense, but not likely, especially against Colt defense. Sack Pack can tie off on skins without worrying about Washington's feeble running game. Allen's defense very smart, but Jones is no dummy, and he has arm and targets to light up scoreboard.

SR: Baltimore, 13-4.

Officials may be Coliseum stars today

By Rich Roberts
Staff Writer

Here's the starting lineup for today's game at the Coliseum:
Gordon McCarter, No. 48, an 11-year veteran from Western Reserve;
Paul Trepinski, No. 22, 15th year, Toledo U.;
Jerry Seeman, No. 70, third year, Winona State;
Nathan Jones, No. 97, rookie, Lewis & Clark;
Ray Douglas, No. 5, 10th year, Baltimore;
Armen Terzian, No. 23, 17th year, USC.

No, those aren't the Rams or the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. They only play the game. The guys the fans really pay to see are the officials, dedicated servants that they are, and this group presents a new treat.

The Rams haven't seen the McCarter crew this season, so Chuck Knox—and John McKay, if he cares to join in—will have a new bunch to yell at. For his afternoon's work worth $575, McCarter, the referee, will tear himself away from his chores as a university registrar in Cleveland. Trepinski, the umpire, also will be paid $575 to see who's clutching and grabbing along the line of scrimmage and to make sure everybody has his socks all the way up to his pants, a grave responsibility that supplements his slipshod as a real estate salesman in Toledo.

SEEMAN, the head linesman, draws $375 to see if anybody crosses the line before the ball is snapped, not a bad Sunday's work for a public school administrator from Fridley, Minn.

Jones gets a rookie's starting wage of $325 as line judge. The pressure is really on him. He must be able to tell time in case the stadium clock goes kaput, which is guaranteed to happen in the Coliseum.

But that has to be better than being a high school principal in Portland, Ore., which is what he does five other days a week.

Douglas, the back judge, will be paid $525 to keep his eye on the guys covering Harold Jackson, a nice break from being a supervisor and inventory control manager in Baltimore.

Terzian, the field judge, is director of physical education for the San Francisco school district and the guy who was hit with a bottle in the Cowboys-Vikings playoff game at Bloomington two years ago. As senior member of the crew, he also draws the maximum $575 scale for monitoring the fight end on every play. Watch it there, Terry Nelson, and there you have it, fans: the officials, better known as the Zebras, almost $3,000 worth of talent and the NFL stars of today.

BUT in case the game gets out of hand and the teams are allowed to play football, there are other factors to consider.

The Rams are favored by 21 points, but Tampa Bay has not won a game—ever—and may be caught looking ahead to next week's game against the Giants, who have fewer reasons for being bad.

Still, halfway into the season, the Rams are only four games better than the Buccaneers at 4-3, although clinging to a share of first place in the NFC West with Atlanta.

Where the real Rams lie is anybody's guess, but it probably is somewhere between the 35-3 win over Minnesota 13 days ago and the 27-26 loss at New Orleans last Sunday.

One positive factor today is that they are 4-0 at home, but a negative view is that four of their last seven, including their next three, will be on the road, where they are 0-3.

Also, Jack Faulkner points out, "There should be no home field advantage in this game." Faulkner, Knox's special assistant and advance

ROBERTS' ROUSER:
Zebras 1, Rams 0, Bucs 0

scout, cites the seven former USC players on Tampa Bay's roster, as well as four former Trojan assistant coaches and the head man himself, McKay.

The Bucs' offense features Ricky Bell and Anthony Davis but has been hogtied by an endless turnover in quarterbacks. Today's starter, rookie Job Blount, is the fifth but probably not the last.

Blount's first start was in last week's 20-10 loss at San Francisco.

"Blount showed a lot of poise," McKay said. "He's a bit cocky, which is a good trait in a quarterback."

TRE DEFENSE has something to be cocky about. It has given up only 118 points and there are quality players, led by the Selmon brothers from Oklahoma—Lee Roy at right end and Dewey at strong inside linebacker.

"They play aggressive football," Faulkner says, "and they've had good coaching."

The Bucs' three-man-line, four-linebacker plan is directed by Abe Gibrin, former coach of the Bears. The Rams will appear much the same as they did at New Orleans.

Huskies shoot for the Moon, rip Cal, 50-31

BERKLEY (AP) — Quarterback Warren Moon ran for two touchdowns in the decisive third quarter and Michael Jackson of the ball-hawking Washington defense intercepted two passes as the Huskies, sharing the Pacific-8 football lead, beat 17th-ranked California, 50-31, Saturday.

Washington trailed 21-17 at halftime before exploding for 21 points in the third period. Moon scored on runs of one and 12 yards, halfback Joe Steele got his second touchdown of the game on a one-yard plunge and linebackers Jackson and Bruce Harrell made the third and fourth interceptions of the day for the Huskies.

The victory set up an important clash next Saturday in Seattle between Washington and USC. The Huskies, USC and UCLA share the conference lead with 4-1 records.

Moon, a senior, set up Washington's first two touchdowns with long passes and enjoyed perhaps the finest day of his varsity career. Steve Robbins, the Huskies'

Morton threw a great block on the quarterback.

MOLINA said the secondary call came from coaches Foster Anderson and Ted Hughes in the press box. "It was a 45-switch," said Molina, "a great call."

Many of the Oregon critics — and there are legions of them — believed the first offensive mistake of the afternoon was Brooks choosing to start Daly rather than Tim Durando, a redshirt sophomore.

Statistics would prove them correct. Daly suffered 23 yards in losses on first-half sacks by Manu Tuasosopo, Morton and Stephens while completing only six of 13 passes for 67 yards.

In the final 30 minutes, Durando took command. He became OU's leading rusher on the day with 45 yards on 14 carries. He also completed five of seven passes for 50 yards.

"Putting Durando in there changed the tempo of the game," said Donahue.

Brooks, who coached at UCLA a year ago, refused to blame Daly or go overboard in praising Durando. "We were pleased with some of the play of both quarterbacks. We knew we'd play them both because we wanted a good look at them," he said, diplomatically.

THE DUCKS, who converted only three of 16 third downs (0-for-4 the first half), didn't manage a drive longer than seven plays until the final quarter and then they ate up almost eight minutes.

Cougars flatten Oregon State

CORVALLIS (AP) — Washington State, led by the passing of Jack Thompson and the running of fullback Dan Doornink, beat Oregon State 24-10 Saturday.

Thompson completed 11 of 19 passes for 111 yards, enough for him to join the elite group of five Pac-8 passers to go over 5,000 career yards.

He also ran two yards for a touchdown early in the fourth quarter to seal the triumph.

Doornink gained 89 yards in 21 carries. His two first-half, one-yard scoring plunges gave the Cougars an early 14-0 lead before the Beavers could get on track.

The Beavers lost starting quarterback John Norman with five minutes remaining in the first quarter when the junior signal caller cut his chin and suffered a possible broken jaw. Senior Kyle Grossart replaced Norman.

Longhorns No. 1 and let Houston know it, 35-21

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Cougars flew high amid taunts of probation until Texas' rambling Earl Campbell shot them down with three touchdowns Saturday to lead the No. 1-ranked Longhorns to a 35-21 Southwest Conference victory.

Only 6,918 fans showed up for the Southwest Conference game in 72-degree weather and were rewarded with a wild offensive show. It was the smallest turnout since SMU began playing in the Cotton Bowl in the 1940s.

SMU evened its SWC record at 3-3 and is 4-5 for the year. Rice is 0-6 and 1-8.

TCU got two quick touchdowns in the second period, both on passes from Steve Bayuk to Mike Renfro, and trailed at halftime by only four points, 21-17.

The Horned Frogs, 2-6 and 1-4, took a 3-0 lead on Steve Morman's 45-yard field goal but Taylor banged out two of his short-distance touchdowns before the first quarter ended.

Campbell, the nation's leading rusher. "I always thought I would play but it (the flu) was eating me up. I got tired in the first quarter but picked up some strength at halftime."

Ironically, it was a fumble by Shepard that set-up Campbell's second touchdown shortly before halftime that put Texas ahead for good.

The Longhorn offense was masterminded by quarterback Randy McEachern who suffered a strained knee late in the contest but is expected to be ready to play next week.

McEachern, who spiced Texas' running game with his passes, hit Ronnie Micksch with a 16-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter to kill the Cougar chances.

Evert easily defeats King

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — Chris Evert, her machine-like ground strokes working to perfection, overwhelmed Billie Jean King, 6-2, 6-2, Saturday to win the $250,000 women's tennis Series Championships.

Evert, who earned $75,000 for her victory in the round-robin tournament, completely dominated the foe she has replaced as the first lady of women's tennis.

King had won three consecutive tournaments on the championship series circuit going into this event at Mission Hills Country Club, but her game was definitely not up to par in the final against her old rival.

King's only real threat in the nationally televised match came in the third game of the opening set, when she led two games to one and seemed near a service break with Evert down 0-40.

But Evert, usually at her best under pressure, came back to win that game and went on to coast through the next four.

The second set was all Evert, as she broke King's service in the third and fifth games.

King, saying she was very disappointed with her play, added that Evert always seems to be at her best when they meet.

"She's always loose when she plays me," the 33-year-old King remarked. "She feels like she has nothing to lose. But of course today my game was absolutely shocking."

Evert, 22, who first began playing King when she was a teen-ager, said that her attitude toward her long-time opponent remains the same today. "I was 14 or 15 when I first started playing her," said Evert. "She was, and is, a living legend."

PRO FIX

By MORT OLSHAN
GAME OF THE WEEK

At Denver
Pittsburgh 17, Denver 16

Both are in highly-unlikely spots in the standings as the NFL enters the second half of the season—Pittsburgh in second place in the AFC Central behind surprising Cleveland and Denver tied for first with Oakland in the AFC West. Loss would probably knock Steelers out of playoff contention. A Pittsburgh win, by the same token, could put a crimp in Denver's hopes for its first postseason competition ever, considering its tough remaining schedule. These are two of the finest defenses in the NFL, last Sunday's results notwithstanding. Steelers must correct turnover problem. Denver not likely to be sinking, despite Oakland defeat. In final analysis, Steelers can less afford another loss than can Broncos. Denver leads the series, 3-1-1.

Handicapping the rest of the schedule:

HOME TEAMS CAPITALIZED
SR: Series record includes regular-season games only.

TODAY
RAMS 31, Tampa Bay 0—Just McKay's luck. He and his former Trojan face an angry Rams squad. Rams defense, pounded by Saints' rushing game, could, and probably will, take out its wrath on impotent Bucs, whose offense has scored in only two games all season.

SR: First meeting.

ATLANTA 13, San Francisco 10—Former coaching associates, Bennett and Meyer, meet in tough rematch. Atlanta had two TDs called back in first meeting; Bucs entered Patrick territory only twice. Atlanta defense has not allowed rushing TD yet, and San Francisco, despite two consecutive wins, is certainly in crack that remarkable record.

SR: San Francisco, 1-0.

CHICAGO 17, Houston 14—Don't want to over-react to Chicago's 29 number on Green Bay, but it may be signal that Bears are ready to live up to preseason assessment. Windy City offensive guide Gillman should have some surprises for his old club, which is laboring with a wounded Pastorini. Oilers 15-4 vs. fans outside AFC Central since Phillips took over. However, favor Chicago's superior attacking weapons.

SR: Chicago, 1-0.

CLEVELAND 23, Cincinnati 17—Cleveland victory in opener vs. archrival proving to be a fluke. Best over Cincy club continues to flounder, something missing besides weak pass game and Anderson's ailments. Red-bell Browns 10-6 straight-up last 22 at home vs. Central Division opponents.

SR: Cleveland, 3-1.

DALLAS 20, N.Y. GIANTS 13—Dallas won first in steam-heat-led 31-0 at one point. Vaunted Cowboy defense, No. 2 in NFL, will make life miserable for Pizarro and weak-rushing Giants. Only caution is that substantial home team underdogs (10 points or more) are 8-1-1 vs. spread this season.

SR: Dallas, 21-9-2.

KANSAS CITY 17, Green Bay 13—Both absorbed terrible beatings last week, as each was betrayed by year-long weakness—KC's defense; GB's offense. Packers' high mark last six games is 13 points, so KC's porous defense may not be overmatched.

SR: Green Bay, 1-0-1.

MIAMI 24, NEW YORK JETS 20—Though Miami has handled Jets by an average 27-6 average margin past five meetings, this is fighting Jets team, which continues to improve with every start. Michaels has Jets believing in themselves, but Shula seldom loses a game he figures to win—certainly not two in a row.

SR: Miami, 13-10.

MINNESOTA 23, St. Louis 20. Coolest matches Minnesota's backdoor offense against St. Louis's inconsistent defense. Cards 2-7-1 vs. spread last 10 road games, but team's offense seems to be getting act together. However, unless script suddenly revised, Vikings probably will find a way to get there.

SR: Even, 3-3.

NEW ENGLAND 30, Buffalo 10—Don't know if Buffalo can recover from total humiliation at Seattle. Bills supposed to be building for future, but that future is looking further off every week. Classic example of two extremes in how to operate a football franchise.

SR: Buffalo, 18-10-1.

OAKLAND 31, Seattle 13—Provided Oakland didn't spend all its fury at Denver, Raiders should have more than enough left to demolish Seattle. Seahawks are 1-6 vs. spread last seven on road. Raiders are 6-2 vs. odds last eight at home. Stabler will give visitors' pathetic defense a textbook lesson, and Zorn will find the going somewhat harder than he did against Buffalo.

SR: First meeting.

PHILADELPHIA 20, New Orleans 17—Pretty well established that New Orleans at home and New Orleans on road are two completely different ball clubs. Strong Saint rushing game (252 yards vs. Rams) will be going against strongest part of Phil's game—its rush defense.

SR: New Orleans, 1-3.

SAN DIEGO 26, DETROIT 10—Hudspeth's days at Detroit seem to be numbered. Lions' situation probably terminal. Offense at odds with defense and neither is doing the job. San Diego has to be feeling good about gutty last-second win at Miami.

MONDAY
BALTIMORE 21, Washington 13—It's possible Tschernman can punch some life into pathetic Washington offense, but not likely, especially against Colt defense. Sack Pack can too off on skins without worrying about Washington's feeble running game. Allen's defense very smart, but Jones is no dummy, and he has arm and targets to light up scoreboard.

SR: Baltimore, 13-4.

Officials may be Coliseum stars today

By Rich Roberts
Staff Writer

Here's the starting lineup for today's game at the Coliseum:

Gordon McCarter, No. 48, an 11-year veteran from Western Reserve;

Paul Trepinski, No. 22, 15th year, Toledo U.;

Jerry Seeman, No. 70, third year, Winona State;

Nathan Jones, No. 97, rookie, Lewis & Clark;

Ray Douglas, No. 5, 10th year, Baltimore;

Armen Terzian, No. 23, 17th year, USC.

No, those aren't the Rams or the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. They only play the game. The guys the fans really pay to see are the officials, dedicated servants that they are, and this group presents a new treat.

The Rams haven't seen the McCarter crew this season, so Chuck Knox—and John McKay, if he cares to join in—will have a new bunch to yell at.

For his afternoon's work worth $575, McCarter, the referee, will tear himself away from his chores as a university registrar in Cleveland. Trepinski, the umpire, also will be paid $575 to see who's clutching and grabbing along the line of scrimmage and to make sure everybody has his socks all the way up to his pants, a grave responsibility that supplements his stipend as a real estate salesman in Toledo.

SEEMAN, the head linesman, draws $375 to see if anybody crosses the line before the ball is snapped, not a bad Sunday's work for a public school administrator from Fridley, Minn.

Jones gets a rookie's starting wage of $325 as line judge. The pressure is really on him. He must be able to tell time in case the stadium clock goes kaput, which is guaranteed to happen in the Coliseum.

But that has to be better than being a high school principal in Portland, Ore., which is what he does five other days a week.

Douglas, the back judge, will be paid $525 to keep his eye on the guys covering Harold Jackson, a nice break from being a supervisor and inventory control manager in Baltimore.

Terzian, the field judge, is director of physical education for the San Francisco school district and the guy who was hit with a bottle in the Cowboys-Vikings playoff game at Bloomington two years ago.

As senior member of the crew, he also draws the maximum $575 scale for monitoring the tight end on every play.

Watch it there, Terry Nelson, and there you have it, fans: the officials, better known as the Zebras, almost $3,000 worth of talent and the NFL stars of today.

BUT in case the game gets out of hand and the teams are allowed to play football, there are other factors to consider.

The Rams are favored by 21 points, but Tampa Bay has not won a game—ever—and may be caught looking ahead to next week's game against the Giants, who have fewer reasons for being bad.

Still, halfway into the season, the Rams are only four games better than the Buccaneers at 4-3, although clinging to a share of first place in the NFC West with Atlanta.

Where the real Rams lie is anybody's guess, but it probably is somewhere between the 35-3 win over Minnesota 13 days ago and the 27-26 loss at New Orleans last Sunday.

One positive factor today is that they are 4-0 at home, but a negative view is that four of their last seven, including their next three, will be on the road, where they are 0-3.

Also, Jack Faulkner points out, "There should be no home field advantage in this game."

Faulkner, Knox's special assistant and advance scout, cites the seven former USC players on Tampa Bay's roster, as well as four former Trojan assistant coaches and the head man himself, McKay.

ROBERTS ROUSER:
Zebras 1, Rams 0, Bucs 0

The Bucs' offense features Ricky Bell and Anthony Davis but has been hogtied by an endless turnover in quarterbacks. Today's starter, rookie Jeb Blount, is the fifth but probably not the last.

Blount's first start was in last week's 20-10 loss at San Francisco.

"Blount showed a lot of poise," McKay said. "He's a bit cocky, which is a good trait in a quarterback."

THE DEFENSE has something to be cocky about. It has given up only 113 points and there are quality players, led by the Selmon brothers from Oklahoma—Lee Roy at right end and Dewey at strong inside linebacker.

"They play aggressive football," Faulkner says, "and they've had good coaching."

The Bucs' three-man-line, four-linebacker plan is directed by Abe Gbron, former coach of the Bears.

The Rams will appear much the same as they did at New Orleans.

Star Ball stuns 'em in 100-grander at Oak Tree

Argentine-bred Star Ball moved from ninth place late in the backstretch and win the inaugural $100,000 Yellow Ribbon Stakes by 2 1/2 lengths Saturday at the Oak Tree meeting at Santa Anita.

Star Ball, owned by Valpredo & Valpredo and ridden by Howard Grant, earned $60,000 in winning the event for older fillies and mares. Swingtime was second, followed by Theia, Star Ball's stablemate Lucie Manet and favored Hail Hilarious.

The 5-year-old mare covered 1 1/4 miles on the turf course in 2:02 1/2. The first five finishers each carried 123 pounds under weight-for-age conditions.

The entry of Star Ball and Lucie Manet paid $17.60, $7 and $8.40. Swingtime and Theia, coupled in a three-horse entry that also included eighth-place finisher Glenaris, returned $3.80 and $3.40.

Dancing Femma led early as the 11 horses came off the hillside part of the track. In the backstretch, Star Ball saved ground along the inside rail on the final turn, then swung outside to avoid other horses ahead.

Racing in the middle of the track, Star Ball and Swingtime began passing horses.

The winner, trained by Jaime Villagomez, raised her year's total earnings to nearly $200,000. Second place was worth $20,000, third $12,000 and fourth $6,000.

Grant said Villagomez advised him to wait and make one run.

"We go through all the way around until the final turn," Grant said. "She really gave me a run through the lane."

Saturday's turf highlights

LAUREL — Steve Cauthen wasn't trainer Michael Kay's first choice, or even his second choice, Johnny D. in the $200,000 Washington, D.C. International. But because veterans Jorge Velasquez and Bill Shoemaker had previous commitments, Kay went for the 17-year-old youngster to ride the 4-year-old gelded son of Stage Door Johnny. Cauthen, the nation's leading rider and winner of more than $5.2 million in purse earnings, gave Johnny D. a perfect ride and an easy victory in the 28th running of the 1 1/4-mile turf turf. The winning time over the slow course was 2:42.1. Majestic Light, like Johnny D., representing the United States, made a late move to finish second, 2 1/2 lengths back. Favored Exceller of France, owned by Texas oilman Nelson Bunker Hunt, ran third, another 14 lengths back. Johnny D.'s victory ended France's four-year victory streak and was the United States' 12th triumph in the international.

BAY MEADOWS — Favored Hoist the Silver romped to a seven-length victory in the $25,000-added San Mateo Stakes. It was the first stakes victory and the fourth triumph in nine starts for the winner, and it earned Hoist the Silver a starting berth in the $100,000-added El Camino Real Stakes on Nov. 19. A.L. Diaz piloted Hoist the Silver over the mile and a sixteenth in 1:44 1/5 on a track that had gone from sloppy to muddy to good during the afternoon, following overnight rain.

Synopate, leader from the outset, finished third, but was disqualified and placed fourth. Believe it won second money and Junction, who finished fourth, moved up to third. Forever Casting paid $8.60.

AQUEDUCT — Sensational, last year's 2-year-old filly champion who has been a disappointment this year, broke a nine-race losing streak at by winning the $107,600 Ladies Handicap as a 12-1 outsider. The daughter of Hoist the Flag came from behind to win the 1 1/4-mile turf for fillies and mares by 3/4 lengths over Dottie's Day, before a crowd of 26,158.

Ironically, it was a fumble by Shepard that set-up Campbell's second touchdown shortly before halftime that put Texas ahead for good.

The Longhorn offense was masterminded by quarterback Randy McEachern who suffered a strained knee late in the contest but is expected to be ready to play next week.

McEachern, who spiced Texas' running game with his passes, hit Ronnie Mlksch with a 16-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter to kill the Cougar chances.

Evert easily defeats King

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — Chris Evert, her machine-like ground strokes working to perfection, overwhelmed Billie Jean King, 6-2, 6-2, Saturday to win the $250,000 women's tennis Series Championships.

Evert, who earned $75,000 for her victory in the round-robin tournament, completely dominated the foe she has replaced as the first lady of women's tennis.

King had won three consecutive tournaments on the championship series circuit going into this event at Mission Hills Country Club, but her game was definitely not up to par in the final against her old rival.

King's only real threat in the nationally televised match came in the third game of the opening set, when she led two games to one and seemed near a service break with Evert down 0-40.

But Evert, usually at her best under pressure, came back to win that game and went on to coast through the next four.

The second set was all Evert, as she broke King's service in the third and fifth games.

King, saying she was very disappointed with her play, added that Evert always seems to be at her best when they meet.

"She's always loose when she plays me," the 33-year-old King remarked. "She feels like she has nothing to lose. But of course today my game was absolutely shocking."

Optimism keynotes RV show

If all the Dodger home run sluggers put their collective hits and hundreds of feet together, they still couldn't get the ball out of the 25th Recreation Vehicle and Manufactured Housing Show which is open to the public at Dodger Stadium.

The more than 50 modular homes and 1,000 camper and trailer units fill the Stadium and overflow far into the hills beyond. There is no one to argue the point that it is the largest and most beautiful show the two associations have ever staged in Dodger Stadium. This is the last year, they say, because the RVIA and the WHMI already have made plans to stage the annual show on the Queen Mary parking lot in Long Beach in 1978. Of course, the way this city's feasibility studies pop up here and there, there could be a shift before November of next year.

My advice to anybody trying to see the entire show is to take comfortable slippers; you'll need them when you get through walking miles through the campers, trailers and the modular homes, some of which boast of almost 2,000 square feet, with two or three bedrooms, two baths and comfort that you never dreamed possible in manufactured houses.

Show hours on weekdays are noon to 9 p.m.; Saturday, 10 to 9, and Sunday, 10 to 6. Admission is $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children 6 to 16 and free for those under 6.

YOU'LL FIND THE LARGE motor homes as usual, but you also will see a trend toward the smaller units. It is surprising what different manufacturers have done with such units as the Toyota long-bed trucks, the Datsuns and others.

There is a definite trend toward the smaller trailers, and the inside of Dodger Stadium looks like an episode from Wagon Train. There are rows and rows of campers, large and small, and trailers around the outfield, but in the center of the Stadium are camping trailers, such as the Coleman, which has more units than ever on display. Those fold into neat traveling trailers, then can be expanded to sleep six or even eight persons.

Pontex Products, Ltd., of Anaheim is showing the Pont-X-SR2, a one-piece camper body on a long-bed Toyota. The entire rear end is a window. Then to top that off, B.A.E., a division of Turdyne Corporation has turbocharged the engine for more power. It's an interesting exhibit.

Trillium Industries of Canada is showing two lightweight campers, 13 and 15 feet long, which can be pulled by any of the compacts, foreign or domestic. There are several floor plans.

All of the larger units, such as Argosy, Midas, Sportcoach, Revcon and others, have changed to lighter materials to make the campers or the trailers easier to handle and provide more fuel economy.

RV MANUFACTURERS, distributors and even the local dealers are not fretting about the current energy hassle in Washington. I put this question point-blank to one manufacturer's representative: "With the President wanting special taxes on all fuel-guzzling vehicles and Congress still arguing over the energy program, don't you feel you are sitting on a powder keg that might blow any moment?"

"What the President wants and what he gets are entirely different figures, so the industry isn't worried," he replied.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Thayne Smith, public relations chief for RVIA, pointed out that shipment of recreational vehicles from manufacturers to dealers increased seven percent in August, compared with the same month a year ago.

David Forward, RVIA president, said that the August jump put the industry ahead for the year by 1.6 percent, compared with the same eight-month period in 1976, which was the second largest in industry history.

If you already have a recreational vehicle, you may want to look at some of the new accessories that are being displayed in 200 booths under the Stadium roof.

Gioia on mound for Rockets vs. Dodger Minors at Blair

The Long Beach Rockets, fresh from a 5-1 win over the California Dodgers last Sunday, host the Dodger Minors today at Blair Field, 1:30 p.m.

In the process of winning last Sunday, the Rockets also discovered a new pitcher, Greg Gioia, former Millikan High and LBCC hurler.

Gioia, who has been living in Italy the past few years, worked five innings and struck out 10 while allowing only two scratch singles. He will start today with John Lavery in relief.

Gilbert, Jones pad lead to 3

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert and Grier Jones blended their talents for a back-9 29 that propelled them to a 3-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Walt Disney World National Team Golf Classic.

"The only really nice thing about a third-round lead," said Jones, "is that you know if you play good the next day you're going to win. If you're trailing,

Trevino tops Casper for Morocco win

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — Lee Trevino of the United States shot a final-round 73 for a 283 and won the $70,000 King Hassan II Golf Tournament by 4 strokes over American Billy Casper Saturday. Casper finished with a 72 for a 287.

Severiano Ballesteros of Spain had a final-round 72 and was third at 289.

Bud Allin of the United States wound up fourth with 293 after firing a 74 Saturday and American Curtis Strange finished fifth at 294 with a final-round 76.

Peter Jacobson of the United States posted a 74 and was in a three-way tie for sixth with 297. American Ron Cerrudo finished in a three-way tie for 10th with 301 after fashioning a final-round 81. Tommy Aaron of the United States had a 76 and wound up tied for 13th at 303.

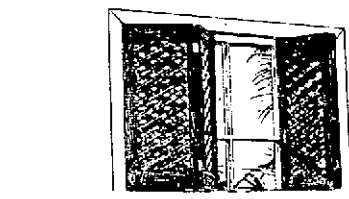

you can play good and not win."

Gilbert and Jones had a better-ball score of 61, a whopping 11 under par on the rain-soaked, 7,197-yard Magnolia Course at Walt Disney World and compiled a 54-hole total of 187, a dizzying 29 under par.

Tied for second at 190 were the teams of Tom Weiskopf and Hale Irwin and Chi Chi Rodriguez and Mexican Victor Regalado. Weiskopf and Irwin combined for a better ball 63 in the cloudy, threatening weather, while Regalado and Rodriguez clowned their way to a 65.

"We've still got a lot of golf to play," warned Gilbert. "And we've got some tough teams behind us."

Optimism keynotes RV show

If all the Dodger home run sluggers put their collective hits and hundreds of feet together, they still couldn't get the ball out of the 25th Recreation Vehicle and Manufactured Housing Show which is open to the public at Dodger Stadium.

The more than 50 modular homes and 1,000 camper and trailer units fill the Stadium and overflow far into the hills beyond. There is no one to argue the point that it is the largest and most beautiful show the two associations have ever staged in Dodger Stadium. This is the last year, they say, because the RVIA and the WIMH already have made plans to stage the annual show on the Queen Mary parking lot in Long Beach in 1978. Of course, the way this city's feasibility studies pop up here and there, there could be a shift before November of next year.

My advice to anybody trying to see the entire show is to take comfortable slippers; you'll need them when you get through walking miles through the campers, trailers and the modular homes, some of which boast of almost 2,000 square feet, with two or three bedrooms, two baths and comfort that you never dreamed possible in manufactured houses.

Show hours on weekdays are noon to 9 p.m.; Saturday, 10 to 9, and Sunday, 10 to 5. Admission is $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children 6 to 16 and free for those under 6.

YOU'LL FIND THE LARGE motor homes as usual, but you also will see a trend toward the smaller units. It is surprising what different manufacturers have done with such units as the Toyota long-bed trucks, the Datsuns and others.

There is a definite trend toward the smaller trailers, and the inside of Dodger Stadium looks like an episode from Wagon Train. There are rows and rows of campers, large and small, and trailers around the outfield, but in the center of the Stadium are camping trailers, such as the Coleman, which has more units than ever on display. Those fold into neat traveling trailers, then can be expanded to sleep six or even eight persons.

Pontex Products, Ltd., of Anaheim is showing the Pont-X-SR2, a one-piece camper body on a long-bed Toyota. The entire rear end is a window. Then to top that off, B.A.E., a division of Turdyne Corporation has turbocharged the engine for more power. It's an interesting exhibit.

Trillium Industries of Canada is showing two lightweight campers, 13 and 15 feet long, which can be pulled by any of the compacts, foreign or domestic. There are several floor plans.

All of the larger units, such as Argosy, Midas, Sportscoach, Revcon and others, have changed to lighter materials to make the campers or the trailers easier to handle and provide more fuel economy.

RV MANUFACTURERS, distributors and even the local dealers are not fretting about the current energy hassle in Washington. I put this question point-blank to one manufacturer's representative: "With the President wanting special taxes on all fuel-guzzling vehicles and Congress still arguing over the energy program, don't you feel you are sitting on a powder keg that might blow any moment?"

"What the President wants and what he gets are entirely different figures, so the industry isn't worried," he replied.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Thayne Smith, public relations chief for RVIA, pointed out that shipment of recreational vehicles from manufacturers to dealers increased seven percent in August, compared with the same month a year ago.

David Forward, RVIA president, said that the August jump put the industry ahead for the year by 1.6 percent, compared with the same eight-month period in 1976, which was the second largest in industry history.

If you already have a recreational vehicle, you may want to look at some of the new accessories that are being displayed in 200 booths under the Stadium roof.

Gilbert, Jones pad lead to 3

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert and Grier Jones blended their talents for a back-9 29 that propelled them to a 3-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Walt Disney World National Team Golf Classic.

"The only really nice thing about a third-round lead," said Jones, "is that you know if you play good the next day you're going to win. If you're trailing, you can play good and not win."

Gilbert and Jones had a better-ball score of 61, a whopping 11 under par on the rain-soaked, 7,197-yard Magnolia Course at Walt Disney World and compiled a 54-hole total of 187, a dizzying 29 under par.

Tied for second at 180 were the teams of Tom Weiskopf and Hale Irwin and Chi Chi Rodriguez and Mexican Victor Regalado. Weiskopf and Irwin combined for a better ball 63 in the cloudy, threatening weather, while Regalado and Rodriguez clowned their way to a 65.

"We've still got a lot of golf to play," warned Gilbert. "And we've got some tough teams behind us."

Trevino tops Casper for Morocco win

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — Lee Trevino of the United States shot a final-round 73 for a 283 and won the $70,000 King Hassan II Golf Tournament by 4 strokes over American Billy Casper Saturday. Casper finished with a 72 for a 287.

Severiano Ballesteros of Spain had a final-round 72 and was third at 289.

Bud Allin of the United States wound up fourth with 293 after firing a 74 Saturday and American Curtis Strange finished fifth at 294 with a final-round 76.

Peter Jacobson of the United States posted a 74 and was in a three-way tie for sixth with 297. American Ron Cerrudo finished in a three-way tie for 10th with 301 after fashioning a final-round 81. Tommy Aaron of the United States had a 76 and wound up tied for 13th at 303.

SOME FISH GULP AIR AT THE WATER'S SURFACE TO SUPPLEMENT THEIR OXYGEN INTAKE

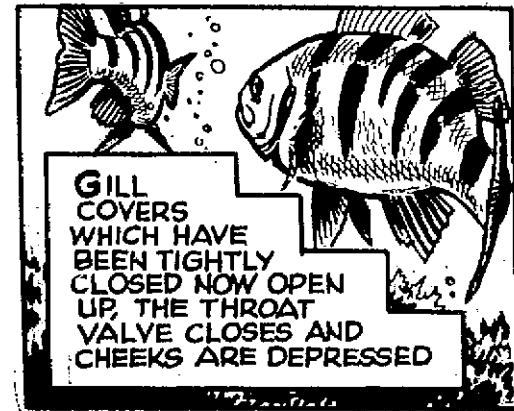

"AIR BREATHERS" ARE NORMALLY FOUND IN WATER WITH A LOW OXYGEN CONTENT

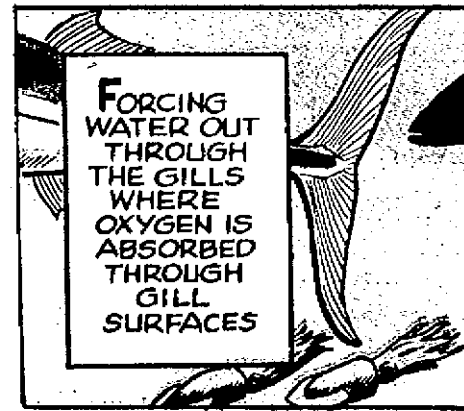

IN ORDER "TO BREATHE" A FISH MUST PUMP A CONTINUOUS FLOW OF WATER THROUGH ITS GILLS

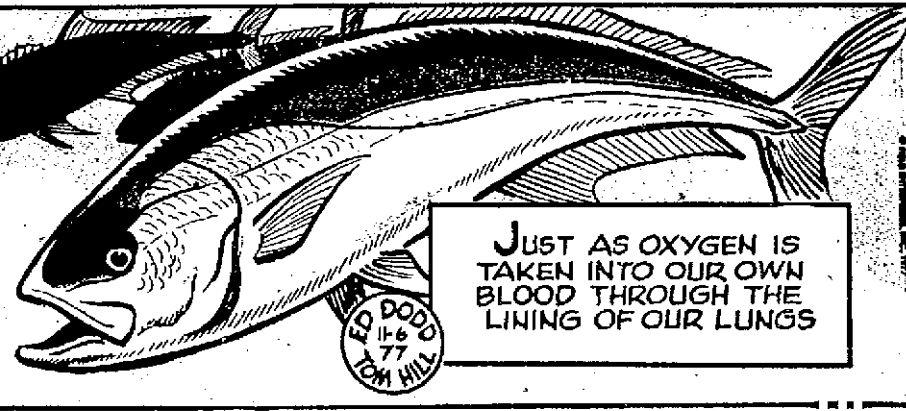

OPENING ITS MOUTH AND A VALVE IN ITS THROAT, IT EXPANDS ITS CHEEKS TO DRAW IN WATER

GILL COVERS WHICH HAVE BEEN TIGHTLY CLOSED NOW OPEN UP. THE THROAT VALVE CLOSSES AND CHEEKS ARE DEPRESSED

FORCING WATER OUT THROUGH THE GILLS WHERE OXYGEN IS ABSORBED THROUGH GILL SURFACES

JUST AS OXYGEN IS TAKEN INTO OUR OWN BLOOD THROUGH THE LINING OF OUR LUNGS

Dean Jones finds joy as 'born again' Christian

By Bob Martin
TV-Radio Editor

Once upon a time a young man from Decatur, Ala., came to the magic land of Hollywood. He had been singing professionally, now and then, since age 15; he'd spent a year in college as a voice major, and he'd completed a four-year hitch in the Naval Air Corps. Now he dreamed of finding fame and fortune in the nation's film capital.

The young man's name was, and is, Dean Jones, and through hard work, more than a little talent and a few breaks along the way, he rose to stardom in the movies — a stardom that has lasted for two decades.

His success came primarily as an actor, although he often manages to mix singing and acting in his career. He has been in more than a score of movies, has performed in three Broadway productions and has starred in three television series.

Dean is best known, though, as the star of 10 Walt Disney movies. Six of them are on Variety's list of all-time top-money makers, and he has been seen on the screen by more film-goers than many superstars.

Think of Dean Jones, and you think of such Disney hits as "That Darn Cat," "The Ugly Dachshund," "The Love Bug," "The $1,000,000 Duck," "The Horse in the Gray Flannel Suit," "The Shaggy D.A." and his latest, "Herbie Goes to Monte Carlo."

With his flair for light comedy and his clean-cut, All-American-guy looks, Jones has projected just the right image for Disney comedies, which are designed to appeal to the whole family. He's Mr. Clean, Mr. Wholesome, the ex-Boy Scout, the Nice Man Next Door, the Ideal Husband, the Perfect Father.

DEAN JONES, star of a number of Disney movies, will headline a two-hour musical-comedy special, "Once Upon a Brothers Grimm," with Paul Sand on CBS-TV Wednesday night, Nov. 23.

Though he's often bumbling and frantic, you know that, with such a lovable guy, everything's going to come out all right in the end.

But is Jones, in real life, the same sort of person he appears to be on screen, tube or stage?

For years, he wasn't. Jones told me the other day over lunch at the Sea Shell restaurant in Tarzana, when I interviewed him in connection with an upcoming CBS special, "Once Upon a Brothers Grimm," a two-hour musical comedy-fantasy in which he stars with Paul Sand, and which will air on Thanksgiving Eve (Wednesday, Nov. 23) at 8 p.m.

In the interview, Dean came across as the sort of person I expected him to be — a very friendly, talkative, happy and outgoing person. A successful performer who gets great satisfaction from his career.

But, until three and a half years ago, his life was miserable, he disclosed.

The Dean Jones you saw on the screen was not the real Dean Jones. He

"MARIO PUZO'S 'THE GODFATHER,'" a nine-hour, four-part drama made up of the two "Godfather" movies and additional material, will air on NBC next Saturday through Tuesday nights.

LEIF GARRETT plays the title role in the new TV movie "Peter Lundy and the Medicine Hat Stallion," at 7 tonight on Ch. 4. Ned Romero plays Chief Red Cloud.

THE BIBLE

J. I. Smith

WHY THESE ARTICLES?

#2

Last week we pointed out some of Jesus' warnings regarding false teachers and why we are to beware of them. This week we want to continue our study.

The apostle Paul warns in very strong words that we are to accept no other gospel than that which has been preached. In Galatians 1:6-9 I read, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

Jesus made it very clear that "the truth will make you free" (John 8:32). However, in verse 31 he pointed out, "If ye continue in my words, then are ye truly my disciples." But what happens if one does not love the truth — and will not continue in Christ's words? The apostles Paul and John give us the answer. In II Thess. 2:10-12 we read, "And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." Paul said people would be damned who believed not the truth. Now notice what John said in II John 9, "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there came any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." Again John said, "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world" (I John 4:1). Thus I am just trying to get people to seek to know the truth, for error will condemn.

A shocking new series

'I Claudius' is not for the 'tender-minded'

By Jay Sharbutt
AP Television Writer

If you saw the Roman movie epics of the 1950s, you learned there's only one Caesar and he is Victor Mature. But watch "I, Claudius" on public TV for 13 weeks. You'll change your mind.

This acclaimed BBC series, based on Robert Graves' 1934 novel about ancient, corrupt Rome, starts tonight at 9:00 on Channel 28's "Masterpiece Theatre" show hosted by the always urbane Alistair Cooke.

It's a richly textured, well-acted dramatization of the period 24 B.C. to 54 A.D., when emperors Augustus, Tiberius, Caligula (he was a bit bent, you'll recall) and Claudius ruled Rome in their varied ways.

A warning: Those poorly versed in Latin history might consult the history first or see each show with an expert, as it's a mite hard to tell who is doing what to whom and why without a scorecard.

The series deals with the high-level power struggles, inter-family murder, intrigue and general decadence that led to the eventual fall of the Roman Empire and the ruinous first wave of German tourists there.

It's done in the form of a history, secretly written by Claudius when he's old and rightfully convinced that certain parties wish to hasten his bon voyage from mortal earth.

Sunday's opener starts the history with the reign of Augustus and the machinations of his second wife, Livia, who to promote relative power poisons his son-in-law, Marcellus, making him an ex-beir apparent.

This is bad form now, but was the common thing in the good old days, ditto fratricide, incest and the orgy. Since such things are touched on in "I, Claudius," steps have been taken to alert viewers and stations this is not a Romanized version of "Father Knows Best."

Cooke, in his opening remarks on history, Graves' book and the show, warns that "some people are going to be more shocked by this series than most of the dramas we've shown on 'Masterpiece Theatre.'"

But he emphasizes that none of the show's few potentially shocking scenes are gratuitous or intended as titillation. This is history as it was, he says, noting that Graves based his book on the works of Suetonius, a famed Roman historian of 75-150 A.D. vintage.

He repeats this theme in later shows, particularly one about Caligula, the mad emperor who declared himself a god, married his sister, rendered her pregnant, then killed her and her unborn child.

Cooke insists there's "no delicate or comfortable way" to dramatize the life of this worthy, and wryly suggests:

"Maybe tender-minded people might prefer to switch to something more pasteurized."

Still at Boston's WGBH, which bought the London Films-BBC series, producer Joan Sullivan says she deleted some parts—but not entire scenes—of five episodes on grounds of taste.

She said the longest cut, of nearly 1½ minutes, was a too-graphic and bloody moment of Caligula's ultimate madness. The rest of the cuts only ranged from 20 to 50 seconds, she added.

Her reason for excising one brief bit from an Old Rome orgy scene had a modern twist to it.

She said the axed moment had two homosexuals, one in a woman's dress, romping about, then kissing each other passionately.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Can you please tell me how much President Carter received as an advance for his book "A Government as Good as Its People"? And how much have his mother Lillian and sister Gloria Carter Spann received as an advance for their book "Away From Home: Letters to My Family"?—D.O., Cleveland.

A. Simon & Schuster paid the Carter Foundation an advance of $50,000 for the President's book, which consists of a collection of his speeches. The company advanced $55,000 to Gloria Carter Spann and her mother, "Miz Lillian," for their book.

DIRECTOR VINCENTE MINNELLI AND DAUGHTER LIZA

Q. Does Liza Minnelli look more like her father, Vincente Minnelli, or her mother, Judy Garland?—Frances Enwright, Boston.

A. Facially she resembles her famous father more than her famous mother.

Q. Is there any one man who now runs the People's Republic of China? And is that man Hua Kuo-feng, who was chosen by Mao Tse-tung?—June Johnson, Berkeley, Cal.

A. Most probably China at this time is run by the five men who comprise the standing committee of the Chinese Communist party's Politbureau. They are Chairman Hua and four party vice chairmen: Yeh Chien-ying, minister of defense; Teng Hsiao-ping, rehabilitated party leader; Vice Premier Li Hsien-nien, the economist; and Wang Tung-hsing, who arrested the so-called "gang of four" following Mao's death on Sept. 9, 1976.

Q. They say in show-biz circles that Cher Bono Allman has had her bust enlarged to size 40. True or false?—T. L., Las Vegas, Nev.

A. Reportedly Cher's bosom has been enlarged via cosmetic surgery but not to 40 inches. She is too thin to carry all that silicone.

Q. Any truth to the rumor that singer Linda Ronstadt has the choice of marrying Gov. Jerry Brown of California or President Carter's son Chip?—T. D., Mar Vista, Cal.

A. Linda Ronstadt and Jerry Brown have been coupled romantically by the news media. Chip Carter, a great lover in his time, has been shipped back to Plains, Ga., with his wife Caron and their baby son, James Earl IV. Chip and Caron are still married, and Chip is charged with looking after the Carter family's peanut business. A London paper recently carried the headline, "Peanuts Take Linda's Place in the Life of Chip Carter." Be that as it may, Linda Ronstadt at 31 conceivably could marry Jerry Brown, who at 39 is single, but there is no way at this time that she could marry Chip Carter, 27.

LINDA RONSTADT

Q. Is Peter Falk getting $500,000 for each episode of his TV show, "Columbo"?—Nooney Wilson, Compton, Cal.

A. Falk will do no more than six "Columbos" this season, will receive a minimum of $333,000 for each.

Q. Before Bert Lance appeared on TV some weeks ago to face his accusers, wasn't he coached by Barry Jagoda, the White House TV adviser?—V. B., Baltimore.

A. Yes. At Lance's request Jagoda checked out the Senate hearing room, then gave him some pointers. Lance performed superbly on TV, but that was not enough to neutralize his banking record.

BERT LANCE

BARRY JAGODA

Q. I would like to know how much money chewing gum magnate Philip K. Wrigley left when he died on April 12, 1977. As you know, Wrigley owned Santa Catalina Island, the Chicago Cubs, and a lot of other property.—Ben Daniels, Catalina Island, Cal.

A. Wrigley left an estate valued at $81.3 million, most of it going to his son William and 10 grandchildren. His wife Helen died on June 27, 1977, at age 75. Wrigley had previously provided for his two daughters, Ada and Dorothy.

Q. The last movie I saw Robert Redford in was "All the President's Men." What's his next one, or has he decided to retire?—Nell Peterson, Salt Lake City.

A. Redford, of course, has more film offers than he knows what to do with. He wants to avoid overexposure, however. His next film may be "A Place To Come To," from the novel by Robert Penn Warren. It deals with a man's attempt to reach his son by first seeking for his own father.

AL PACINO AND MARTHE KELLER

Q. I read in the newspapers that Al Pacino and Marthe Keller refused to turn up at a gala invitational premiere in New York of their film "Bobby Deerfield." Is it because success has gone to their heads?—V. E., Brooklyn, N.Y.

A. Al Pacino generally refuses to grant interviews. Marthe Keller, who lives with him, is generally more cooperative. Many young film players today do not believe in the buildup value of publicity. They are not under contract to any studio, do not have to fulfill any publicity requirements. Film stars who earn a percentage of a picture's profits will frequently help in its exploitation. Many feel, however, that no amount of exploitation will help a bad picture, and perhaps Pacino and Keller feel that way about "Bobby Deerfield."

"When we moved from Hawaii four years ago our health coverage ran out . . . and during that time our daughter spent 14 days in the hospital, and we had to pay a $7,000 medical bill. We decided then we wouldn't settle for anything less than a health plan that included not only basic coverage but also catastrophic coverage for the really big bills."

"Last winter I went to the hospital where they gave me 30 minutes to live. After 45 days and three different operations I'm back home . . . without having to worry about the bills.

"We're farmers, and we never know if weather might wipe out a crop. But we are confident that medical expenses won't wipe us out financially. We picked Blue Shield's Coronet 365, and I'm glad we did. I think everybody needs that kind of protection." Evelyn Lum, Niland, California.

RINGO STARR

DESIGNER RINGO

Ringo Starr is trying his hand at designing. The 37-year-old former drummer for the Beatles is starting a new career.

He and a friend who is an expert in the field are designing chess sets. The boards are made of rosewood and mahogany. And it's not hard to tell who inspired the silver playing pieces: the figures are formed like hands in various positions of rhythm-making.

Ringo, a member of the "Most Excellent Order of the British Empire," will be selling his chess sets through the Asprey Jewelers of London, purveyors to Her Royal Majesty. The sets are priced at about $5200 each.

JUDY EXNER AND HUSBAND DAN

TOO HOT TO HANDLE?

Judy Exner--whose book "My Story," an alleged confession of her friendship with the late John F. Kennedy, has sold more than 40,000 hardcover copies--cannot find a single top publisher in the U.S. to print the paperback version.

"It's absolutely incredible!" exclaims Kent Carroll of Grove Press, publishers of the hardcover. "A book which has sold more than 40,000 copies would ordinarily be grabbed up by the paperback publishers in a minute. But we've been turned down by everyone in this country. Our only recourse is to bring out the paperback ourselves. And that's a pity because we lack the distribution clout of the big boys like Bantam, Pocket Books, Avon and Ballantine."

Mrs. Exner, who wrote her book in collaboration with Ovid Demaris, does not seem too worried, however. "The subsidiary rights to 'My Story' have already grossed about $500,000," according to Carroll.

To date, neither Mrs. Exner nor her publisher has been sued by anyone, including members of the Kennedy family.

JUNGLE STORY

An international group of scientists has discovered an Indian tribe in the Amazon that controls and operates a lucrative gold mine.

The Niawa tribe also owns valuable jewels, makes human sacrifices, marries off its children at age 6 and boasts a language with a 15-letter alphabet.

French doctor Louis van Leer won't disclose the exact area in the Brazil-Colombia-Peru triangle where his team discovered the tribe, which is believed at one time to have numbered 80,000 persons.

He describes the gold mine, however, as an underground city worked by 50 prisoners. He declines to reveal any details about the jewels but tells how a young Russian anthropologist who wanted to steal one was later found, his body pierced by arrows and spears.

The scientists hope to enlist the help of the Peruvian government in undertaking an expedition this fall to study further the Niawa tribe.

Who's to blame for bad scripts — networks or the writers?

By Jerry Buck
AP Television Writer

The question isn't whether episodic television is suffering because of bad writing. The question is why, and the battle lines are clearly drawn, with the networks on one side and the writers on the other.

Fred Silverman, president of ABC Entertainment, accused the writers of "letting us down" and said most series proposals submitted to ABC are "simply awful."

Silverman's cannonade came during a debate at the Writers Guild of America on "What's Wrong With Network Television?" Writer Richard Powell fired back later. "Deep in my heart of hearts, I know that if I brought 'Hamlet' to Fred Silverman, he would put a dog in it."

THE QUESTION wasn't really resolved during the debate and merited further inquiry.

A writer, who pleaded for anonymity, said. "I heard the ABC people say they were disappointed in the creative community because they don't bring in a diversity of ideas. If I didn't believe that the ideas that come to the networks are far better than what winds up on the screen, I'd hand in my fountain pen."

"I don't think the networks want the best that's available, ask for it or allow it."

Such a standoff may not be a major factor in television's current dilemma, but it is a symptom of a condition that has left episodic television void of originality, thoughtfulness or provocative themes.

The victims are the viewers.

NO NETWORK is going to force a writer into writing badly, nor would any writer of integrity respond to that kind of pressure," says William Self, CBS vice president for motion pictures and miniseries and former president of 20th Century Fox Television.

The real problem is that good writers are overtaxed. They're writing four or five shows at once. We all want the same writers."

Robert Dellinger, who is forsaking episodic TV for movies and novels, says. "I've seen it from both sides of the fence. I understand what Silverman means when he says the quality of writing is poor. I know that as a story editor I have been disappointed with some of the stories turned in by 'name' writers. They looked like they were just written off the wall."

"On the other hand, I feel the networks, by the nature of the collective decision-making process, impose restrictions upon writers, and they are frequently more interested in subjects that are safe and non-controversial than they are in the originality and execution of an idea."

"IT HAS been my experience that they say they want new and original ideas, well written, but when you go to them with those projects, they geld them."

"It isn't the networks that make writing good or bad," says Deanne Barkley, a programming vice president at NBC, who says she finds some story treatments unimaginative.

"There wasn't much from the network that you can't do this or 'you can't do that,'" she says. "Sometimes there was more imagination from the network supervisors than from the writers. It was more 'why don't you try this' than 'you can't do this.'"

Fred Baum, supervising producer of "Hawaii Five-O," says, "I don't think there's a direct correlation between network strictures and the quality of writing. I try to give a man a story, the kind of story we want, and the key is whether he gives us back a good script."

"The writers aren't letting us down because before they can go to work they have to be hired. The

DOCTORS CUT SERVICES

A survey of doctors who belong to the California Medical Association shows that 41% of general and family practitioners no longer provide maternity care services and that obstetrical care has been discontinued by 21% of the obstetrician-gynecologists.

Why? Because of the high cost of medical malpractice insurance. More than 13% of all the doctors polled in the survey admitted that they are practicing medicine without malpractice insurance coverage. They are practicing "bare" and taking fewer chances.

For example, of the general and family practitioners, 38% said they no longer perform major surgery.

Patients in rural and semi-urban areas are most affected by this development. In such areas, 20-22% of the obstetrician-gynecologists have ended obstetrical services. In metropolitan areas, about 8% of the physicians have dropped maternity care.

If the trend continues, many doctors may limit themselves to prescribing over the phone for the treatment of headaches.

GOLF IN EUROPE Now that an estimated 50 million people in the world play golf, European tournaments are attracting international corporations.

Although U.S. companies have been sponsoring golf tournaments for years, the trend has only recently spread to Europe.

In Switzerland, for example, Dunhill, Philip Morris and Lancia have sponsored the Open championships. In Sweden, Volvo and SAS share in giving $84,000 for the Scandinavian Open. Even impoverished Portugal came up with $26,000 for the 1976 championships in the expectation it would help the tourist trade.

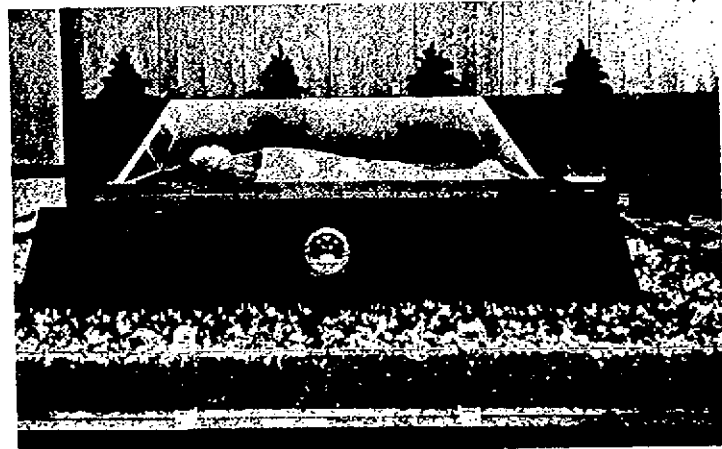

MAO'S MAUSOLEUM

Americans who visit China are now permitted to file by the crystal sarcophagus of Mao Tse-tung. It lies in the Chairman Mao Memorial Hall in Peking's Tien An Men Square.

It was officially opened on Sept. 9—one year after Mao's death—but with the exception of President Tito of Yugoslavia, who was in Peking at the time, no foreigners were allowed to view the sarcophagus until a week later.

Now it has become the showpiece of the capital, visited not only by foreigners but by thousands of "workers, poor and middle peasants, People's Liberation Army Fighters, revolutionary intellectuals, and builders of the memorial hall." So claims the China News Agency.

NOW OPEN TO AMERICANS: MAO TSE-TUNG'S CRYSTAL SARCOPHAGUS IN PEKING

NEW TAX EXILE

To the long list of British tax exiles you may now add the name of actor Michael Caine, who was born Maurice Micklewhite, son of a London fishmarket porter and a London janitress.

Caine, who plays an entomologist in "The Swarm," a film about vast armies of invading bees, says he hated to leave. England has been good to him—in fact made him a millionaire—he says, "but there comes a time when your head has got to rule your heart."

Caine, working in Hollywood, says, "I have never made a tougher decision. I've been waking up in the middle of the night worrying about it."

The problem, of course, is taxes. Caine claims that if he remained in England he'd eventually pay more than 90% of his income to the government. Hence, he joins in luxurious exile Richard Burton, David Niven, Sean Connery, Peter Sellers, Peter Ustinov, Tom Jones, the Rolling Stones and so many other talented Britishers.

Glenda Jackson, Roger Moore, Lord Olivier, Sir Alec Guinness, Sir John Gielgud and Sir Ralph Richardson love England too much to relinquish residence there. But some love money, too.

THE LATE PABLO PICASSO AND JACQUELINE, HIS WIFE AND MODEL

PICASSO'S WIDOW SETTLES

After 4½ years of legal wrangling, Madame Jacqueline Picasso, 51, widow of Pablo Picasso, has finally agreed to a division of her husband's estate.

Pablo Picasso died April 8, 1973, at age 92 and left an estate valued roughly at $300 million, the largest ever left by an artist.

For more than four years, eight lawyers have been involved in trying to settle who gets what.

Here's what it comes down to: France will get 20% in death duties, but this tax will be paid in Picasso paintings, drawings, engravings and sculptures that will be housed in the Picasso Museum. The Hotel Sale, once a 17th-century private home in the Marais section of Paris, will be remodeled as the museum.

The Picasso Museum will also contain 30 paintings bought by Picasso, including works by Braque, Corot, Modigliani, and other outstanding artists.

In his long life, Picasso produced 1876 paintings, 12,000 drawings, 1355 sculptures, 30,000 engravings and 2880 ceramics. Maurice Rheims, the art expert who assembled the Picasso inventory, notes that the artist also did tapestries and illustrated books.

Once France has its 20% of the estate, the remainder will be divided into approximately equal shares among Picasso's widow, his three illegitimate children and the two grandchildren fathered by Paulo Picasso, the artist's only legitimate son, who died in 1975.

Q. We'd like David Soul and Paul Michael Glaser to choose our Annual Queen for our 1977-78 high school year book. Give us their address. C.M.

A. Write the pair at Spelling-Goldberg Prods., 20th Century-Fox, Box 900, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90213.

Lots of luck. Soul and Glaser are not noted as good correspondents, but the request may pique their interest.

Q. I have a bet that

Cheryl Ladd, Charlie's new angel, once played a movie star in "Happy Days." J.C.

A. Good eye. Cheryl's an Angel with a long list of acting credits before she joined "Charlie." She also appeared in over 100 commercials.

Q. Was that Bernie Tau-pin in the "Hardy Boys-Nancy Drew Meet Dracula" on ABC? E.J.

A. 'Twas Elton John's good friend, Chap likes to do something different occasionally.

Q. I'd like to know when Sebastian Cabot, Mr. French of "Family Affair," died. My Mom doesn't believe it. D.J.

A. Cabot died Aug. 23 of a stroke. He was 59. Ill health had curtailed his acting career since "Affair" went off the air in 1971. Anissa Jones, who was Buffy in the same series, died of a drug overdose almost a year to the day earlier, Aug. 28, 1976.

WRITERS

error is made at the executive level. There are enough people who can do the job and are available.

"SILVERMAN can't say the writers are letting us down because the people he hires to make the shows are responsible for hiring the writers. It's up to them to hire the right person."

Producer George Eckstein says, "I have been in television 12 or 13 years and I think I may have gotten, in series, specials and everything else, two first drafts from writers that were shootable. You just don't get the quality."

He says part of the problem is greed on the part of writer and employer. "The guy who turns in the good script is the guy who spends time on it, polishing it, not just grinding it out. So you get guys taking more assignments than they can handle to make the dollars."

"And even bad writers are in demand because eventually you come down to that level of someone who can give you a script in five weeks, good or bad. And you need a script."

Dellinger says a difficulty in writing for television is the number of people between the typewriter and the screen who can make changes. "So many times what starts out as a brilliant idea ends up as a pedestrian story."

ATTRACTING good writers to television is vital. But the writer who asked anonymity says that not only are the networks doing little to attract new writers, they are doing little to keep the good ones they have.

"One of the reasons writers get out of episodic television as fast as they can is because they tell you to check your heart and brains at the door," he says. "They don't want anything social, artistic, historic or controversial. What they want is jeopardy, chase and melodrama."

"I don't believe every writer is good, but I do believe that when there is a good show to write for and a strong creative producer who will let you do your best, the talent will be there."

Ready to race: Steve Cauthen pats his mount as he prepares for another first-place finish at Aqueduct track.

The young jockey learned the trade from his father, has compiled a phenomenal record in his 14 months as a pro.

At 17, What's Ahead For Winningest Jockey?

by Lou Sabin

Steve Cauthen knows all about pressure. As one of America's leading jockeys, he's under pressure every time he heads a horse down the homestretch. But he feels it off the track, too, because even after you've won one race there's another ahead, and plenty of people keep putting their money on him. It's the kind of responsibility that can get to be heavy—especially when you're 17 years old.

But Steve keeps winning. On Oct. 4 at New York's Belmont track, he broke the world's record for earnings in a single year when he took his third race of the day. It brought the total to $4,714,976—and his share to more than $470,000. Despite the money and glory, Steve is troubled by the disappointed bettors who revile him and scream insults when he does lose a race.

"I do my best every time, so I have a clear conscience when I don't win," says the 5-foot-1, 95-pound Cauthen, who's worked hard at learning the jockey's trade since the age of 12. "Naturally I feel sorry for people who lose their money, especially those who can't afford to. But when they start yelling at me, I just walk straight ahead and do my best to pay no attention to what they're saying. Sometimes a jockey yells back. That only makes it worse. I hope I never lose control that way."

Cauthen's rise to fame and fortune has been meteoric. In little more than a year, the young rider from Walton, Ky., has had more than 400 first-place finishes—including 23 winners in one week, tops in U.S. racing history. This fall he has a full schedule, competing six days a week with five or six mounts a day. If he can keep up his torrid pace, he stands to wind up one of the winningest jockeys in track history—and one of the richest teenagers in the U.S.

Quarry of reporters

Steve admits it isn't always easy to cope with the pressure that's building up in him. "I couldn't stand the way it was last winter," he says. "I'd finish a race and five reporters would come at me all at once, demanding that I tell them everything I did and thought. After a while they got to treating me like a freak. I had to close myself off. After all, jockeys are the same as other athletes, other people, only smaller."

For a time Cauthen's reluctance to engage in long colloquies with reporters gained him an undesired reputation for being cool and unemotional. Actually he is a youngster full of warmth and enthusiasm—especially when he's talking about horses, which he began to ride as a child under the tutelage of his father, a blacksmith and former race-track exercise boy.

"I've always had a deep respect and affection for horses," says Steve. "I was close with them from the start and got to love them the way other people love

continued

Occupational hazard: Cauthen was among the injured in a three-horse spill at Belmont. Accidents can sideline a jockey for months, even end a career.

Steve leaves hospital with a fractured arm and broken rib after Belmont Park mishap.

It takes more than love to make a happy marriage.

Strange how the last thing many couples think about in planning their marriage is the matter of religion. Only after the caterer, the photographer, the printer have been provided for, only then is church mentioned. And church often is more a matter of social custom than real religious conviction. No wonder so many marriages get into trouble. God barely makes the guest list.

If you are about to be married and religion is not important to you, do you know what your chances for a happy life are? The odds are not good. If you are already married and religion has been packed away with the bridal gown, do you wonder that life has become a bore or a battle? Maybe you are one of those unhappy people who has decided that life is meant to be boring and absurd. If so, we invite you to look into our pamphlet "The Real Secret of Successful Marriage." Myra Cauthen hugs her son before race.
His parents are proud of achievements but also want him to pursue education.

JOCKEY CONTINUED

their dogs and cats. When I was a little kid I felt I understood what they were feeling, what they wanted to do and didn't want to do. I'd go along with even the toughest horse, letting him do his thing for a bit, letting him work out his needs. Then I'd sort of let him know it was time for us to do our thing together."

Cauthen's parents say they're pleased at the way he's responded to his success, although they're conscious of the problems he faces.

"His growing up is being kind of rushed right now," says Mrs. Myra Cauthen. "I think he's handling it very well but, like any mother, I wish it didn't have to happen so fast. Still, I guess you have to expect that. We taught him table manners, politeness, consideration for others. And now we're happy when complete strangers tell us they think he's such a nice young man, not spoiled by his good fortune."

"Steve had a normal boyhood. He played baseball, football and basketball, went to school activities, was in the 4-H, did all the things a boy does around here. He earned his allowance and extra spending money by cleaning out the stalls and doing other chores around the farm, just as his brother Doug, who's 14, does now, and Kerry, who's 8, will do when he's a little older. He's always been a thoughtful boy, serious and levelheaded."

Steve's father, Ronald "Tex" Cauthen, recalls that he agreed to teach his son the art of being a jockey on two conditions—"if his weight held and if he got a high school education." After four years of hard work, Steve won his first professional race just after turning 16, at a racetrack near Cincinnati.

"That was one of my biggest thrills," says Steve. "But the one that ranks right at the top is the day I rode six winners at Aqueduct in New York. It tied a [New York State] record, but what made it really important is that my dad was there, and when I saw him after the fifth winner he was glowing. People were congratulating him, saying how proud he must be to have a boy who's not only such a good rider but such a fine son, a gentleman."

Tex Cauthen also remembers that moment: "It was exciting. I can't put my feelings into words, but I guess I did glow. It pleases a man to see his boy succeeding in life, getting deep-down pleasure from what he's doing ... and being a man."

Steve speaks with his parents by phone about once a week and eagerly awaits the few days a year they can spend visiting him in New York, where he does much of his racing. Part of his earnings have gone into gifts for his family, including a car.

Steve is fulfilling a promise to his father by completing high school through a correspondence course. "That's no hardship," he says. "I really like studying and learning, especially English and American history. Reading about Woodrow Wilson impressed me a lot; he was a man you could really admire. I love being a jockey, but I want to learn about other things, too. Here at the track I get to meet real interesting people—stockbrokers and bankers, men who started with nothing and made themselves millionaires. A whole world of people comes here, and there's so much I can learn from them."

Bad spill last May

What's ahead for Steve Cauthen? Always assuming he can avoid serious injury—he already survived one bad spill last May, when he suffered a concussion, a fractured rib and a broken arm—there seems every reason to expect that both his first-place finishes and his earnings will continue to climb. In fact they go together, since a jockey is automatically entitled to 10 percent of a horse's winnings.

There also is other money to be made, for jockeys get a set fee for every race they run (the standard price is $35, though Cauthen, by reason of his record, commands more) as well as outside income. Steve even has cut a country music record called "And Steve Cauthen Sings Too."

"I don't know if the record will sell much, but I sure enjoyed making it," says Steve. "I'm not really a singer, though, and I don't plan to do much along that line."

"I hope to ride for another 10 or 20 years and to ride as many winners as I can. I'm not aiming at a specific number or to break records set by men like Eddie Arcaro or Willie Shoemaker. If it happens, it happens. But I'd be lying if I didn't say I'd like to be remembered as one of the best. What I am, first and last, is a jockey. I love it and consider it as important and difficult as being a President or a great writer or a great scientist. What I mean is, I believe excellence in any field should be admired."

"Vantage is changing a lot of my feelings about smoking."

"I like to smoke, and what I like is a cigarette that isn't timid on taste. But I'm not living in some ivory tower. I hear the things being said against high-tar smoking as well as the next guy.

"And so I started looking. For a low-tar smoke that had some honest-to-goodness cigarette taste.

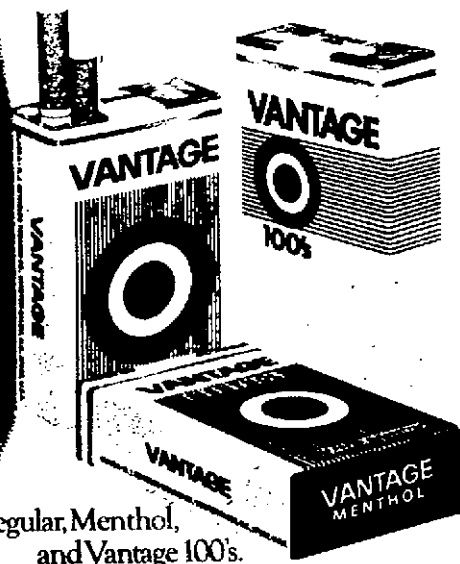

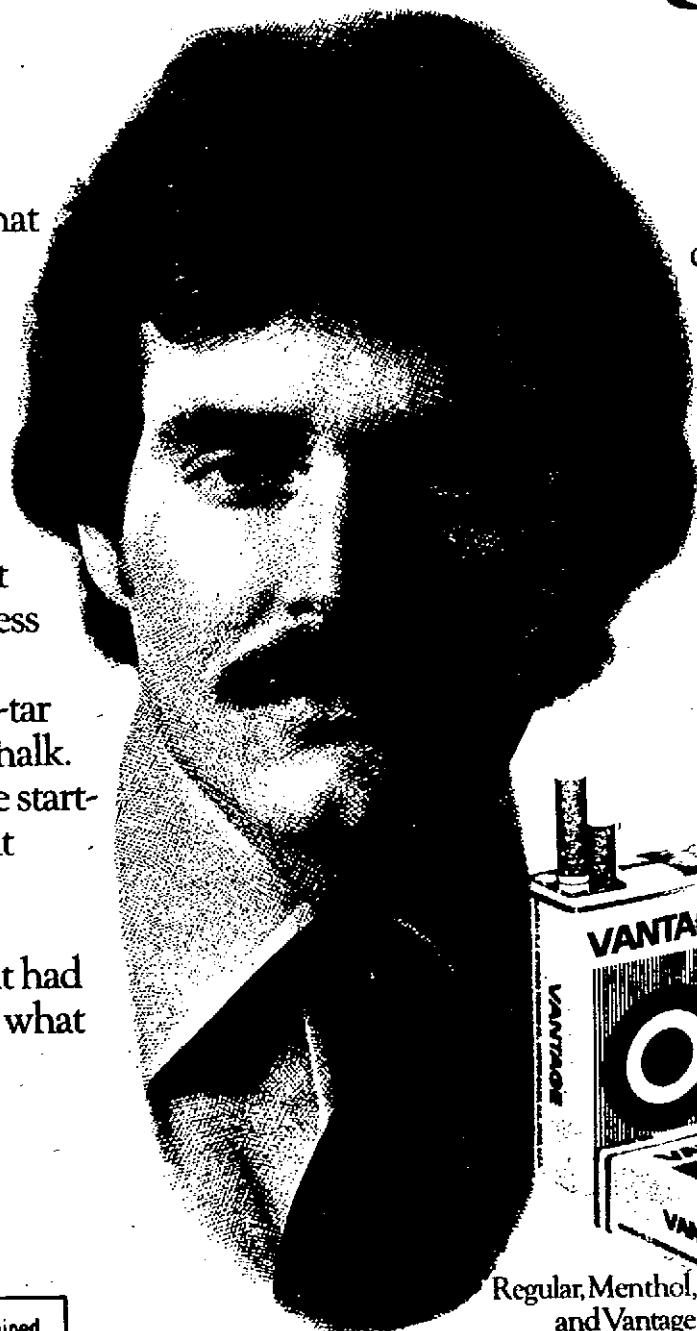

"It wasn't easy. The low-tar cigarettes I tried tasted like chalk. And high-tar cigarettes were starting to taste rougher as I went along.

"Then I tried a pack of Vantage. It was smooth yet it had taste. And a lot less tar than what I'd been smoking.

"As far as I'm concerned, when I switched to Vantage, I changed to a cigarette I could enjoy."

Witnesses Tell How Two Americans Were Killed

Idi Amin's Reign of Terror

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON, D.C.

There has been no precise count of the human slaughter in Uganda. The whispered estimate is that more than 100,000 faceless men and women have died there, the anonymous victims of the brutal dictator Idi Amin.

Genocide is always anonymous. But a few victims are beginning to emerge from the nightmare as mute witnesses against Amin. Two who have come back to haunt him are Americans. In the Sept. 12, 1976, issue of PARADE, we told the story of their disappearance. Now we can reveal, with reasonable certainty, the terrible end of the story.

Nicholas Stroh, 33, and Robert Siedle, 46, were two of Amin's earlier victims. Stroh was a free-lance journalist who wrote for several U.S. newspapers. Siedle was a sociologist who lectured at Kampala's Makerere University and once met Amin at a cocktail party.

They were enraptured with Uganda, where an advanced civilization flourished at the headwaters of the White Nile long before the depredations of the white man. But Amin has turned the country into an insane asylum, with the inmates in charge.

On July 7, 1971, Stroh and Siedle drove together into Mbarara, Uganda. Stroh wanted to check reports of a massacre at the Uganda Army's Simba Battalion barracks. Siedle wanted to research a book he was writing about missionaries. They spent two days in Mbarara.

On July 9 Stroh drove off in his rented blue Volkswagen, a handwritten "PRESS" sign affixed to the windshield. Around his neck he wore a silver cross and the inscription: "I am a Catholic. Please call a priest."

Arrested at hotel

Siedle remained behind at the hotel. Two hours later, three uniformed Africans drove up to the hotel in a black Zephyr car, asked Siedle to get into the backseat and sped away with him.

Neither Stroh nor Siedle was heard from again. But Stroh came from a prominent Detroit family which was able to bring international pressure upon Amin. Grudgingly he appointed a commission of inquiry headed by British-born Judge D. Jeffreys-Jones of Uganda's High Court.

The courageous jurist pushed the investigation, refusing to be deterred by American teacher Robert Siedle (l) chats with Idi Amin (r) and an Egyptian diplomat at 1970 party in Soviet Embassy. Two Ugandan defectors now confirm that Siedle and a reporter were brutally slain one year later by Amin's men.

Amin, who wanted him to whitewash the case. The dictator called to express his displeasure, and it is dangerous in Uganda to provoke Amin's displeasure. Yet for seven months Jeffreys-Jones doggedly pursued the case.

He found Stroh's burned-out, crumpled car at the bottom of a ravine. He obtained a deposition from a Simba Battalion defector, Silver Tibihika, who had fled to nearby Tanzania. The former officer swore that the two Americans had been killed and their bodies burned.

Judge defies Amin

Jeffreys-Jones took the precaution of leaving Uganda before he issued his findings. The report declared, in defiance of Amin's wishes, that the two Americans "died an unnatural death. . . . They were in fact murdered by personnel of the Simba Battalion. . . . From the evidence I have before me it was impossible to point an unerring finger at any particular person or persons who actively committed the offense."

Amin issued a White Paper contending that Stroh and Siedle "met their deaths somewhere in Mbarara . . . at the hands of unidentified persons." Yet after negotiations with the two families, Amin's government tried to hush up the affair by paying $78,707.90 in compensation to each.

Now two prominent Ugandans with knowledge of the case have defected from Amin's inner circle. One is the former Ugandan health minister, Henry Kyemba, the other a top military officer whose identity must be withheld to protect his relatives in Uganda.

The two new witnesses have confirmed Tibihika's deposition and have added some grisly details. Their statements differ only on a few trivial points. Here's what they say happened to the two Americans whose fate could not be suppressed:

On the day Stroh disappeared, he was seen driving boldly up to the Simba Battalion barracks. Fifteen minutes later he was taken to the camp's second in command, a Major Juma.

By all accounts, the major was an un-

Murdered journalist Nicholas Stroh was checking reports of massacre at Ugandan Army's Simba Battalion barracks.

pleasant fellow. Jeffreys-Jones said of him: "In all my experience as a judge, I have never seen a more arrogant, more insulting witness. . . . He was also a consummate liar."

According to witnesses, Stroh and Juma quarreled. Apparently the major got the name of Stroh's companion and dispatched three soldiers to arrest Siedle at his hotel. The major, an intelligence officer named Steven Taban and a third Ugandan soldier then hacked the two Americans to death with machetes. "They weren't shot," the military defector said. "They were slaughtered."

'Destroy everything'

Taban and Tibihika were ordered to burn Stroh's Volkswagen and destroy "everything." Then Taban led a party to a deserted spot 10 1/2 miles from Mbarara where they dug up the charred remains of two human bodies from a sandpit. They filled two sacks, returned to the barracks, poured oil and gasoline over them and set them afire. The ashes were scattered into a nearby river.

The word quickly spread through the camp that the two Americans were "kalasi"—dead. The witnesses don't know whether their execution was ordered or whether it was a natural, unpremeditated extension of the paranoia rampant among Amin's troops. Certainly the dictator had encouraged his troops to be bloodthirsty; it wasn't the first time they had used machetes and bludgeons on innocent victims. And, of course, Amin tried to cover up the crime.

Testimony of insiders

The statements from the new witnesses are particularly important, our diplomatic sources stress, because they represent a significant new trend in the unfolding story of Amin's terror. The testimony on atrocities is no longer coming just from the victims or hapless bystanders; it is coming from the perpetrators and members of Amin's inner circle. Such testimony shatters any credibility that Amin may have had.

As for the alleged murderers, they have prospered under Amin. The nasty Juma is now a Ugandan cabinet minister in charge of transportation. Taban has been appointed chief technical officer of the Uganda Air Force. According to the military defector, Taban boasts that he got his promotion not because of his technical expertise but because of his role in the murders.

Yet the cost for Amin has been high. The fate of the two Americans was a factor in the U.S. decision to cut off foreign aid to Uganda in 1973. It has also made an impression on Rep. Don Pease (D., Ohio), who has introduced legislation to raise a trade barrier between the United States and Uganda similar to the Cuban embargo.

SPORTS TODAY

NFL FOOTBALL (7), 6 p.m. — Washington Redskins at Baltimore Colts.

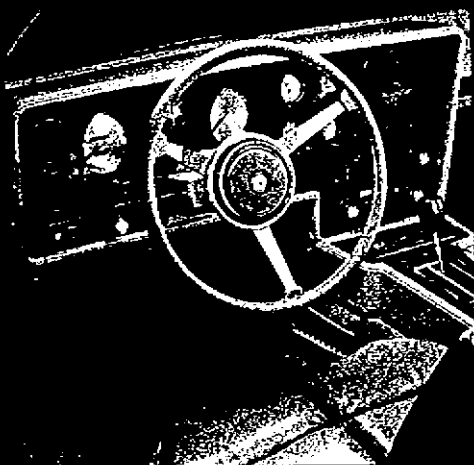

Introducing the 1978 Pontiac Grand Prix.

Grand new looks. Grand new luxury. Grand new Prix.

Most scientific design in Grand Prix history! We used computers to design a new full frame to isolate road noise. Special body mounts help damp out vibration. New door and body seals help seal out noise. All to give you a smooth quiet ride.

New luxury appointments! Available new loose-pillow design seating that's richer than ever. An available bucket seat that's a GP exclusive. A new cockpit-style dash.

New maneuverability. This trim new Grand Prix is amazingly agile when you put it in a tight city corner. Or even those tight city parking spots.

Grand Prix is equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your Pontiac dealer for details. Talk to him about buying or leasing this incredible new Grand Prix.

It's destined to take its place beside the classic Grand Prixes of the past.

Hillel and Riva Mazansky and their children Lisa, 7, and Rael, 4, turned their backs on a luxurious life-style in South Africa to emigrate here in June. But they have few regrets. In America, says Dr. Mazansky, "the sky's the limit."

Rhodesians and South Africans

America's New Immigrants

by Pam Proctor

A new kind of immigrant is coming to the United States these days. Well-to-do white South Africans and Rhodesians are abandoning careers in their racially troubled countries to attempt to build new lives here.

On the surface, they seem to have all the requisites of success: nest eggs of up to $35,000, housefuls of furniture, outstanding professional credentials.

Actually, however, many of them are trying hard to adapt to a different life-style and culture. Back home they enjoyed a life of prestige and wealth in an elite white paradise supported by what one South African describes as the "exploitation of cheap black labor." Here, as their apparent affluence has dissolved in the high cost of living and the expenses of starting over, they live anonymously as members of the financially pinched middle class.

But, like other immigrants before them, they are banking on their talent and hard work to get ahead. "America gives you the opportunity," says Dr. Hillel Mazansky, 35, an ebullient South African who chose the United States instead of England because he had a brother here and because of the poor prospects for physicians under a socialized medical system. "The sky's the limit as far as I'm concerned," he says. "If you work hard, you can earn a decent living and have a decent life here."

So far, the United States has attracted only a small portion of the whites who are leaving South Africa and Rhodesia at a combined rate of about 3000 a month. In the past few years, fewer than 100 of the Rhodesians have settled here annually. The South Africans, mostly English-speaking doctors, have numbered about 500 annually but swelled to more than 1300 from July 1975 to December 1976. Pockets of "little South Africa" have started to spring up in such cities as Cleveland, Houston, Boston and New York, where medical centers have actively recruited the highly trained South African physicians.

Dr. Mazansky is typical of the new arrivals. He gave up what he estimates as "one of the biggest solo practices in Johannesburg" to emigrate to Cleveland earlier this year. As a family physician in South Africa, he had an income comparable in purchasing power to $150,000 a year here. His house boasted a swimming pool, a tennis court, five bedrooms, two living rooms, a family room and a "massive kitchen." He figures it would sell for about $250,000 in an exclusive suburb of Cleveland. In addition, the family had three servants who acted as babysitters, ran errands and cleaned the house and yard.

But that opulent life is behind him—at least for the time being. No longer his own boss, he works as a "fellow" in family medicine in a program sponsored by Case Western Reserve University and Huron Road Hospital. With the hospital's help, he'll be able to set up a private practice in a year or so. But until then Mazansky, his wife Riva and their two children are renting the top half of a two-family house. The apartment is crammed full of the elegant green velvet sofas, antique cabinets and statuary they shipped from home. Mazansky left South Africa with less than the $35,000 permitted by the government (Rhodesians are permitted to take out only $1600), and he's dipped into it to buy two cars, insurance and to cover other expenses of getting settled. "My salary is livable, but it doesn't allow us any luxuries," he says. "But this is only temporary," he adds optimistically. "Once I go into private practice, I am sure I will be able to live up to the same social and economic standards that I did before."

They're locked in

The change to a middle-class lifestyle has had the most pronounced impact on the wives, whose freedom has been circumscribed by the inability to afford servants. One young Rhodesian mother said she cried for three months when she arrived last year because the strain of having the kids around the house all day long was too much to bear. "In Rhodesia I was free—free to go visiting, free to entertain," she says.

But in some ways, the lack of servants and enforced togetherness of American life is actually a blessing in disguise, says Riva Mazansky. "The family is much, much closer here."

Her husband agrees: "I've quite enjoyed it. It's been a novelty. I can't remember when last in South Africa I spent weekends with my children. There were always all these other attractions—working, going to the gym, to the sauna bath or to sporting events with friends. Here there are so many things to do with the family. We go on picnics, we've been to the museum twice and to concerts."

He helps with housework

Mazansky has also become a "liberated" husband; he pitches in with the shopping, housework and cooking. "I don't resent it," he says with a shrug. "I know I have to do it, and that's all there is to it."

But there are other aspects of American life which are harder for these new immigrants to swallow. Ironically, some of the biggest stumbling blocks to adjustment are the same problems that plague other Americans—but which the rest of us, for better or worse, have by now taken for granted. Here's a sampling of impressions gleaned from interviews with several families in Cleveland, where an estimated 40 South African medical families and a few Rhodesians have settled.

SCHOOLS: "The complete and utter lack of discipline in the schools" has disturbed some parents. One family put the children into parochial schools after their son complained of drug use in his junior high and was bullied for being a foreigner. The last straw was the day he came home "white with fear" after being chased by a gang of kids.

TV addiction

TELEVISION: Many of the kids have turned into TV addicts. In South Africa there were only five hours of TV a night, half in English and half in Afrikaans. Here, children like 7-year-old Lisa Mazansky are so taken by TV that they turn on their sets beginning at 6:45 a.m. Her parents have since limited her viewing to one hour a day.

MEDICAL PRACTICE: The South African and Rhodesian doctors are like the American family doctor of yesteryear; back home they treated a patient and his family from cradle to grave, made house calls for about $6 a visit, and even handled marital problems. They are concerned by American doctors' excessive reliance on technology and their obsession with litigation. "They're afraid of being sued," observes one South African. As a result, he says, many U.S. physicians take more tests than necessary and remain aloof from patients to avoid grounds for a lawsuit.

Another bitter pill: although South African medical training is said to be among the best in the world and many of the doctors who have come here have had years of practical experience, they often must start at the bottom of the medical ladder. That means taking orders from younger physicians who know less than they do and being treated with disdain as "foreign medical graduates."

MONEY-CONSCIOUS SOCIETY: "Everyone's out for the buck," complains one doctor. Coming from countries where most prices are fixed and the cost of living is low, the South Africans and Rhodesians are exasperated by the high prices and the pressure to "shop around" for the best buy. One family was appalled to receive estimates ranging from $400 to $3000 for a paint job on their house. In another case, a physician took his son to the dentist and was told the boy needed 13 fillings. Consultation with a second dentist proved the child's teeth were in good condition. "I never expected to be ripped off by a colleague," says the doctor.

Perhaps the easiest adjustment for these families to make has been the transition from a highly stratified, racially segregated society to one more concerned with equal opportunity and integration. Most say they were opposed to South Africa's apartheid and are relieved to have left it behind.

On a personal level, they say they have been received warmly by Americans of all races and have been treated with respect as individuals.

In turn, they have taken American society at face value, making a clear distinction in their minds between the racial situation in America and conditions back home. "The black American is an American with a black skin," argues one South African physician. "He is, in my opinion, no different from the white American. Culturally he is the same, and his language is the same." In contrast, he says, blacks and whites in South Africa are poles apart; many of the country's 18 million blacks still live in rural areas in a tribal culture, while in the cities a Westernized, black middle class is only beginning to emerge.

Kids recognize differences

Most of the children of the new immigrants go to integrated public schools and have been quick to recognize that, racially speaking, things are different here. One example is in the use of language. In South Africa, the term "uncle" is used to respectfully refer to a white man, but not to a black.

Recently, when Dr. Cornelis Trouw, 34, and his 7-year-old son Arie spotted a black man working across the street, Arie turned to his dad and said, "What is that uncle doing?"

"That was the first time I realized he had adapted to America," says Trouw, who is one of the few Afrikaners to have emigrated. They are the descendants of the German, French and Dutch settlers of South Africa who make up a little more than half of the country's 4.3 million whites and control the government.

While these families seem to accept the racial relationships in the United States, they left their homelands because they feared the physical and economic consequences of racial tension.

One Rhodesian mother explains the fears of those who are leaving: "It's not because of black majority rule that we left but because of the chaos that goes with it. Already services are declining because so many doctors, lawyers and teachers have left."

The decision to pull up roots and take the "chicken run," as it is called derisively, was agonizing and emotional for most families. The experience of Cornelis Trouw is a good example.

'Big mistake'

"We had bitter fights with our families and friends," he says, noting that it took him and his wife Zannette two years to think through the move. "They thought we were 'mad'—that we were making a big mistake." To urge them to stay, his family cited the drug problems among American youth and the crime in the streets and warned, "This will happen to your children."

But his kids have adjusted well. Nine-year-old Estha is taking up gymnastics, and piano and has lots of friends in their new neighborhood. She says, "If I have a choice, I'll stay." Arie takes judo and has rapidly learned English, even though he spoke only Afrikaans when he arrived last year.

Despite criticism from family and friends, Trouw, like many others, feels no guilt. He says in America his children can have a secure future.

Our Purite filter helps deliver flavor in a way so new we've been able to patent it.

AN ITALIAN SUPPER

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Firm enough to cut into perfect squares yet tender enough to yield easily to a fork, this flavorful lasagne is an easy-to-make meal in a dish. Be sure to save the recipe—you will certainly want to make it again and again.

There is no need for a first course. With the lasagne serve a green salad made with romaine, escarole and chicory, tossed with bottled Italian dressing. Add both black and stuffed green olives and glasses of dry Chianti wine. If bread is a must in your family (though not necessary), try bread sticks or hot Italian garlic bread. For dessert serve an Italian ice, spumoni or tortoni plus tiny cups of strong espresso coffee.

LASAGNE SQUARES

1 medium onion, chopped
1/2 green pepper, chopped
2 garlic cloves, minced
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 can (28 ounces) tomatoes
1 can (6 ounces) tomato paste
1/2 cup minced fresh parsley
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1 bay leaf
8 ounces lasagne noodles

1 package (10 ounces) frozen chopped spinach, cooked and drained
1 pound ricotta cheese
1 egg
3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
8 ounces mozzarella cheese, grated

Sauté onion, green pepper and garlic in oil until golden, stirring often. Stir in tomatoes, tomato paste, parsley, oregano and bay leaf. Simmer uncovered for 20 minutes. Cook noodles according to package directions; drain. Combine spinach, ricotta, egg, 1/4 cup Parmesan, salt and pepper.

Spoon 1/2 tomato sauce in bottom of lasagne dish or 13x9-inch baking dish. Cover with 1/2 lasagne noodles, 1/2 spinach-ricotta filling, 1/2 mozzarella and 1/4 cup Parmesan. Repeat layers, using 1/2 remaining sauce and noodles, all remaining filling. Top with remaining noodles, sauce, Parmesan and mozzarella.

Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Let stand a few minutes before cutting into squares for serving. Makes six servings.

WHAT ELSE IS COOKING

Doing without breakfast is more than likely to reduce your work performance by late morning. It may even prevent you from getting an adequate diet for the rest of the day. These are words of wisdom from Mary Clarke, Kansas State University Extension's specialist in nutritive education.

People trying to control their weight and those who suffer from morning headache and irritability are often helped by making breakfast a daily habit, according to Clarke.

An adequate and nutritious breakfast consists of 1/2 cup orange juice, an egg or a one-ounce serving of cereal, a slice of whole-grain toast, a cup of skim milk and black coffee. It adds only about 265 calories to the day's total.

GLAZED BIRD

Thanksgiving is nearly here again, and that means a plump holiday bird. For a beautiful brown glaze, brush it generously with melted clarified bacon fat half an hour before roasting time is finished.

CUTTING TERMS DEFINED

There are a variety of terms for cutting up ingredients when a recipe is being prepared, and each has a slightly different definition. For example:

- Chop—Cut into small pieces.
- Cube—Cut into small, square pieces.
- Dice—Cut into very small, uniform cubes.
- Julienne—Cut into long, thin, match-like strips.
- Mince—Cut or chop into very fine pieces.
- Shred—Shave or cut into long, narrow pieces.
- Sliver—Cut into long, thin pieces.

WHAT'S IN THE CAN?

Soon the weight of fruit and vegetables put into containers before adding packing liquid or syrup will be printed on canned food labels. "Solid content" weight will be given along with the existing "net weight" declaration.

SALAD IMAGINATION

Try canned beans marinated in a vinegar-and-oil dressing with a small amount of chopped celery and onion added for crunch and flavor. Or add sliced onion rings, vinegar and a little sugar to drained canned sliced beets. Or you might combine canned grapefruit sections, mandarin orange sections, a few slices of sweet red onion, several slivered ripe olives and top it all with French dressing.

STUFFIN' NEEDS COOKIN'

Turkey stuffing must be completely cooked. The safest way is to cook it separately from the turkey because stuffing inside a warm bird is a breeding ground for bacteria. But if you do cook it inside, be sure the meat thermometer reaches at least 165 degrees.

FRESH IDEAS ON CARE OF MILK

Be aware that 40 degrees is the highest temperature recommended for the storage of milk. As the temperature rises, quality decreases—according to Wanda Mead of the Cooperative Extension Association of Nassau County, N.Y. "Every five-degree rise cuts keeping quality by 50 percent," she notes.

Don't keep milk in the door of the refrigerator. This exposes milk to its greatest enemies—heat and light.

WHICH FOOD MOST OFTEN?

Of those homemakers participating in a nationwide survey, 83 percent named meat as the food most likely to be included in family meals. The second most popular food was vegetables (79 percent), followed by fruit (39 percent), potatoes (33 percent) and milk (30 percent).

TEMPT THE YOUNGER SET

When the gang arrives at your house after a football game, serve mugs of hot cider with bowls of raisins and nuts for munching.

Meanwhile, arrange a make-it-yourself super sandwich buffet. Set out loaves of Italian or French bread partially cut lengthwise, a platter of assorted sliced meats and cheeses, a big bowl of tuna salad and all the "fixin's"—lettuce, sliced tomatoes, salad dressings, pickles, olives, mustard, catchup and so on.

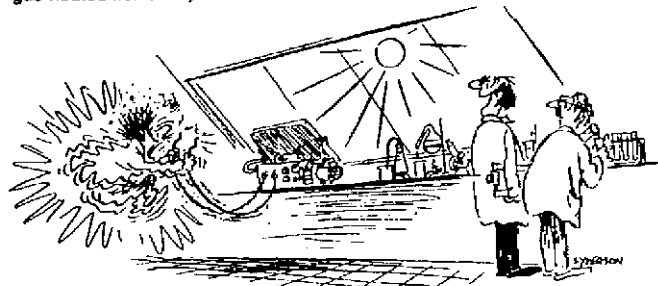

A bowl of fresh apples or a tray of creamy caramel apples will provide an ideal dessert.

Observations

Rays of hope. They come from the sun, the versatile star that warms the earth, grows our food, tans our skins, and supplies almost all the energy used by man. Oil, gas, coal—they all represent solar energy that was trapped millions of years ago. You can warm your feet by the fireplace on a cold winter night because the blazing log releases energy it stored from sunlight. And when you consider how much solar energy falls on the U.S.—enough to supply the nation's energy needs 500 times over every year—you realize why scientists want to harness more of it.

How practical is solar energy? There's a lot of wishful thinking on that score. Solar energy is here now—for supplementing your home heating. But it's expensive. The Federal Energy Administration estimates that a unit costing $4,875 would supply 40 percent of the average family's heating needs in Boston's climate. (The average heating bill in Boston is about $675 a year.) In some cases, like new houses tailored to use of solar heaters, this can make sense as a long-term energy saver. In other situations, buttressing the insulation for an oil or gas-heated home may make more economic sense.

"Well, what do you know? It works."

Needed: an engineering breakthrough. When scientists talk of the great potential of solar energy they're looking beyond home heating—to use of the sun to generate electricity at reasonable cost. That's where the technology is still only partially developed. What's needed are more economic ways to convert the sun's energy to electricity and store it so it's useful 24 hours a day, rain or shine. Mobil alone is spending $30 million on developing solar electricity through a joint venture (Mobil Tyco Solar Energy Corporation). But we've got a way to go, for costs thus far are 30 times those of conventional electricity.

Light in the tunnel. We think that solar cells using silicon ribbons to convert the sun's energy to electricity offer the most hope. If the manufacture of such cells can be improved through large-scale research, mass-production could be possible by 1990. According to the Energy Research and Development Administration, solar cells could represent 20 percent of all the electricity generating capacity added annually by the year 1990. Promising as solar energy is, it offers no immediate easy solutions to the nation's energy problems. And if politicians put too much hope in it helping soon, we could all be burned.

Now—A Magnificent New Commodore Calculator That Needs No Adaptor, No Recharger, No Extra Supply Of Batteries, Won't Die Out When You Need It Most... And Is Unconditionally Guaranteed For Two Full Years.

Never in the history of electronic calculators has there been such a warranty before. The original batteries in this calculator are rated for 5,000 hours, the longest life ever. If anything should go wrong with the batteries or the calculator within two years, for any reason, we'll replace it at no charge.

Commodore—the pioneer in electronic calculators—announces a revolutionary new calculator. Imagine a super thin calculator with a new eight digit liquid crystal display that doesn't emit light and, therefore, needs almost no current.

Then take the new CMOS chip and the most advanced LSI circuitry both designed for delivering maximum power with very little current. Then there are the new high-powered silver-oxide batteries.

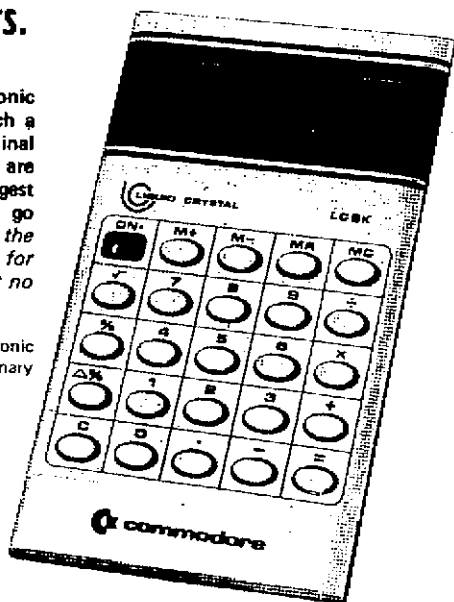

Combine all these factors and you have a completely new concept:

A calculator with a power supply (just two little batteries)—that will last for at least 5,000 hours!

That's several years of uninterrupted use!

This revolutionary new calculator has even more going for it. It is super slim and super trim, less than a quarter of an inch thin so it can slip easily into any pocket or purse. It's all metal, in a choice of gold or silver tone with burnished silver colored key tops.

And it has four-key all purpose memory

Now only $19.95

Including the batteries.

• live percentage key • buy/sell percentage difference key • automatic square root key • automatic constant • floating decimal ... all that you would ever ask of a lifetime calculator.

From Commodore—the first to introduce mass-marketed calculators and one of the largest producers of electronic calculators in the world.

Now only $19.95 (plus handling and applicable tax) including leather-like protective pouch ... and the two-year unconditional guarantee.

Don't you owe it to yourself—and to someone important on your gift list—to buy the very best? Especially when the very best doesn't cost any more?

Order now and get a double-barreled unconditional guarantee: Commodore's two year unconditional guarantee; Mr. Calculator's two year unconditional money-back satisfaction guarantee. And a leather-like protective pouch is included at no extra cost. 5 months delivery for Christmas if you act now.

The joys of having children are now being shared by many couples who were once infertile. About 15 percent of couples of childbearing age are infertile, but as many as half can be helped with treatment.

New Aids for Infertile Couples

by Lawrence Galton

After 10 years of barren marriage, a North Carolina couple today are proud parents of a newborn son as the result of effective treatment for the husband's infertility problem. The treatment: one previously used to help infertile women.

In New York, a couple also long childless now have two youngsters thanks to a new technique of coitus.

At a time when birth control, abortion, and zero population growth have been most in the news, millions of couples face the reverse problem: how to have the children they want.

Infertility, in fact, is a growing problem now affecting an estimated 15% of couples of childbearing age, up from 10% a decade or so ago.

One reason: the postponement of pregnancy by more and more women in favor of careers. Yet, after peaking in the late teens and early 20's, reproductive capacity for women begins to decline; by the time many decide to have a child, risk of failure has grown.

Fortunately, thanks to new medical techniques, as many as half of the infertile can be helped today—and some of the busiest physicians and clinics in the U. S. are those specializing in solving fertility problems.

In Philadelphia recently, when a woman in her mid-30's sought help, she was placed on drug treatment designed to produce a state of false pregnancy. After six months of the treatment, she conceived and subsequently delivered a healthy baby.

Her problem had been endometriosis, a condition in which lining tissue of the uterus grows abnormally outside the uterus, often interfering with functioning of the ovaries. Sometimes surgery may be needed, but medical treatment now may help many women.

Pseudopregnancy

It uses increasing doses of synthetic progesterone hormones for six to nine months to produce pseudopregnancy—a state in which there are all the signs of pregnancy, including cessation of menstruation, but no fetus.

With pseudopregnancy, the uterine tissue in abnormal sites undergoes degeneration and fertility improves.

Inflammatory disease of the pelvic organs can cause infertility. It may result from gonorrhea or, less often, from abortion or other causes. Cure requires use of suitable potent antibiotics and may also involve temporary abstinence from intercourse.

In 10 to 25% of infertile couples, the problem lies with cervical secretion that may be hostile to sperm.

There are now techniques to identify such secretions in tests carried out after coitus. Treatment may be relatively simple, consisting of small doses of estrogen or an alkaline douche prior to intercourse. In some cases, artificial insemination may be needed.

Not infrequently, thyroid or endocrine gland disorders are responsible for infertility in women—and can be corrected.

Infertility caused by damaged or defective fallopian tubes is sometimes a more difficult problem. If the tubes are missing in part or poorly developed, correction may not be possible. But if there is blockage, the tubes may be cleared surgically—and sometimes when blockage is not far advanced it may even be cleared by a diagnostic test such as one in which a dye is injected into uterus and tubes to allow them to be seen clearly on X-rays. The injection itself may open the passages.

In many women, the basic problem is failure to ovulate or release eggs. And this is now being treated with increasing success.

Gonadotropins are pituitary gland hormones which stimulate the ovaries, but in some women they may be inadequate for ovulation. In such cases, gonadotropins obtained from human menopausal urine and sometimes from cadaver pituitary glands have been tried. But often they have been excessively stimulating, leading to multiple ova release and multiple births, including quadruplets and quintuplets.

A drug added

Recently, however, better results have been obtained by combining gonadotropins with a drug, clomiphene. Dr. Robert W. Kistner of Harvard Medical School has reported using the combination in 80 women. Twenty-nine became pregnant; only two had multiple pregnancies.

And a few months ago, Dr. Struan Robertson, director of the sterility clinic at Women's Hospital, Sydney, Australia, reported a study in which 50 women received clomiphene plus an estrogen preparation, ethinyl estradiol, before their gonadotropin injections; 58 others received only gonadotropin shots.

Of the 50 women getting the full treatment, 33, or 66%, became pregnant and only two of the births were multiple—twins in both cases. In contrast, among the 58 other women, there were 34 pregnancies, 12 of them multiple—7 pairs of twins, 2 sets of triplets, 3 of quadruplets. Clomiphene induces ovulation in women, also increases sperm counts in infertile men.

At Duke University School of Medicine, Durham, N. C., Drs. David F. Paulson and Jeff Wacksman have used clomiphene—in doses of 25 milligrams a day for 25 days a month for up to six months—in a series of 35 infertile men with low sperm counts. In 31, sperm counts improved, and 8 of the wives became pregnant.

Center have reported on 540 subfertile men who underwent varicocele surgery. Semen quality improved in 71% and 55% of the wives became pregnant.

Another promising development has been reported by Drs. Dubin and Amelar. They have found that some men with poor semen quality despite a high volume of semen may become of the ejaculate, the adjustment involves withdrawal from the vagina after deposition of the first, better portion.

Donor sperm may be resorted to when infertility can't be overcome or when there is a risk of passing on hereditary defects present in the husband or his family.

The husband's sperm may be used in some cases where there is cervical hostility, as mentioned earlier, or where impregnation is difficult because the wife suffers from prolapse of the uterus or other physical problems. It may also be used in some cases when the husband has fertility problems. Some success has been achieved in recent studies by inseminating with pooled quantities of the husband's frozen sperm when he has good sperm motility but inadequate quantities in his ejaculate.

When to seek help

The question of when a couple should consider themselves sterile and seek help is important.

Studies have established that two-thirds of pregnancies occur within 3 months of the start of unprotected intercourse; within 6 months, 75 to 80% of women become pregnant; and by the end of one year, as many as 90% have conceived.

To be sure, at least another 5% of women normally conceive during the second year. But one or two years of trial should not be required for every couple, experts advise.

Says Dr. Howard Balin, formerly of Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia: "The fertility potential of women, as well as success following treatment for infertility, declines with age. It would seem justifiable, therefore, for couples in their 30's to seek advice after somewhat less than one year."

Where should help be sought?

Many obstetrician-gynecologists as well as many urologists now specialize in treating infertility problems. Your family physician may be able to recommend one. You can also write to the American Fertility Society, 1608 13th Avenue South, Birmingham, Ala. 35205, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The society lists its expert members by geographical area.

You can also check with the nearest medical center or Planned Parenthood Center. Either or both may have an infertility clinic staffed by experts.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

One of the most common infertility causes in men is the development of varicose veins within the scrotum. The varicoceles, as they are called, can be felt during examination, and the condition often can be corrected by a surgical procedure taking half an hour or less.

Drs. Lawrence Dubin and Richard Amelar of New York University Medical Center have reported on 540 subfertile men who underwent varicocele surgery.

In 33 cases, after barren marriages of many years, wives became pregnant within one to six months after the adjustment. Based on studies showing that the first portion of the ejaculate of some infertile men is superior in sperm concentration and motility to the remainder was not the happy and wholesome, clean-living person he appeared to be.

"I was wearing a mask," he said. "My life was as empty then as it has been filled with joy in the last three and a half years."

What happened to bring about the change? Why, Jones said, he experienced a spiritual rebirth. He is a born-again Christian.

"It is difficult to explain what happened," he said. "Words are not adequate. It was more a spiritual thing than an intellectual thing."

THE REBIRTH occurred in a hotel room in Cherry Hill, N.J., when Dean was rehearsing for a summer stock production of "1776." He had been drinking heavily and was extremely depressed. Life seemed meaningless, not worth continuing.

Weeping, Dean dropped to his knees on the floor of his hotel room and started praying. After many hours, he said, his prayers were answered and he was touched by the Holy Spirit. He found peace.

Since that life-changing experience, Dean said, he has given his life to God and he has been happier than he ever was before.

"If He asked me to give up my money, I'd do it," the actor said. "It hasn't happened, but I'd do it."

Jones had thought that achieving stardom and making money would bring happiness, but it did not. "There are a lot of people like that in Hollywood," he commented. "They're successful in their careers, they make big money — and they're miserable."

Booze and women didn't bring Dean what he was looking for, either.

He often was so depressed, he said, that he would recklessly drive his motorcycle in the desert or his Ferrari on canyon roads at such speeds that he almost was asking for death.

Somehow, though, he managed to keep smiling as he performed — and projecting an image of life-can-be-beautiful.

As a long-time fan, I said to Dean: "I find it difficult to believe that you weren't always basically a pretty nice guy." "Tell that to my first wife!" he responded, with a smile. "No, I was just out for myself. I used people — I used women who didn't really mean anything to me."

Not long after his spiritual rebirth, Dean married his present wife, writer Lory Patrick, "after we'd been living together for some time." The wedding was performed under the open sky at Franklin Canyon Lake in the Santa Monica Mountains, with a number of friends present.

Some scenes for his Thanksgiving Eve television special were shot at the lake. Jones pointed out

IN THE original 2-hour musical special, "Once Upon a Brothers Grimm," Jones and Paul Sand portray the German brothers of fairy tales fame.

"They were both lawyers who decided to collect the fairy tales of their country instead of practicing law," Dean said. "I play Jacob, the more realistic and skeptical one, and Paul plays Wilhelm."

The story follows Jacob and Wilhelm on a journey through the enchanted forest, in which they become involved in the adventures of many of the fairy tale characters made famous in "Grimm's Fairy Tales" in the early 19th Century.

In addition to portraying the two brothers, Dean and Paul also play some of the fairy tale characters. "I'm the grandmother of Little Red Riding Hood and get eaten by Cleavon Little, as the wolf," Dean noted.

Guest stars besides Little include Ruth Buzzi as Queen Astrid, Arte Johnson as Selfish and Mean, Teri Garr as the Frog Princess, Clive Revill as Rumpelstiltskin and Chita Rivera as the Gingerbread Lady.

Jones, Sand and a number of the guest stars get to display their singing talents, as Oscar-winning lyricist Sammy Cahn and Tony-winning composer Mitch Leigh have written 14 new songs for the two-hour show.

DEAN'S TV background includes starring parts in three series, "Ensign O'Toole" on NBC in 1962-63; "What's It All About, World?" on ABC in 1969, and "The Chicago Teddy Bears" on CBS in 1971.

He has completed work in an upcoming NBC movie, "When Every Day Was the Fourth of July," in which he plays a Jewish lawyer defending a man unjustly accused of murder in 1937. The film is being considered as the basis for a potential series.

And the "born again" Christian actor has just recently been selected to portray ex-President Nixon's Watergate collaborator Charles Colson in the movie version of Colson's book, "Born Again," with shooting due to begin in Washington next month.

Although Jones has starred in several of the most popular movies of the past decade, he's looking forward to some more dramatic-type roles, and believes his "best movie" is still ahead.

Regardless of which direction his career takes him, his fans hope the popular actor will live happily ever after.

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

PORTABLE SKI VISE: Helpful for maintaining your skis in top condition both at home and on extended ski vacations to the mountains this winter, a new portable vise requires no clamping to a bench or a table. It provides three-point ski support—on edge or flat—for waxing, for accurate edge and flat filing, and for base and binding work. This portable ski vise travels in a 36-inch-long, form-fitted box and assembles without tools. $69.50 ppd. BEK Products, Dept. PP, Box 5047, Walnut Creek, Cal. 94596. (above)

FOR YOUR FREEZER: A help in solving freezer storage and clutter problems, new large-capacity baskets can be loaded with food, carried by their handles and stacked for maximum use of space. Four extender arms on the bottom of each basket separate and support the units for easy stacking. Washable, vinyl-cushion-coated steel; 20" long, 9 1/2" wide, 6 1/2" deep. In white, avocado, gold, sand or black. $4.29 in stores. Grayline Housewares, Dept. PP, 1616 Berkley St., Elgin, Ill. 60120.

WIND-CHILL THERMOMETER: Wind intensifies the cold, especially below 40° F. With a new outdoor thermometer, you can read the temperature with wind-chill taken into account. For example, when it is 20° F and wind is 20 mph, the thermometer indicates a wind-chill temperature of -9° F. Suggested list price: $2.98. Cooper Thermometer Co., Dept. PP, Reeds Gap Rd., Middlefield, Conn. 06455. (above left)

WHOLE-HOUSE HUMIDIFIER: Designed for do-it-yourself installation, a new humidifier has 14-gallons-a-day capacity, sufficient to humidify a typical 3-bedroom home (claims the maker). It's pre-plumbed, pre-wired. To install, cut opening in heating duct, mount unit, insert self-tapping saddle valve in nearest cold-water pipe and plug 24-volt transformer into any household outlet. Suggested retail price: under $60, with all necessary hardware. Details: Comfort Enterprises, Dept. PP, Box 323, Leola, Pa. 17540. (above right)

LURE RETRIEVER: A telescoping retriever that extends from 3 1/2' to 10' will rescue any lure it can reach (claims the maker). A tangled lure is recovered from an underwater obstacle by a spiral snare at the end of the retriever. To use, just turn the open-ended snare on the snagged line and follow the line down to the trapped lure. $10.95 ppd. Lur-Pal Co., Dept. PP, Box 155, Elmhurst, Ill. 60126.

my FAVORITE jokes

by DAN O'DAY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dan O'Day has been a disc jockey on stations in Virginia, Florida and California. His shows have always been comedy-oriented, with many character voices and fake commercials. Among his favorites is the one for "Ed's All-New Elevator Wigs—for short, bald men."

O'Day has two comedy services—Obits and O'Liners—for disc jockeys, comedians and after-dinner speakers. He also guests on local TV shows and emcees at various events.

Dan, who was selected as one of the four best radio personalities of 1974 and '75 by Billboard magazine, has a very sensitive disposition. "You gotta have friends," he says, "cause those are the people you use and take advantage of."

Here are some of Dan O'Day's lines:

You want to hear something silly? A friend of mine says I'm too sensitive. That's ridiculous. Kind of hurts my feelings, though.

Eventually I'd like to get out of show business and enter politics. I'm hoping to join the Carter Administration as a Usually Reliable Source.

I'm going to write a letter to President Carter saying I'm behind his energy conservation plan 100 percent—just as soon as I find a place to plug in my electric pencil.

One of my best friends is a big-time disc jockey. He's the only guy I know who carries his tongue around in a leather case.

The last station manager I worked for was the kind of guy who, if you were drowning, would reach out a hand—and in it would be a joy-buzzer.

Actually, he willed his body to science. Science is contesting the will.

My wife belongs to a really weird religion, the Orthodox Bureaucrats. They believe that when you die your soul goes to Washington, D.C., where it gets lost in all the paperwork.

I can identify with Rodney Dangerfield. I don't get no respect either. Yesterday I called my answering service to see if I had any messages, and they told me it was none of my business.

At my wedding I asked the best man to sign the marriage certificate as a witness, but he said he didn't want to get involved.

My father was an inventor. He stayed up nights trying to find a cure for insomnia.

My neighbor is in the hospital. He had just beaten me in a video game of "Pong" on his TV and made the mistake of trying to jump over the net.

My doctor has found a solution to the rising cost of malpractice insurance. He's installed one of those insurance vending machines you see at airports. For 50¢ his patients can buy $50,000 worth of protection per checkup.

Of course there are always people who try to take advantage of the system. One patient bought the insurance and walked into the office with three sticks of dynamite under his tongue.

All my life I've wanted either to work in the Pentagon or be president of a large corporation. My psychiatrist says I have a Military Industrial Complex.

I once cut my own country record. It wasn't a hit, but I liked it. It was called "She's Only Been Gone Seven Days, But Already It Seems Like a Week."

Sometimes my wife is so emotional. She once sent me a valentine that said, "My love for you will always fluctuate!"

Did you know that kids in school are allowed to use pocket calculators while taking a math test? When I was a kid I had to get the answers the old-fashioned way—I had to get 'em off my shirt-sleeves.

The way I look at it there's nothing wrong with being mediocre as long as you're good at it.

Ready for a clean sweep are six members of the Atlanta Mini Maids, dressed in their striped-apron uniforms.

Wearing white coats are Mrs. Leone Ackerly, head of the organization, and husband William, its vice president.

You Can Have Your House Cleaned in a Jiffy

by E.D. Fales Jr.

Housework haters, take heart. Help is on the way. It takes the form of flying squads of expert sweepers, vacuumers, dishwashers and bed-makers who scour your house faster than Hercules cleaned up the Augean stables.

These high-speed housework teams, a big success in Atlanta, are starting to spread to other American cities, providing relief to harried housewives, working women, the elderly and others, and at the same time creating jobs for dozens of willing workers.

One of the leading entrepreneurs of the broomstick blitz business is Mrs. Leone Ackerly, 26, who says she got the idea when she was unable to find a houseworker to help clean her own home, where she lives with her businessman-husband and three daughters. After repeatedly calling job agencies to no avail, she decided to become a maid herself.

"I saw a business opportunity if housework could be streamlined," she says. Mrs. Ackerly quickly found a number of friends and neighbors who were delighted to go into business with her. Donning aprons, they began hiring out by the hour, bringing their own equipment along. One hauled golf clubs out of her car to make room for a vacuum cleaner and a couple of wash-buckets.

Today, after four years in business, Leone Ackerly is still cleaning up. There's a one-week waiting list to get her Mini Maids, she has branches in Georgia and Florida, and she plans to open offices in several northern cities.

Plan ahead

The secret of her success, she says, is scientific planning and no-waste execution. If you dial her for help, you'll find not one but four Mini Maids at your door promptly at the appointed hour. Under a team-leader's direction, they cut cleaning time to a fraction, zooming through a house or apartment in perhaps half an hour before rushing off to the next client.

Mrs. Ackerly contends that most women spend far more time than needed in doing their chores. The moment her Mini Maids hit the scene they begin work. One heads for the kitchen, another for the bathroom, still others for bedrooms and living room. Everything needed goes with them, around their waists and in small pails. Not a step is retraced. They circle around each room methodically, left to right, cleaning, polishing, dusting, tidying up. Then suddenly they're gone. "Our girls," says Mrs. Ackerly, "do just about everything maids used to do, and a lot faster."

The cost? The Mini Maid bill may range from $10 for a two-room apartment to $50 for a seven-room house. The average charge, Mrs. Ackerly says, has been running around $19.50 for a one-day-a-week visit by a four-maid team. Each team cleans an average of seven homes a day, although some manage more. The pay usually works out to about $18 to $20 a day for each team member, with $25 for the leader.

Professional cleaning services have been available in many localities of the U.S. for years. For example, Service Master, a national organization headquartered in Downers Grove, Ill., has been in the business of supplying and training help since 1946.

But with more and more women leaving their houses to hold daily jobs—and with the shortage of domestic workers of previous eras—the team-cleaning service concept is spreading, and increasing numbers of newcomers are plunging into the field.

In Boston you can have your home cleaned by Harvard student teams. In Berkeley, you can get University of California students. In Chattanooga, Tenn., the wife of a college dean—trained, incidentally, by the Atlanta Mini Maids—will bring a squad around.

One-person 'teams'

In Denver, Paul Hollins gave up a management job to launch two teams because he saw good money in housework. Two of his workers, for two hours, cost the customer $30. Not all services are multiperson. For $5.25 an hour, Chicago's Merry Pop-Ins still sends one woman or one man. Service Master also still prefers one-person "teams." Al Lebel's Maid for a Day service in Waterbury, Conn., will send out either one or two persons to each job.

In San Francisco, Dr. Michael Kacino, a retired psychologist, set up housekeeping services on a one-person basis after first trying it himself.

"We specialize in old-fashioned methods," Kacino says. "To scrub, we get down on hands and knees. To wash windows, we still use plain water and vinegar and newspapers. People like it."

With this concept, Kacino calls his service Grandma's Housecleaning. An average three-hour job costs $18. So successful has Kacino been that he's recently opened a carpentry division to provide quick and expert service for such matters as fixing broken windows, patching gutters, repairing roofs and performing similar chores.

'Can be interesting'

But it's the high-speed household-technician team concept pioneered by Leone Ackerly that some observers think offers the most promising new wrinkle in housework. Mrs. Ackerly believes she may be bringing about a lasting change in the traditional concept that domestic cleaning is a menial chore performed by persons of poor education who can't do anything else.

"Housework in teams the way we do it can be more interesting than office or factory work," she declares. "There's nothing shameful about it. It has dignity."

Q. Can you please tell me how much President Carter received as an advance for his book "A Government as Good as Its People"? And how much have his mother Lillian and sister Gloria Carter Spann received as an advance for their book "Away From Home: Letters to My Family"?—D.O., Cleveland.

A. Simon & Schuster paid the Carter Foundation an advance of $50,000 for the President's book, which consists of a collection of his speeches. The company advanced $55,000 to Gloria Carter Spann and her mother, "Miz Lillian," for their book.

DIRECTOR VINCENTE MINNELLI AND DAUGHTER LIZA

Q. Does Liza Minnelli look more like her father, Vincente Minnelli, or her mother, Judy Garland?—Frances Enwright, Boston.

A. Facially she resembles her famous father more than her famous mother.

Q. Is there any one man who now runs the People's Republic of China? And is that man Hua Kuo-feng, who was chosen by Mao Tse-tung?—June Johnson, Berkeley, Cal.

A. Most probably China at this time is run by the five men who comprise the standing committee of the Chinese Communist party's Politbureau. They are Chairman Hua and four party vice chairmen: Yeh Chien-ying, minister of defense; Teng Hsiao-ping, rehabilitated party leader; Vice Premier Li Hsien-nien, the economist; and Wang Tung-hsing, who arrested the so-called "gang of four" following Mao's death on Sept. 9, 1976.

Q. They say in show-biz circles that Cher Bono Allman has had her bust enlarged to size 40. True or false?—T. L., Las Vegas, Nev.

A. Reportedly Cher's bosom has been enlarged via cosmetic surgery but not to 40 inches. She is too thin to carry all that silicone.

Q. Any truth to the rumor that singer Linda Ronstadt has the choice of marrying Gov. Jerry Brown of California or President Carter's son Chip?—T. D., Mar Vista, Cal.

A. Linda Ronstadt and Jerry Brown have been coupled romantically by the news media. Chip Carter, a great lover in his time, has been shipped back to Plains, Ga., with his wife Caron and their baby son, James Earl IV. Chip and Caron are still married, and Chip is charged with looking after the Carter family's peanut business. A London paper recently carried the headline, "Peanuts Take Linda's Place in the Life of Chip Carter." Be that as it may, Linda Ronstadt at 31 conceivably could marry Jerry Brown, who at 39 is single, but there is no way at this time that she could marry Chip Carter, 27.

LINDA RONSTADT

Q. Is Peter Falk getting $500,000 for each episode of his TV show, "Columbo"?—Nooney Wilson, Compton, Cal.

A. Falk will do no more than six "Columbos" this season, will receive a minimum of $333,000 for each.

Q. Before Bert Lance appeared on TV some weeks ago to face his accusers, wasn't he coached by Barry Jagoda, the White House TV adviser?—V. B., Baltimore.

A. Yes. At Lance's request Jagoda checked out the Senate hearing room, then gave him some pointers. Lance performed superbly on TV, but that was not enough to neutralize his banking record.

BERT LANCE

BARRY JAGODA

Q. I would like to know how much money chewing gum magnate Philip K. Wrigley left when he died on April 12, 1977. As you know, Wrigley owned Santa Catalina Island, the Chicago Cubs, and a lot of other property.—Ben Daniels, Catalina Island, Cal.

A. Wrigley left an estate valued at $81.3 million, most of it going to his son William and 10 grandchildren. His wife Helen died on June 27, 1977, at age 75. Wrigley had previously provided for his two daughters, Ada and Dorothy.

Q. The last movie I saw Robert Redford in was "All the President's Men." What's his next one, or has he decided to retire?—Nell Peterson, Salt Lake City.

A. Redford, of course, has more film offers than he knows what to do with. He wants to avoid over-exposure, however. His next film may be "A Place To Come To," from the novel by Robert Penn Warren. It deals with a man's attempt to reach his son by first seeking for his own father.

AL PACINO AND MARTHE KELLER

Q. I read in the newspapers that Al Pacino and Marthe Keller refused to turn up at a gala invitational premiere in New York of their film "Bobby Deerfield." Is it because success has gone to their heads?—V. E., Brooklyn, N.Y.

A. Al Pacino generally refuses to grant interviews. Marthe Keller, who lives with him, is generally more cooperative. Many young film players today do not believe in the buildup value of publicity. They are not under contract to any studio, do not have to fulfill any publicity requirements. Film stars who earn a percentage of a picture's profits will frequently help in its exploitation. Many feel, however, that no amount of exploitation will help a bad picture, and perhaps Pacino and Keller feel that way about "Bobby Deerfield."

COMPARATIVE SHOPPING

In this country shoppers go from store to store looking for bargains.

In Europe shoppers go from country to country for the same purpose. Swedes flock to Denmark. The French ferry across the channel to England. The Swiss fly to Spain. It depends on what they want.

The Confederation of British Industry recently released a directory which reports that clothes are cheapest in Britain and most expensive in Scandinavia. Shoes are cheapest in Italy, Holland and Spain. Restaurant dinners are most expensive in Sweden and Belgium, cheapest in Portugal and Italy.

Herewith a price guide in the event you plan to visit Europe or just want to compare prices with those at home:

DESIGNER RINGO

Ringo Starr is trying his hand at designing. The 37-year-old former drummer for the Beatles is starting a new career.

He and a friend who is an expert in the field are designing chess sets. The boards are made of rosewood and mahogany. And it's not hard to tell who inspired the silver playing pieces: the figures are formed like hands in various positions of rhythm-making.

Ringo, a member of the "Most Excellent Order of the British Empire," will be selling his chess sets through the Asprey Jewelers of London, purveyors to Her Royal Majesty. The sets are priced at about $5200 each.

RINGO STARR

JUDY EXNER AND HUSBAND DAN

TOO HOT TO HANDLE?

Judy Exner--whose book "My Story," an alleged confession of her friendship with the late John F. Kennedy, has sold more than 40,000 hardcover copies--cannot find a single top publisher in the U.S. to print the paperback version.

"It's absolutely incredible!" exclaims Kent Carroll of Grove Press, publishers of the hardcover. "A book which has sold more than 40,000 copies would ordinarily be grabbed up by the paperback publishers in a minute. But we've been turned down by everyone in this country. Our only recourse is to bring out the paperback ourselves. And that's a pity because we lack the distribution clout of the big boys like Bantam, Pocket Books, Avon and Ballantine."

Mrs. Exner, who wrote her book in collaboration with Ovid Demaris, does not seem too worried, however. "The subsidiary rights to 'My Story' have already grossed about $500,000," according to Carroll.

To date, neither Mrs. Exner nor her publisher has been sued by anyone, including members of the Kennedy family.

JUNGLE STORY

An international group of scientists has discovered an Indian tribe in the Amazon that controls and operates a lucrative gold mine.

The Niawa tribe also owns valuable jewels, makes human sacrifices, marries off its children at age 6 and boasts a language with a 15-letter alphabet.

French doctor Louis van Leer won't disclose the exact area in the Brazil-Colombia-Peru triangle where his team discovered the tribe, which is believed at one time to have numbered 80,000 persons.

He describes the gold mine, however, as an underground city worked by 50 prisoners. He declines to reveal any details about the jewels but tells how a young Russian anthropologist who wanted to steal one was later found, his body pierced by arrows and spears.

The scientists hope to enlist the help of the Peruvian government in undertaking an expedition this fall to study further the Niawa tribe.

BIANCA AND MICK JAGGER: THEIR MARRIAGE IS "VERY MUCH ON COURSE"

The Sage Speaks

Mick Jagger, the Rolling Stones' lead man, was asked recently if he thought rock musicians could progress into middle age with any sort of dignity.

"Judging from Elvis," Jagger said, "I think not. No, rock 'n' roll music is for adolescents. It's adolescent music. It's a dead end. I think the whole history of rock 'n' roll has proved that."

Jagger insists that, despite what appears in print, his marriage to Bianca "is very much on course. Somehow," he adds, "the public doesn't seem to like it if we stay together. They seem to prefer couples who are fighting."

Correction

Dr. John Hembree of the University of Tennessee's College of Dentistry takes exception to an item concerning dental students we ran in this column in July. At that time, in citing a study, "The Effects of Dental Drill Noise on the Hearing of Dentists," we said dental students at the university suffered a significant loss of hearing within three years from using high-speed drills.

Not true... about students. "The results of this study [written by M.A. Weatheron, Ray E. Melton and William W. Burns]," it says, "indicated that exposure to dental drills at this particular dental school does not necessarily damage the student's hearing sensitivity during the three-year program. . . . The results do show, however, that continued exposure over a period of years will cause irreversible hearing loss as found in the faculty."

Dr. Hembree agrees that "members of the faculty that were in the study did demonstrate some loss of hearing." But he adds, "High-speed noise was not implicated because the changes could be attributed to the age of the faculty participants."

Girl Matador

If you haven't heard of her already, you soon will. Her name is Maribel Atienzar. She is Spanish and 17 and known to bullfight fans as La Niña Torera, "the baby bullfighter."

Maribel has been swirling a cape since 14, thus far killed 35 bulls. At first her mother objected to her becoming a bullfighter. "It's more fitting for your brother Palo," she said. "Bullfighting is my life," Maribel insisted. She made Palo her manager, is touring Spain where she is booked into corridas as La Niña.

Marry in Haste

Greg Allman, the rock star whose band raised thousands of dollars for Jimmy Carter's Presidential campaign, recently told Viva magazine how he came to marry Cher Bono in the first place.

He and Cher had been friends for only four months when "one Sunday morning I woke up, and she said, 'I got this Lear jet and Nevada ain't too far away. Why don't we get married?' And I said, 'I don't know if I'm ready to get into this, but OK, let's do it.'"

As soon as he and Cher were married, however, it dawned on Allman—who used to be a hefty drug-user—that he really didn't love Cher, in fact had never loved her and "was sorry that I had done it. We came home from the wedding, got off the jet, and I was gone for two days." But Allman wants his fans to know that "I ain't putting her down or anything like that. She was just as sorry that we'd done it."

One child later, Cher and Greg Allman find themselves in a nerve-racking, unstable relationship. Moral: Never marry in haste—or at least wait until your head has cleared from the bash the night before.

Fybate Folds

Fybate Lecture Notes, a note-taking service near the University of California campus in Berkeley, has gone out of business.

For more than 40 years, Fybate was a fixture from which students could buy class notes for $5 or $10.

Tom Winnett, who owned Fybate since 1950, says, "It was the cheap copying machine which did us in. A couple of students would buy our notes, then copy them on a Xerox or another machine. Our class notes were copyrighted, and it was illegal to copy them, but who could stop it?"

Fybate used to hire students who had previously taken the course to write the notes, and it paid professors who permitted the practice a royalty of 80 percent of sales.

Since the demise of its note-taking business, Fybate has switched to producing trail guides under the name of Wilderness Press.

DOCTORS CUT SERVICES

A survey of doctors who belong to the California Medical Association shows that 41% of general and family practitioners no longer provide maternity care services and that obstetrical care has been discontinued by 21% of the obstetrician-gynecologists.

Why? Because of the high cost of medical malpractice insurance. More than 13% of all the doctors polled in the survey admitted that they are practicing medicine without malpractice insurance coverage. They are practicing "bare" and taking fewer chances.

For example, of the general and family practitioners, 38% said they no longer perform major surgery.

Patients in rural and semi-urban areas are most affected by this development. In such areas, 20-22% of the obstetrician-gynecologists have ended obstetrical services. In metropolitan areas, about 8% of the physicians have dropped maternity care. If the trend continues, many doctors may limit themselves to prescribing over the phone for the treatment of headaches.

GOLF IN EUROPE

Now that an estimated 50 million people in the world play golf, European tournaments are attracting international corporations.

Although U.S. companies have been sponsoring golf tournaments for years, the trend has only recently spread to Europe.

In Switzerland, for example, Dunhill, Philip Morris and Lancia have sponsored the Open championships. In Sweden, Volvo and SAS share in giving $84,000 for the Scandinavian Open. Even impoverished Portugal came up with $26,000 for the 1976 championships in the expectation it would help the tourist trade.

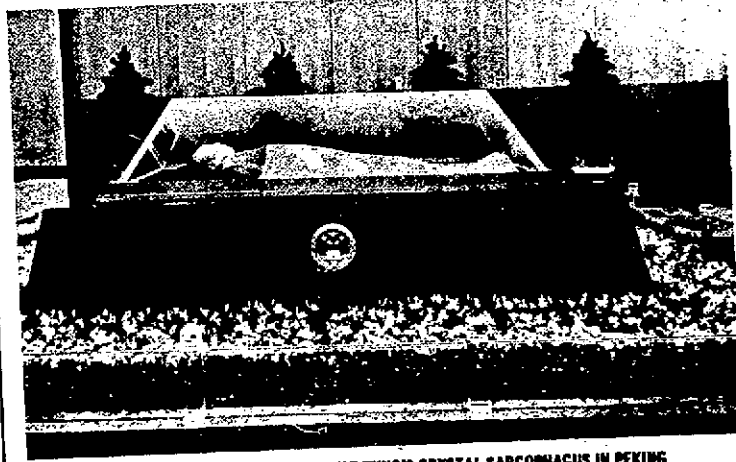

MAO'S MAUSOLEUM

Americans who visit China are now permitted to file by the crystal sarcophagus of Mao Tse-tung. It lies in the Chairman Mao Memorial Hall in Peking's Tien An Men Square.

It was officially opened on Sept. 9—one year after Mao's death—but with the exception of President Tito of Yugoslavia, who was in Peking at the time, no foreigners were allowed to view the sarcophagus until a week later.

Now it has become the showpiece of the capital, visited not only by foreigners but by thousands of "workers, poor and middle peasants, People's Liberation Army Fighters, revolutionary intellectuals, and builders of the memorial hall." So claims the China News Agency.

NOW OPEN TO AMERICANS: MAO TSE-TUNG'S CRYSTAL SARCOPHAGUS IN PEKING

NEW TAX EXILE

To the long list of British tax exiles you may now add the name of actor Michael Caine, who was born Maurice Micklewhite, son of a London fishmarket porter and a London janitress.

Caine, who plays an entomologist in "The Swarm," a film about vast armies of invading bees, says he hated to leave. England has been good to him—in fact made him a millionaire—he says, "but there comes a time when your head has got to rule your heart."

Caine, working in Hollywood, says, "I have never made a tougher decision. I've been waking up in the middle of the night worrying about it."

The problem, of course, is taxes. Caine claims that if he remained in England he'd eventually pay more than 90% of his income to the government. Hence, he joins in luxurious exile Richard Burton, David Niven, Sean Connery, Peter Sellers, Peter Ustinov, Tom Jones, the Rolling Stones and so many other talented Britishers.

Glenda Jackson, Roger Moore, Lord Olivier, Sir Alec Guinness, Sir John Gielgud and Sir Ralph Richardson love England too much to relinquish residence there. But some love money, too.

THE LATE PABLO PICASSO AND JACQUELINE, HIS WIFE AND MODEL

PICASSO'S WIDOW SETTLES

After 4½ years of legal wrangling, Madame Jacqueline Picasso, 51, widow of Pablo Picasso, has finally agreed to a division of her husband's estate.

Pablo Picasso died April 8, 1973, at age 92 and left an estate valued roughly at $300 million, the largest ever left by an artist.

For more than four years, eight lawyers have been involved in trying to settle who gets what.

Here's what it comes down to: France will get 20% in death duties, but this tax will be paid in Picasso paintings, drawings, engravings and sculptures that will be housed in the Picasso Museum. The Hotel Sale, once a 17th-century private home in the Marais section of Paris, will be remodeled as the museum.

The Picasso Museum will also contain 50 paintings bought by Picasso, including works by Braque, Corot, Modigliani, and other outstanding artists.

In his long life, Picasso produced 1876 paintings, 12,000 drawings, 1355 sculptures, 30,000 engravings and 2880 ceramics. Maurice Rheims, the art expert who assembled the Picasso inventory, notes that the artist also did tapestries and illustrated books.

Once France has its 20% of the estate, the remainder will be divided into approximately equal shares among Picasso's widow, his three illegitimate children and the two grandchildren fathered by Paulo Picasso, the artist's only legitimate son, who died in 1975.

Dean Jones finds joy as 'born again' Christian

By Bob Martin
TV-Radio Editor

Once upon a time a young man from Decatur, Ala., came to the magic land of Hollywood. He had been singing professionally, now and then, since age 15; he'd spent a year in college as a voice major, and he'd completed a four-year hitch in the Naval Air Corps. Now he dreamed of finding fame and fortune in the nation's film capital.

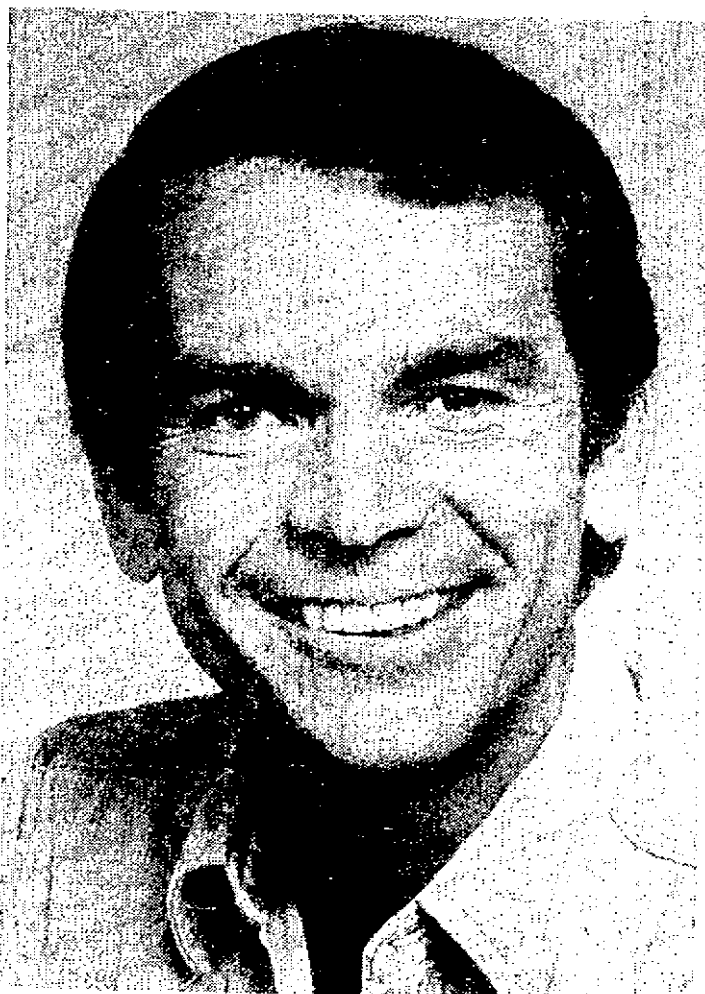

The young man's name was, and is, Dean Jones, and through hard work, more than a little talent and a few breaks along the way, he rose to stardom in the movies — a stardom that has lasted for two decades.

His success came primarily as an actor, although he often manages to mix singing and acting in his career. He has been in more than a score of movies, has performed in three Broadway productions and has starred in three television series.

Dean is best known, though, as the star of 10 Walt Disney movies. Six of them are on Variety's list of all-time top-money makers, and he has been seen on the screen by more film-goers than many superstars.

Think of Dean Jones, and you think of such Disney hits as "That Darn Cat," "The Ugly Dachshund," "The Love Bug," "The $1,000,000 Duck," "The Horse in the Gray Flannel Suit," "The Shaggy D.A." and his latest, "Herbie Goes to Monte Carlo."

With his flair for light comedy and his clean-cut, All-American-guy looks, Jones has projected just the right image for Disney comedies, which are designed to appeal to the whole family. He's Mr. Clean, Mr. Wholesome, the ex-Boy Scout, the Nice Man Next Door, the Ideal Husband, the Perfect Father.

DEAN JONES, star of a number of Disney movies, will headline a two-hour musical-comedy special, "Once Upon a Brothers Grimm," with Paul Sand on CBS-TV Wednesday night, Nov. 23.

Though he's often bumbling and frantic, you know that, with such a lovable guy, everything's going to come out all right in the end.

But is Jones, in real life, the same sort of person he appears to be on screen, tube or stage?

For years, he wasn't. Jones told me the other day over lunch at the Sea Shell restaurant in Tarzana, when I interviewed him in connection with an upcoming CBS special, "Once Upon a Brothers Grimm," a two-hour musical comedy-fantasy in which he stars with Paul Sand, and which will air on Thanksgiving Eve (Wednesday, Nov. 23) at 8 p.m.

In the interview, Dean came across as the sort of person I expected him to be — a very friendly, talkative, happy and outgoing person. A successful performer who gets great satisfaction from his career.

But, until three and a half years ago, his life was miserable, he disclosed.

The Dean Jones you saw on the screen was not the real Dean Jones. He

Ready to race: Steve Cauthen pats his mount as he prepares for another first-place finish at Aqueduct track.

The young jockey learned the trade from his father, has compiled a phenomenal record in his 14 months as a pro.

At 17, What's Ahead For Winningest Jockey?

by Lou Sabin

Steve Cauthen knows all about pressure. As one of America's leading jockeys, he's under pressure every time he heads a horse down the homestretch. But he feels it off the track, too, because even after you've won one race there's another ahead, and plenty of people keep putting their money on him. It's the kind of responsibility that can get to be heavy—especially when you're 17 years old.

But Steve keeps winning. On Oct. 4 at New York's Belmont track, he broke the world's record for earnings in a single year when he took his third race of the day. It brought the total to $4,714,976—and his share to more than $470,000. Despite the money and glory, Steve is troubled by the disappointed bettors who revile him and scream insults when he does lose a race.

"I do my best every time, so I have a clear conscience when I don't win," says the 5-foot-1, 95-pound Cauthen, who's worked hard at learning the jockey's trade since the age of 12. "Naturally I feel sorry for people who lose their money, especially those who can't afford to. But when they start yelling at me, I just walk straight ahead and do my best to pay no attention to what they're saying. Sometimes a jockey yells back. That only makes it worse. I hope I never lose control that way."

Cauthen's rise to fame and fortune has been meteoric. In little more than a year, the young rider from Walton, Ky., has had more than 400 first-place finishes—including 23 winners in one week, tops in U.S. racing history. This fall he has a full schedule, competing six days a week with five or six mounts a day. If he can keep up his torrid pace, he stands to wind up one of the winningest jockeys in track history—and one of the richest teenagers in the U.S.

Quarry of reporters

Steve admits it isn't always easy to cope with the pressure that's building up in him. "I couldn't stand the way it was last winter," he says. "I'd finish a race and five reporters would come at me all at once, demanding that I tell them everything I did and thought. After a while they got to treating me like a freak. I had to close myself off. After all, jockeys are the same as other athletes, other people, only smaller."

For a time Cauthen's reluctance to engage in long colloquies with reporters gained him an undeserved reputation for being cool and unemotional. Actually he is a youngster full of warmth and enthusiasm—especially when he's talking about horses, which he began to ride as a child under the tutelage of his father, a blacksmith and former race-track exercise boy.

"I've always had a deep respect and affection for horses," says Steve. "I was close with them from the start and got to love them the way other people love

continued

Occupational hazard: Cauthen was among the injured in a three-horse spill at Belmont. Accidents can sideline a jockey for months, even end a career.

Steve leaves hospital with a fractured arm and broken rib after Belmont Park mishap.

THE BIBLE Says

WHY THESE ARTICLES?

#2

Last week we pointed out some of Jesus' warnings regarding false teachers and why we are to beware of them. This week we want to continue our study.

The apostle Paul warns in very strong words that we are to accept no other gospel than that which has been preached. In Galatians 1:6-9 I read, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel; which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

Jesus made it very clear that "the truth will make you free" (John 8:32). However, in verse 31 he pointed out, "If ye continue in my words, then are ye truly my disciples." But what happens if one does not love the truth — and will not continue in Christ's words? The apostles Paul and John give us the answer. In II Thess. 2:10-12 we read, "And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." Paul said people would be damned who believed not the truth. Now notice what John said in II John 9, "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there came any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." Again John said, "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world" (I John 4:1). Thus I am just trying to get people to seek to know the truth, for error will condemn.

A shocking new series 'I Claudius' is not for the 'tender-minded'

By Jay Sharbutt
AP Television Writer

If you saw the Roman movie epics of the 1950s, you learned there's only one Caesar and he is Victor Mature. But watch "I, Claudius" on public TV for 13 weeks. You'll change your mind.

This acclaimed BBC series, based on Robert Graves' 1934 novel about ancient, corrupt Rome, starts tonight at 9:00 on Channel 26's "Masterpiece Theatre" show hosted by the always urbane Alistair Cooke.

It's a richly textured, well-acted dramatization of the period 24 B.C. to 54 A.D., when emperors Augustus, Tiberius, Caligula (he was a bit bent, you'll recall) and Claudius ruled Rome in their varied ways.

A warning: Those poorly versed in Latin history might consult the history first or see each show with an expert, as it's a mite hard to tell who is doing what to whom and why without a scoreboard.

The series deals with the high-level power struggles, inter-family murder, intrigue and general decadence that led to the eventual fall of the Roman Empire and the ruinous first wave of German tourists there.

It's done in the form of a history, secretly written by Claudius when he's old and rightfully convinced that certain parties wish to hasten his bon voyage from mortal earth.

Sunday's opener starts the history with the reign of Augustus and the machinations of his second wife, Livia, who to promote relative power poisons his son-in-law; Marcellus, making him an ex-hair apparent.

This is bad form now, but was the common thing in the good old days, ditto fratricide, incest and the orgy. Since such things are touched on in "I, Claudius," steps have been taken to alert viewers and stations this is not a Romanized version of "Father Knows Best."

Cooke, in his opening remarks on history. Graves' book and the show, warns that "some people are going to be more shocked by this series than most of the dramas we've shown on 'Masterpiece Theatre.'"

But he emphasizes that none of the show's few potentially shocking scenes are gratuitous or intended as titillation. This is history as it was, he says, noting that Graves based his book on the works of Suetonius, a famed Roman historian of 75-150 A.D. vintage.

He repeats this theme in later shows, particularly one about Caligula, the mad emperor who declared himself a god, married his sister, rendered her pregnant, then killed her and her unborn child.

Cooke insists there's "no delicate or comfortable way" to dramatize the life of this worthy, and wryly suggests:

"Maybe tender-minded people might prefer to switch to something more pasteurized."

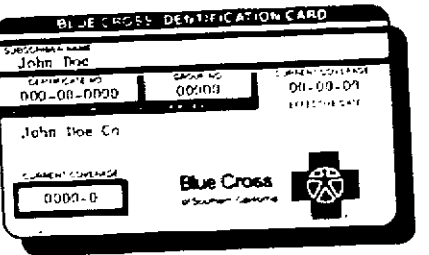

Still at Boston's WGBH, which bought the London Films-BBC series, producer Joan Sullivan says she deleted some parts—but not entire scenes—of five episodes on grounds of taste.

She said the longest cut, of nearly 14 minutes, was a too-graphic and bloody moment of Caligula's ultimate madness. The rest of the cuts only ranged from 20 to 50 seconds, she added.

Her reason for excising one brief bit from an Old Rome orgy scene had a modern twist to it.

She said the axed moment had two homosexuals, one in a woman's dress, romping about, then kissing each other passionately.

It takes more than love to make a happy marriage.

Strange how the last thing many couples think about in planning their marriage is the matter of religion. Only after the caterer, the photographer, the printer have been provided for, only then is church mentioned. And church often is more a matter of social custom than real religious conviction. No wonder so many marriages get into trouble. God barely makes the guest list.

If you are about to be married and religion is not important to you, do you know what your chances for a happy life are? The odds are not good. If you are already married and religion has been packed away with the bridal gown, do you wonder that life has become a bore or a battle?

Maybe you are one of those unhappy people who has decided that life is meant to be boring and absurd. If so, we invite you to look into our pamphlet "The Real Secret of Successful Marriage." Write today. No one will call on you.

their dogs and cats. When I was a little kid I felt I understood what they were feeling, what they wanted to do and didn't want to do. I'd go along with even the toughest horse, letting him do his thing for a bit, letting him work out his needs. Then I'd sort of let him know it was time for us to do our thing together."

Cauthen's parents say they're pleased at the way he's responded to his success, although they're conscious of the problems he faces.

"His growing up is being kind of rushed right now," says Mrs. Myra Cauthen. "I think he's handling it very well but, like any mother, I wish it didn't have to happen so fast. Still, I guess you have to expect that. We taught him table manners, politeness, consideration for others. And now we're happy when complete strangers tell us they think he's such a nice young man, not spoiled by his good fortune."

"Steve had a normal boyhood. He played baseball, football and basketball, went to school activities, was in the 4-H, did all the things a boy does around here. He earned his allowance and extra spending money by cleaning out the stalls and doing other chores around the farm, just as his brother Doug, who's 14, does now, and Kerry, who's 8, will do when he's a little older. He's always been a thoughtful boy, serious and levelheaded."

Steve's father, Ronald "Tex" Cauthen, recalls that he agreed to teach his son the art of being a jockey on two conditions—"if his weight held and if he got a high school education." After four years of hard work, Steve won his first professional race just after turning 16, at a racetrack near Cincinnati.

"That was one of my biggest thrills," says Steve. "But the one that ranks right at the top is the day I rode six winners at Aqueduct in New York. It tied a [New York State] record, but what made it really important is that my dad was there, and when I saw him after the fifth winner, he was glowing. People were congratulating him, saying how proud he must be to have a boy who's not only such a good rider but such a fine son, a gentleman."

Tex Cauthen also remembers that moment: "It was exciting. I can't put my feelings into words, but I guess I did glow. It pleases a man to see his boy succeeding in life, getting deep-down pleasure from what he's doing ... and being a man."

Steve speaks with his parents by phone about once a week and eagerly awaits the few days a year they can spend visiting him in New York, where he does much of his racing. Part of his earnings have gone into gifts for his family, including a car.

Steve is fulfilling a promise to his father by completing high school through a correspondence course. "That's no hardship," he says. "I really like studying and learning, especially English and American history. Reading about Woodrow Wilson impressed me a lot; he was a man you could really admire. I love being a jockey, but I want to learn about other things, too. Here at the track I get to meet real interesting people—stockbrokers and bankers, men who started with nothing and made themselves millionaires. A whole world of people comes here, and there's so much I can learn from them."

Bad spill last May

What's ahead for Steve Cauthen? Always assuming he can avoid serious injury—he already survived one bad spill last May, when he suffered a concussion, a fractured rib and a broken arm—there seems every reason to expect that both his first-place finishes and his earnings will continue to climb. In fact they go together, since a jockey is automatically entitled to 10 percent of a horse's winnings.

There also is other money to be made, for jockeys get a set fee for every race they run (the standard price is $35, though Cauthen, by reason of his record, commands more) as well as outside income. Steve even has cut a country music record called "And Steve Cauthen Sings Too."

"I don't know if the record will sell much, but I sure enjoyed making it," says Steve. "I'm not really a singer, though, and I don't plan to do much along that line."

"I hope to ride for another 10 or 20 years and to ride as many winners as I can. I'm not aiming at a specific number or to break records set by men like Eddie Arcaro or Willie Shoemaker. If it happens, it happens. But I'd be lying if I didn't say I'd like to be remembered as one of the best. What I am, first and last, is a jockey. I love it and consider it as important and difficult as being a President or a great writer or a great scientist. What I mean is, I believe excellence in any field should be admired."

"Vantage is changing a lot of my feelings about smoking."

"I like to smoke, and what I like is a cigarette that isn't timid on taste. But I'm not living in some ivory tower. I hear the things being said against high-tar smoking as well as the next guy.

"And so I started looking. For a low-tar smoke that had some honest-to-goodness cigarette taste.

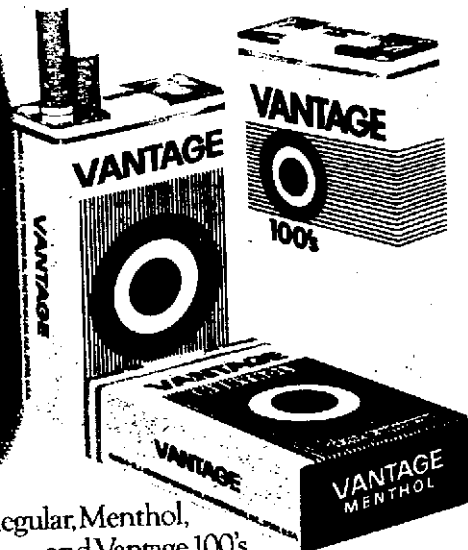

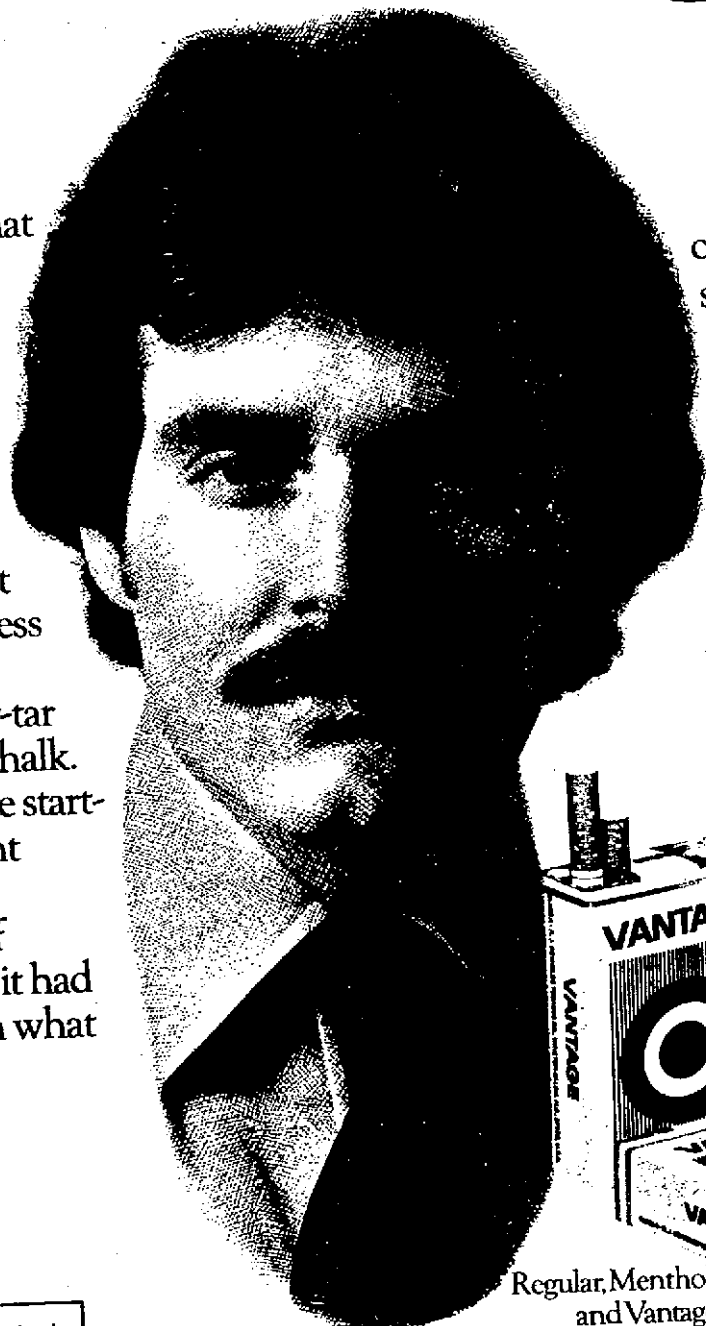

"It wasn't easy. The low-tar cigarettes I tried tasted like chalk. And high-tar cigarettes were starting to taste rougher as I went along.

"Then I tried a pack of Vantage. It was smooth yet it had taste. And a lot less tar than what I'd been smoking.

"As far as I'm concerned, when I switched to Vantage, I changed to a cigarette I could enjoy."

"When we moved from Hawaii four years ago our health coverage ran out . . . and during that time our daughter spent 14 days in the hospital, and we had to pay a $7,000 medical bill. We decided then we wouldn't settle for anything less than a health plan that included not only basic coverage but also catastrophic coverage for the really big bills."

"Last winter I went to the hospital where they gave me 30 minutes to live. After 45 days and three different operations I'm back home . . . without having to worry about the bills."

"We're farmers, and we never know if weather might wipe out a crop. But we are confident that medical expenses won't wipe us out financially. We picked Blue Shield's Coronet 365, and I'm glad we did. I think everybody needs that kind of protection." Evelyn Lum, Niland, California.

Witnesses Tell How Two Americans Were Killed

Idi Amin's Reign of Terror

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON, D.C.

There has been no precise count of the human slaughter in Uganda. The whispered estimate is that more than 100,000 faceless men and women have died there, the anonymous victims of the brutal dictator Idi Amin.

Genocide is always anonymous. But a few victims are beginning to emerge from the nightmare as mute witnesses against Amin. Two who have come back to haunt him are Americans. In the Sept. 12, 1976, issue of PARADE, we told the story of their disappearance. Now we can reveal, with reasonable certainty, the terrible end of the story.

Nicholas Stroth, 33, and Robert Siedle, 46, were two of Amin's earlier victims. Stroth was a free-lance journalist who wrote for several U.S. newspapers. Siedle was a sociologist who lectured at Kampala's Makerere University and once met Amin at a cocktail party.

They were enraptured with Uganda, where an advanced civilization flourished at the headwaters of the White Nile long before the depredations of the white man. But Amin has turned the country into an insane asylum, with the inmates in charge.

On July 7, 1971, Stroth and Siedle drove together into Mbarara, Uganda. Stroth wanted to check reports of a massacre at the Uganda Army's Simba Battalion barracks. Siedle wanted to research a book he was writing about missionaries. They spent two days in Mbarara.

On July 9 Stroth drove off in his rented blue Volkswagen, a handwritten "PRESS" sign affixed to the windshield. Around his neck he wore a silver cross and the inscription: "I am a Catholic. Please call a priest."

Arrested at hotel

Siedle remained behind at the hotel. Two hours later, three uniformed Africans drove up to the hotel in a black Zephyr car, asked Siedle to get into the backseat and sped away with him.

Neither Stroth nor Siedle was heard from again. But Stroth came from a prominent Detroit family which was able to bring international pressure upon Amin. Grudgingly he appointed a commission of inquiry headed by British-born Judge D. Jeffreys-Jones of Uganda's High Court.

The courageous jurist pushed the investigation, refusing to be deterred by American teacher Robert Siedle (l) chats with Idi Amin (r) and an Egyptian diplomat at 1970 party in Soviet Embassy. Two Ugandan defectors now confirm that Siedle and a reporter were brutally slain one year later by Amin's men.

Amin, who wanted him to whitewash the case. The dictator called to express his displeasure, and it is dangerous in Uganda to provoke Amin's displeasure. Yet for seven months Jeffreys-Jones doggedly pursued the case.

He found Stroth's burned-out, crumpled car at the bottom of a ravine. He obtained a deposition from a Simba Battalion defector, Silver Tibihika, who had fled to nearby Tanzania. The former officer swore that the two Americans had been killed and their bodies burned.

Judge defies Amin

Jeffreys-Jones took the precaution of leaving Uganda before he issued his findings. The report declared, in defiance of Amin's wishes, that the two Americans "died an unnatural death.... They were in fact murdered by personnel of the Simba Battalion.... From the evidence I have before me it was impossible to point an unerring finger at any particular person or persons who actively committed the offense."

Amin issued a White Paper contending that Stroth and Siedle "met their deaths somewhere in Mbarara... at the hands of unidentified persons." Yet after negotiations with the two families, Amin's government tried to hush up the affair by paying $78,707.90 in compensation to each.

Now two prominent Ugandans with knowledge of the case have defected from Amin's inner circle. One is the former Ugandan health minister, Henry Kyemba, the other a top military officer whose identity must be withheld to protect his relatives in Uganda.

The two new witnesses have confirmed Tibihika's deposition and have added some grisly details. Their statements differ only on a few trivial points. Here's what they say happened to the two Americans whose fate could not be suppressed:

On the day Stroth disappeared, he was seen driving boldly up to the Simba Battalion barracks. Fifteen minutes later he was taken to the camp's second in command, a Major Juma.

By all accounts, the major was an un-

Murdered journalist Nicholas Stroth was checking reports of massacre at Ugandan Army's Simba Battalion barracks.

pleasant fellow. Jeffreys-Jones said of him: "In all my experience as a judge, I have never seen a more arrogant, more insulting witness.... He was also a consummate liar."

According to witnesses, Stroth and Juma quarreled. Apparently the major got the name of Stroth's companion and dispatched three soldiers to arrest Siedle at his hotel. The major, an intelligence officer named Steven Taban and a third Ugandan soldier then hacked the two Americans to death with machetes. "They weren't shot," the military defector said. "They were slaughtered."

'Destroy everything'

Taban and Tibihika were ordered to burn Stroth's Volkswagen and destroy "everything." Then Taban led a party to a deserted spot 10 1/2 miles from Mbarara where they dug up the charred remains of two human bodies from a sandpit. They filled two sacks, returned to the barracks, poured oil and gasoline over them and set them afire. The ashes were scattered into a nearby river.

The word quickly spread through the camp that the two Americans were "kalasi"—dead. The witnesses don't know whether their execution was ordered or whether it was a natural, unpremeditated extension of the paranoia rampant among Amin's troops. Certainly the dictator had encouraged his troops to be bloodthirsty; it wasn't the first time they had used machetes and bludgeons on innocent victims. And, of course, Amin tried to cover up the crime.

Testimony of insiders

The statements from the new witnesses are particularly important, our diplomatic sources stress, because they represent a significant new trend in the unfolding story of Amin's terror. The testimony on atrocities is no longer coming just from the victims or hapless bystanders; it is coming from the perpetrators and members of Amin's inner circle. Such testimony shatters any credibility that Amin may have had.

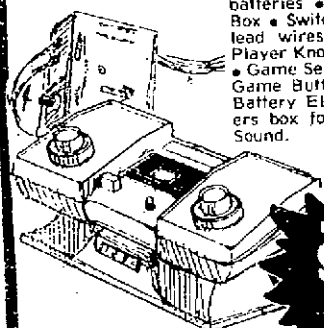

As for the alleged murderers, they have prospered under Amin. The nasty Juma is now a Ugandan cabinet minister in charge of transportation. Taban has been appointed chief technical officer of the Uganda Air Force. According to the military defector, Taban boasts that he got his promotion not because of his technical expertise but because of his role in the murders.

Yet the cost for Amin has been high. The fate of the two Americans was a factor in the U.S. decision to cut off foreign aid to Uganda in 1973. It has also made an impression on Rep. Don Pease (D., Ohio), who has introduced legislation to raise a trade barrier between the United States and Uganda similar to the Cuban embargo.

Executives and authors trade accusations

Who's to blame for bad scripts — networks or the writers?

By Jerry Buck
AP Television Writer

The question isn't whether episodic television is suffering because of bad writing. The question is why, and the battle lines are clearly drawn, with the networks on one side and the writers on the other.

Fred Silverman, president of ABC Entertainment, accused the writers of "letting us down" and said most series proposals submitted to ABC are "simply awful."

Such a standoff may not be a major factor in television's current dilemma, but it is a symptom of a condition that has left episodic television void of originality, thoughtfulness or provocative themes.

The victims are the viewers.

"On the other hand, I feel the networks, by the nature of the collective decision-making process, impose restrictions upon writers, and they are frequently more interested in subjects that are safe and non-controversial than they are in the originality and execution of an idea."

Silverman's cannonade came during a debate at the Writers Guild of America on "What's Wrong With Network Television?" Writer Richard Powell fired back later, "Deep in my heart of hearts, I know that if I brought 'Hamlet' to Fred Silverman, he would put a dog in it."

THE QUESTION wasn't really resolved during the debate and merited further inquiry.

A writer, who pleaded for anonymity, said, "I heard the ABC people say they were disappointed in the creative community because they don't bring in a diversity of ideas. If I didn't believe that the ideas that come to the networks are far better than what winds up on the screen, I'd hand in my fountain pen."

"I don't think the networks want the best that's available, ask for it or allow it."

"NO NETWORK is going to force a writer into writing badly, nor would any writer of integrity respond to that kind of pressure," says William Self, CBS vice president for motion pictures and miniseries and former president of 20th Century Fox Television.

"The real problem is that good writers are overtaxed. They're writing four or five shows at once. We all want the same writers."

Robert Dellinger, who is forsaking episodic TV for movies and novels, says, "I've seen it from both sides of the fence. I understand what Silverman means when he says the quality of writing is poor. I know that as a story editor I have been disappointed with some of the stories turned in by 'name' writers. They looked like they were just written off the wall."

"IT HAS been my experience that they say they want new and original ideas, well written, but when you go to them with those projects, they geld them."

"[It isn't the networks that make writing good or bad," says Deanne Barkley, a programming vice president at NBC, who says she finds some story treatments unimaginative.

"There wasn't much from the network that 'you can't do this' or 'you can't do that,'" she says. "Sometimes there was more imagination from the network supervisors than from the writers. It was more 'why don't you try this' than 'you can't do this.'"

Fred Baum, supervising producer of "Hawaii Five-O," says, "I don't think there's a direct correlation between network strictures and the quality of writing. I try to give a man a story, the kind of story we want, and the key is whether he gives us back a good script."

"The writers aren't letting us down because before they can go to work they have to be hired. The

A. Write the pair at Spelling-Goldberg Prods., 20th Century-Fox, Box 900, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90213.

Lots of luck. Soul and Glaser are not noted as good correspondents, but the request may pique their interest.

Q. I have a bet that

Cheryl Ladd, Charlie's new angel, once played a movie star in "Happy Days." J.C.

A. Good eye, Cheryl's an Angel with a long list of acting credits before she joined "Charlie." She also appeared in over 100 commercials.

Q. Was that Bernie Tau-pin in the "Hardy Boys-Nancy Drew Meet Dracula" on ABC? E.J.

A. 'Twas Elton John's good friend. Chap likes to do something different occasionally.

Q. I'd like to know when Sebastian Cabot, Mr. French of "Family Affair," died. My Mom doesn't believe it. D.J.

A. Cabot died Aug. 23 of a stroke. He was 59. Ill health had curtailed his acting career since "Affair" went off the air in 1971. Anissa Jones, who was Buffy in the same series, died of a drug overdose almost a year to the day earlier. Aug. 28, 1976.

WRITERS

error is made at the executive level. There are enough people who can do the job and are available.

"SILVERMAN can't say the writers are letting us down because the people he hires to make the shows are responsible for hiring the writers. It's up to them to hire the right person."

Producer George Eckstein says, "I have been in television 12 or 13 years and I think I may have gotten, in series, specials and everything else, two first drafts from writers that were shootable. You just don't get the quality."

He says part of the problem is greed on the part of writer and employer. "The guy who turns in the good script is the guy who spends time on it, polishing it, not just grinding it out. So you get guys taking more assignments than they can handle to make the dollars."

"And even had writers are in demand because eventually you come down to that level of someone who can give you a script in five weeks, good or bad. And you need a script."

Dellinger says a difficulty in writing for television is the number of people between the typewriter and the screen who can make changes. "So many times what starts out as a brilliant idea ends up as a pedestrian story."

ATTRACTING good writers to television is vital. But the writer who asked anonymity says that not only are the networks doing little to attract new writers, they are doing little to keep the good ones they have.

"One of the reasons writers get out of episodic television as fast as they can is because they tell you to check your heart and brains at the door," he says. "They don't want anything social, artistic, historic or controversial. What they want is jeopardy, chase and melodrama."

"I don't believe every writer is good, but I do believe that when there is a good show to write for and a strong creative producer who will let you do your best, the talent will be there."

Hillel and Riva Mazansky and their children Lisa, 7, and Rael, 4, turned their backs on a luxurious life-style in South Africa to emigrate here in June. But they have few regrets. In America, says Dr. Mazansky, "the sky's the limit."

Rhodesians and South Africans

America's New Immigrants

by Pam Proctor

A new kind of immigrant is coming to the United States these days. Well-to-do white South Africans and Rhodesians are abandoning careers in their racially troubled countries to attempt to build new lives here.

On the surface, they seem to have all the requisites of success: nest eggs of up to $35,000, housefuls of furniture, outstanding professional credentials.

Actually, however, many of them are trying hard to adapt to a different life-style and culture. Back home they enjoyed a life of prestige and wealth in an elite white paradise supported by what one South African describes as the "exploitation of cheap black labor." Here, as their apparent affluence has dissolved in the high cost of living and the expenses of starting over, they live anonymously as members of the financially pinched middle class.

But, like other immigrants before them, they are banking on their talent and hard work to get ahead. "America gives you the opportunity," says Dr. Hillel Mazansky, 35, an ebullient South African who chose the United States instead of England because he had a brother here and because of the poor prospects for physicians under a socialized medical system. "The sky's the limit as far as I'm concerned," he says. "If you work hard, you can earn a decent living and have a decent life here."

So far, the United States has attracted only a small portion of the whites who are leaving South Africa and Rhodesia at a combined rate of about 3000 a month. In the past few years, fewer than 100 of the Rhodesians have settled here annually. The South Africans, mostly English-speaking doctors, have numbered about 500 annually but swelled to more than 1300 from July 1975 to December 1976. Pockets of "little South Africas" have started to spring up in such cities as Cleveland, Houston, Boston and New York, where medical centers have actively recruited the highly trained South African physicians.

Dr. Mazansky is typical of the new arrivals. He gave up what he estimates as "one of the biggest solo practices in Johannesburg" to emigrate to Cleveland earlier this year. As a family physician in South Africa, he had an income comparable in purchasing power to $150,000 a year here. His house boasted a swimming pool, a tennis court, five bedrooms, two living rooms, a family room and a "massive kitchen." He figures it would sell for about $250,000 in an exclusive suburb of Cleveland. In addition, the family had three servants who acted as babysitters, ran errands and cleaned the house and yard.

But that opulent life is behind him—at least for the time being. No longer his own boss, he works as a "fellow" in family medicine in a program sponsored by Case Western Reserve University and Huron Road Hospital. With the hospital's help, he'll be able to set up a private practice in a year or so. But until then Mazansky, his wife Riva and their two children are renting the top half of a two-family house. The apartment is crammed full of the elegant green velvet sofas, antique cabinets and statuary they shipped from home. Mazansky left South Africa with less than the $35,000 permitted by the government (Rhodesians are permitted to take out only $1600), and he's dipped into it to buy two cars, insurance and to cover other expenses of getting settled. "My salary is livable, but it doesn't allow us any luxuries," he says. "But this is only temporary," he adds optimistically. "Once I go into private practice, I am sure I will be able to live up to the same social and economic standards that I did before."

They're locked in

The change to a middle-class lifestyle has had the most pronounced impact on the wives, whose freedom has been circumscribed by the inability to afford servants. One young Rhodesian mother said she cried for three months when she arrived last year because the strain of having the kids around the house all day long was too much to bear. "In Rhodesia I was free—free to go visiting, free to entertain," she says.

But in some ways, the lack of servants and enforced togetherness of American life is actually a blessing in disguise, says Riva Mazansky. "The family is much, much closer here."

Her husband agrees: "I've quite enjoyed it. It's been a novelty. I can't remember when last in South Africa I spent weekends with my children. There were always all these other attractions—working, going to the gym, to the sauna bath or to sporting events with friends. Here there are so many things to do with the family. We go on picnics, we've been to the museum twice and to concerts."

He helps with housework

Mazansky has also become a "liberated" husband; he pitches in with the shopping, housework and cooking. "I don't resent it," he says with a shrug. "I know I have to do it, and that's all there is to it."

But there are other aspects of American life which are harder for these new immigrants to swallow. Ironically, some of the biggest stumbling blocks to adjustment are the same problems that plague other Americans—but which the rest of us, for better or worse, have by now taken for granted. Here's a sampling of impressions gleaned from interviews with several families in Cleveland, where an estimated 40 South African medical families and a few Rhodesians have settled.

SCHOOLS: "The complete and utter lack of discipline in the schools" has disturbed some parents. One family put the children into parochial schools after their son complained of drug use in his junior high and was bullied for being a foreigner. The last straw was the day he came home "white with fear" after being chased by a gang of kids.

TV addiction

TELEVISION: Many of the kids have turned into TV addicts. In South Africa there were only five hours of TV a night, half in English and half in Afrikaans. Here, children like 7-year-old Lisa Mazansky are so taken by TV that they turn on their sets beginning at 6:45 a.m. Her parents have since limited her viewing to one hour a day.

MEDICAL PRACTICE: The South African and Rhodesian doctors are like the American family doctor of yesteryear; back home they treated a patient and his family from cradle to grave, made house calls for about $6 a visit, and even handled marital problems. They are concerned by American doctors' excessive reliance on technology and their obsession with litigation. "They're afraid of being sued," observes one South African. As a result, he says, many U.S. physicians take more tests than necessary and remain aloof from patients to avoid grounds for a lawsuit.

Another bitter pill: although South African medical training is said to be among the best in the world and many of the doctors who have come here have had years of practical experience, they often must start at the bottom of the medical ladder. That means taking orders from younger physicians who know less than they do and being treated with disdain as "foreign medical graduates."

MONEY-CONSCIOUS SOCIETY: "Everyone's out for the buck," complains one doctor. Coming from countries where most prices are fixed and the cost of living is low, the South Africans and Rhodesians are exasperated by the high prices and the pressure to "shop around" for the best buy. One family was appalled to receive estimates ranging from $400 to $3000 for a paint job on their house. In another case, a physician took his son to the dentist and was told the boy needed 13 fillings. Consultation with a second dentist proved the child's teeth were in good condition. "I never expected to be ripped off by a colleague," says the doctor.

Perhaps the easiest adjustment for these families to make has been the transition from a highly stratified, racially segregated society to one more concerned with equal opportunity and integration. Most say they were opposed to South Africa's apartheid and are relieved to have left it behind.

On a personal level, they say they have been received warmly by Americans of all races and have been treated with respect as individuals.

In turn, they have taken American society at face value, making a clear distinction in their minds between the racial situation in America and conditions back home. "The black American is an American with a black skin," argues one South African physician. "He is, in my opinion, no different from the white American. Culturally he is the same, and his language is the same." In contrast, he says, blacks and whites in South Africa are poles apart; many of the country's 18 million blacks still live in rural areas in a tribal culture, while in the cities a Westernized, black middle class is only beginning to emerge.

Kids recognize differences

Most of the children of the new immigrants go to integrated public schools and have been quick to recognize that, racially speaking, things are different here. One example is in the use of language. In South Africa, the term "uncle" is used to respectfully refer to a white man, but not to a black.

Recently, when Dr. Cornelis Trouw, 34, and his 7-year-old son Arie spotted a black man working across the street, Arie turned to his dad and said, "What is that uncle doing?"

"That was the first time I realized he had adapted to America," says Trouw, who is one of the few Afrikaners to have emigrated. They are the descendants of the German, French and Dutch settlers of South Africa who make up a little more than half of the country's 4.3 million whites and control the government.

While these families seem to accept the racial relationships in the United States, they left their homelands because they feared the physical and economic consequences of racial tension.

One Rhodesian mother explains the fears of those who are leaving: "It's not because of black majority rule that we left but because of the chaos that goes with it. Already services are declining because so many doctors, lawyers and teachers have left."

The decision to pull up roots and take the "chicken run," as it is called derisively, was agonizing and emotional for most families. The experience of Cornelis Trouw is a good example.

'Big mistake'

"We had bitter fights with our families and friends," he says, noting that it took him and his wife Zannette two years to think through the move. "They thought we were 'mad'—that we were making a big mistake." To urge them to stay, his family cited the drug problems among American youth and the crime in the streets and warned, "This will happen to your children."

But his kids have adjusted well. Nine-year-old Estha is taking up gymnastics and piano and has lots of friends in their new neighborhood. She says, "If I have a choice, I'll stay." Arie takes judo and has rapidly learned English, even though he spoke only Afrikaans when he arrived last year.

Despite criticism from family and friends, Trouw, like many others, feels no guilt. He says in America his children can have a secure future.

AN ITALIAN SUPPER

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Firm enough to cut into perfect squares yet tender enough to yield easily to a fork, this flavorful lasagne is an easy-to-make meal in a dish. Be sure to save the recipe—you will certainly want to make it again and again.

There is no need for a first course. With the lasagne serve a green salad made with romaine, escarole and chicory, tossed with bottled Italian dressing. Add both black and stuffed green olives and glasses of dry Chianti wine. If bread is a must in your family (though not necessary), try bread sticks or hot Italian garlic bread. For dessert serve an Italian ice, spumoni or tortoni plus tiny cups of strong espresso coffee.

LASAGNE SQUARES

- | | |
|-------------------------------|--|
| 1 medium onion, chopped | 1 package (10 ounces) frozen chopped spinach, cooked and drained |
| 1/2 green pepper, chopped | 1 pound ricotta cheese |
| 2 garlic cloves, minced | 1 egg |
| 2 tablespoons vegetable oil | 3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese |
| 1 can (28 ounces) tomatoes | 1 teaspoon salt |
| 1 can (6 ounces) tomato paste | 1/4 teaspoon pepper |
| 1/4 cup minced fresh parsley | 8 ounces mozzarella cheese, grated |
| 1/2 teaspoon oregano | |
| 1 bay leaf | |
| 8 ounces lasagne noodles | |

Sauté onion, green pepper and garlic in oil until golden, stirring often. Stir in tomatoes, tomato paste, parsley, oregano and bay leaf. Simmer uncovered for 20 minutes. Cook noodles according to package directions; drain. Combine spinach, ricotta, egg, 1/4 cup Parmesan, salt and pepper.

Spoon 1/3 tomato sauce in bottom of lasagne dish or 13x9-inch baking dish. Cover with 1/3 lasagne noodles, 1/3 spinach-ricotta filling, 1/3 mozzarella and 1/4 cup Parmesan. Repeat layers, using 1/2 remaining sauce and noodles, all remaining filling. Top with remaining noodles, sauce, Parmesan and mozzarella.

Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Let stand a few minutes before cutting into squares for serving. Makes six servings.

WHAT ELSE IS COOKING

Doing without breakfast is more than likely to reduce your work performance by late morning. It may even prevent you from getting an adequate diet for the rest of the day. These are words of wisdom from Mary Clarke, Kansas State University Extension's specialist in nutritive education.

People trying to control their weight and those who suffer from morning headache and irritability are often helped by making breakfast a daily habit, according to Clarke.

An adequate and nutritious breakfast consists of $\frac{1}{2}$ cup orange juice, an egg or a one-ounce serving of cereal, a slice of whole-grain toast, a cup of skim milk and black coffee. It adds only about 265 calories to the day's total.

glazed bird

Thanksgiving is nearly here again, and that means a plump holiday bird. For a beautiful brown glaze, brush it generously with melted clarified bacon fat half an hour before roasting time is finished.

CUTTING TERMS DEFINED

There are a variety of terms for cutting up ingredients when a recipe is being prepared, and each has a slightly different definition. For example:

- Chop—Cut into small pieces.
- Cube—Cut into small, square pieces.
- Dice—Cut into very small, uniform cubes.
- Julienne—Cut into long, thin, match-like strips.
- Mince—Cut or chop into very fine pieces.
- Shred—Shave or cut into long, narrow pieces.
- Sliver—Cut into long, thin pieces.

WHAT'S IN THE CAN?

Soon the weight of fruit and vegetables put into containers before adding packing liquid or syrup will be printed on canned food labels. "Solid content" weight will be given along with the existing "net weight" declaration.

salad imagination

Try canned beans marinated in a vinegar-and-oil dressing with a small amount of chopped celery and onion added for crunch and flavor. Or add sliced onion rings, vinegar and a little sugar to drained canned sliced beets. Or you might combine canned grapefruit sections, mandarin orange sections, a few slices of sweet red onion, several slivered ripe olives and top it all with French dressing.

stuffin' needs cookin'

Turkey stuffing must be completely cooked. The safest way is to cook it separately from the turkey because stuffing inside a warm bird is a breeding ground for bacteria. But if you do cook it inside, be sure the meat thermometer reaches at least 165 degrees.

FRESH IDEAS ON CARE OF MILK

Be aware that 40 degrees is the highest temperature recommended for the storage of milk. As the temperature rises, quality decreases—according to Wanda Mead of the Cooperative Extension Association of Nassau County, N.Y. "Every five-degree rise cuts keeping quality by 50 percent," she notes.

Don't keep milk in the door of the refrigerator. This exposes milk to its greatest enemies—heat and light.

which food most often?

Of those homemakers participating in a nationwide survey, 83 percent named meat as the food most likely to be included in family meals. The second most popular food was vegetables (79 percent), followed by fruit (39 percent), potatoes (33 percent) and milk (30 percent).

TEMPT THE YOUNGER SET

When the gang arrives at your house after a football game, serve mugs of hot cider with bowls of raisins and nuts for munching.

Meanwhile, arrange a make-it-yourself super sandwich buffet. Set out loaves of Italian or French bread partially cut lengthwise, a platter of assorted sliced meats and cheeses, a big bowl of tuna salad and all the "fixin's"—lettuce, sliced tomatoes, salad dressings, pickles, olives, mustard, catchup and so on.

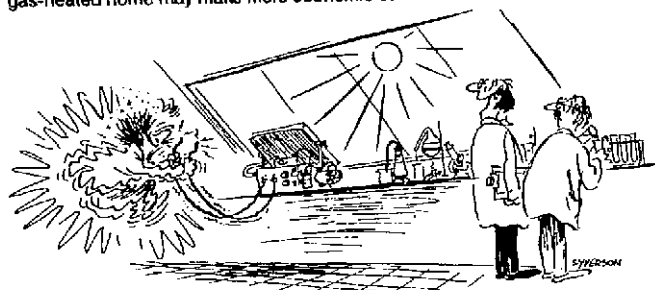

A bowl of fresh apples or a tray of creamy caramel apples will provide an ideal dessert.

Observations

Rays of hope. They come from the sun, the versatile star that warms the earth, grows our food, tans our skins, and supplies almost all the energy used by man. Oil, gas, coal—they all represent solar energy that was trapped millions of years ago. You can warm your feet by the fireplace on a cold winter night because the blazing log releases energy it stored from sunlight. And when you consider how much solar energy falls on the U.S.—enough to supply the nation's energy needs 500 times over every year—you realize why scientists want to harness more of it.

How practical is solar energy? There's a lot of wishful thinking on that score. Solar energy is here now—for supplementing your home heating. But it's expensive. The Federal Energy Administration estimates that a unit costing $4,875 would supply 40 percent of the average family's heating needs in Boston's climate. (The average heating bill in Boston is about $675 a year.) In some cases, like new houses tailored to use of solar heaters, this can make sense as a long-term energy saver. In other situations, buttressing the insulation for an oil or gas-heated home may make more economic sense.

"Well, what do you know? It works."

Needed: an engineering breakthrough. When scientists talk of the great potential of solar energy they're looking beyond home heating—to use of the sun to generate electricity at reasonable cost. That's where the technology is still only partially developed. What's needed are more economic ways to convert the sun's energy to electricity and store it so it's useful 24 hours a day, rain or shine. Mobil alone is spending $30 million on developing solar electricity through a joint venture (Mobil Tyco Solar Energy Corporation). But we've got a way to go, for costs thus far are 30 times those of conventional electricity.

Light in the tunnel. We think that solar cells using silicon ribbons to convert the sun's energy to electricity offer the most hope. If the manufacture of such cells can be improved through large-scale research, mass-production could be possible by 1990. According to the Energy Research and Development Administration, solar cells could represent 20 percent of all the electricity generating capacity added annually by the year 1990. Promising as solar energy is, it offers no immediate easy solutions to the nation's energy problems. And if politicians put too much hope in it helping soon, we could all be burned.

Now—A Magnificent New Commodore Calculator That Needs No Adaptor, No Recharger, No Extra Supply Of Batteries, Won't Die Out When You Need It Most... And Is Unconditionally Guaranteed For Two Full Years.

Never in the history of electronic calculators has there been such a warranty before. The original batteries in this calculator are rated for 5,000 hours, the longest life ever. If anything should go wrong with the batteries or the calculator within two years, for any reason, we'll replace it at no charge.

Commodore—the pioneer in electronic calculators—announces a revolutionary new calculator. Imagine a super thin calculator with a new eight digit liquid crystal display that doesn't emit light and, therefore, needs almost no current.

Then take the new CMOS chip and the most advanced LSI circuitry both designed for delivering maximum power with very little current. Then there are the new high-powered silver-oxide batteries.

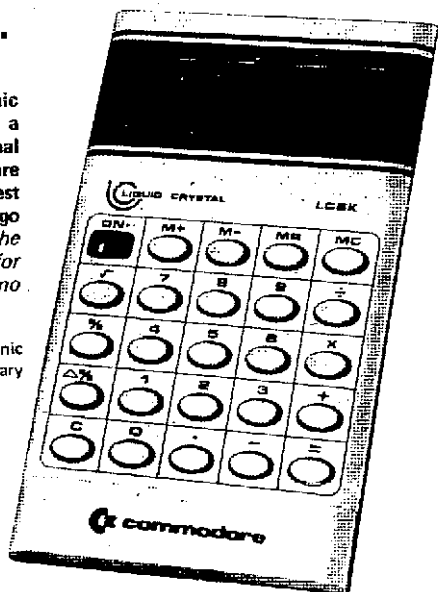

Combine all these factors and you have a completely new concept:

A calculator with a power supply (just two little batteries)—that will last for at least 5,000 hours!

That's several years of uninterrupted use!

This revolutionary new calculator has even more going for it. It is super slim and super trim, less than a quarter of an inch so it can slip easily into any pocket or purse. It's all metal, in a choice of gold or silver tone with burnished silver colored key tops.

And it has four-key all purpose memory

Now only $19.95

Including the batteries.

- live percentage key • buy/sell percentage difference key • automatic square root key
- automatic constant • floating decimal . . . all that you would ever ask of a lifetime calculator.

From Commodore—the first to introduce mass-marketed calculators and one of the largest producers of electronic calculators in the world.

Now only $19.95 (plus handling and applicable tax) including leather-like protective pouch . . . and the two-year unconditional guarantee.

Don't you owe it to yourself—and to someone important on your gift list—to buy the very best? Especially when the very best doesn't cost any more?

Super trim—barely 1/4" thin—to fit in any pocket or purse

The joys of having children are now being shared by many couples who were once infertile. About 15 percent of couples of childbearing age are infertile, but as many as half can be helped with treatment.

New Aids for Infertile Couples

by Lawrence Galton

After 10 years of barren marriage, a North Carolina couple today are proud parents of a newborn son as the result of effective treatment for the husband's infertility problem. The treatment: one previously used to help infertile women.

In New York, a couple also long childless now have two youngsters thanks to a new technique of coitus.

At a time when birth control, abortion, and zero population growth have been most in the news, millions of couples face the reverse problem: how to have the children they want.

Infertility, in fact, is a growing problem now affecting an estimated 15% of couples of childbearing age, up from 10% a decade or so ago.

One reason: the postponement of pregnancy by more and more women in favor of careers. Yet, after peaking in the late teens and early 20's, reproductive capacity for women begins to decline; by the time many decide to have a child, risk of failure has grown.

Fortunately, thanks to new medical techniques, as many as half of the infertile can be helped today—and some of the busiest physicians and clinics in the U. S. are those specializing in solving fertility problems.

In Philadelphia recently, when a woman in her mid-30's sought help, she was placed on drug treatment designed to produce a state of false pregnancy. After six months of the treatment, she conceived and subsequently delivered a healthy baby.

Her problem had been endometriosis, a condition in which lining tissue of the uterus grows abnormally outside the uterus, often interfering with functioning of the ovaries. Sometimes surgery may be needed, but medical treatment now may help many women.

Pseudopregnancy

It uses increasing doses of synthetic progesterone hormones for six to nine months to produce pseudopregnancy—a state in which there are all the signs of pregnancy, including cessation of menstruation, but no fetus.

With pseudopregnancy, the uterine tissue in abnormal sites undergoes degeneration and fertility improves.

Inflammatory disease of the pelvic organs can cause infertility. It may result from gonorrhea or, less often, from abortion or other causes. Cure requires use of suitable potent antibiotics and may also involve temporary abstinence from intercourse.

In 10 to 25% of infertile couples, the problem lies with cervical secretion that may be hostile to sperm.

There are now techniques to identify such secretions in tests carried out after coitus. Treatment may be relatively simple, consisting of small doses of estrogen or an alkaline douche prior to intercourse. In some cases, artificial insemination may be needed.

Not infrequently, thyroid or endocrine gland disorders are responsible for infertility in women—and can be corrected.

Infertility caused by damaged or defective fallopian tubes is sometimes a more difficult problem. If the tubes are missing in part or poorly developed, correction may not be possible. But if there is blockage, the tubes may be cleared surgically—and sometimes when blockage is not far advanced it may even be cleared by a diagnostic test such as one in which a dye is injected into uterus and tubes to allow them to be seen clearly on X-rays. The injection itself may open the passages.

In many women, the basic problem is failure to ovulate or release eggs. And this is now being treated with increasing success.

Gonadotropins are pituitary gland hormones which stimulate the ovaries, but in some women they may be inadequate for ovulation. In such cases, gonadotropins obtained from human menopausal urine and sometimes from cadaver pituitary glands have been tried. But often they have been excessively stimulating, leading to multiple ova release and multiple births, including quadruplets and quintuplets.

A drug added

Recently, however, better results have been obtained by combining gonadotropins with a drug, clomiphene. Dr. Robert W. Kistner of Harvard Medical School has reported using the combination in 80 women. Twenty-nine became pregnant; only two had multiple pregnancies.

And a few months ago, Dr. Struan Robertson, director of the sterility clinic at Women's Hospital, Sydney, Australia, reported a study in which 50 women received clomiphene plus an estrogen preparation, ethinyl estradiol, before their gonadotropin injections; 58 others received only gonadotropin shots.

Of the 50 women getting the full treatment, 33, or 66%, became pregnant and only two of the births were multiple—twins in both cases. In contrast, among the 58 other women, there were 34 pregnancies, 12 of them multiple—7 pairs of twins, 2 sets of triplets, 3 of quadruplets. Clomiphene induces ovulation in women, also increases sperm counts in infertile men.

At Duke University School of Medicine, Durham, N. C., Drs. David F. Paulson and Jeff Wacksman have used clomiphene—in doses of 25 milligrams a day for 25 days a month for up to six months—in a series of 35 infertile men with low sperm counts. In 31, sperm counts improved, and 8 of the wives became pregnant.

Center have reported on 540 subfertile men who underwent varicocele surgery. Semen quality improved in 71% and 55% of the wives became pregnant.

Another promising development has been reported by Drs. Dubin and Amelar. They have found that some men with poor semen quality despite a high volume of semen may become of the ejaculate, the adjustment involves withdrawal from the vagina after deposition of the first, better portion.

Donor sperm may be resorted to when infertility can't be overcome or when there is a risk of passing on hereditary defects present in the husband or his family.

The husband's sperm may be used in some cases where there is cervical hostility, as mentioned earlier, or where impregnation is difficult because the wife suffers from prolapse of the uterus or other physical problems. It may also be used in some cases when the husband has fertility problems. Some success has been achieved in recent studies by inseminating with pooled quantities of the husband's frozen sperm when he has good sperm motility but inadequate quantities in his ejaculate.

When to seek help

The question of when a couple should consider themselves sterile and seek help is important.

Studies have established that two-thirds of pregnancies occur within 3 months of the start of unprotected intercourse; within 6 months, 75 to 80% of women become pregnant; and by the end of one year, as many as 90% have conceived.

To be sure, at least another 5% of women normally conceive during the second year. But one or two years of trial should not be required for every couple, experts advise.

Says Dr. Howard Balin, formerly of Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia: "The fertility potential of women, as well as success following treatment for infertility, declines with age. It would seem justifiable, therefore, for couples in their 30's to seek advice after somewhat less than one year."

Where should help be sought?

Many obstetrician-gynecologists as well as many urologists now specialize in treating infertility problems. Your family physician may be able to recommend one. You can also write to the American Fertility Society, 1608 13th Avenue South, Birmingham, Ala. 35205, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The society lists its expert members by geographical area.

You can also check with the nearest medical center or Planned Parenthood Center. Either or both may have an infertility clinic staffed by experts.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

One of the most common infertility causes in men is the development of varicose veins within the scrotum. The varicoceles, as they are called, can be felt during examination, and the condition often can be corrected by a surgical procedure taking half an hour or less.

Drs. Lawrence Dubin and Richard Amelar of New York University Medical fertile through an adjustment in sexual relations.

In 33 cases, after barren marriages of many years, wives became pregnant within one to six months after the adjustment. Based on studies showing that the first portion of the ejaculate of some infertile men is superior in sperm concentration and motility to the remainder

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

PORTABLE SKI VISE: Helpful for maintaining your skis in top condition both at home and on extended ski vacations to the mountains this winter, a new portable vise requires no clamping to a bench or a table. It provides three-point ski support—on edge or flat—for waxing, for accurate edge and flat filing, and for base and binding work. This portable ski vise travels in a 36-inch-long, form-fitted box and assembles without tools. $69.50 ppd. BEK Products, Dept. PP, Box 5047, Walnut Creek, Cal. 94596. (above)

FOR YOUR FREEZER: A help in solving freezer storage and clutter problems, new large-capacity baskets can be loaded with food, carried by their handles and stacked for maximum use of space. Four extender arms on the bottom of each basket separate and support the units for easy stacking. Washable, vinyl-cushion-coated steel; 20" long, 9 1/2" wide, 6 1/2" deep. In white, avocado, gold, sand or black. $4.29 in stores. Grayline Housewares, Dept. PP, 1616 Berkley St., Elgin, Ill. 60120.

WIND-CHILL THERMOMETER: Wind intensifies the cold, especially below 40° F. With a new outdoor thermometer, you can read the temperature with wind-chill taken into account. For example, when it is 20° F and wind is 20 mph, the thermometer indicates a wind-chill temperature of -9° F. Suggested list price: $2.98. Cooper Thermometer Co., Dept. PP, Reeds Gap Rd., Middlefield, Conn. 06455. (above left)

WHOLE-HOUSE HUMIDIFIER: Designed for do-it-yourself installation, a new humidifier has 14-gallons-a-day capacity, sufficient to humidify a typical 3-bedroom home (claims the maker). It's pre-plumbed, pre-wired. To install, cut opening in heating duct, mount unit, insert self-tapping saddle valve in nearest cold-water pipe and plug 24-volt transformer into any household outlet. Suggested retail price: under $60, with all necessary hardware. Details: Comfort Enterprises, Dept. PP, Box 323, Leola, Pa. 17540. (above right)

LURE RETRIEVER: A telescoping retriever that extends from 3 1/2' to 10' will rescue any lure it can reach (claims the maker). A tangled lure is recovered from an underwater obstacle by a spiral snare at the end of the retriever. To use, just turn the open-ended snare on the snagged line and follow the line down to the trapped lure. $10.95 ppd. Lur-Pal Co., Dept. PP, Box 155, Elmhurst, Ill. 60126.

In addition to more priceless songs, you'll listen and love Elvis' Grammy-winning smash from the late 1960's, "How Great Thou Art." Also included are "Put Your Hand in the Hand," a dramatic medley including "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Dixie," and "All My Hard Times." "You'll Never Walk Alone," Elvis' powerful hit from Easter of 1958, and "Follow That Dream," the title track from the biggest selling extended play album of the 1960's!

Let Elvis Presley, the Man who inspires millions, share with you the sacred songs that inspire him!

HAL RIDDLE and Laura Wallace (rear) look on approvingly as Kenia Borell (front, left) and Julie Pickarski load up some produce to help out migrant workers in their town, in "Mobile Maidens," a dramatic special aimed at children. It airs at 4:30 p.m. Thursday on Ch. 2 as the second story on the monthly "The Winners" series of dramatic specials.

Feel the Real taste difference.

Real

The natural cigarette.
Low tar. Nothing artificial added.

Your cigarette enhances its flavor artificially. All major brands do. New Real does not. It doesn't need to. We've discovered the way to keep natural taste in, artificial out. All the taste and flavor in Real is natural.

Of course Real's menthol is fresh, natural. Not synthetic.

You get a rich, satisfying smoke. Taste you can feel. Full, natural taste. So taste your first low tar natural cigarette. Taste Real... smoke natural.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

9 mg. "tar", 0.8 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC method.

my FAVORITE jokes

by DAN O'DAY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dan O'Day has been a disc jockey on stations in Virginia, Florida and California. His shows have always been comedy-oriented, with many character voices and fake commercials. Among his favorites is the one for "Ed's All-New Elevator Wigs—for short, bald men."

O'Day has two comedy services—Obits and O'Liners—for disc jockeys, comedians and after-dinner speakers. He also guests on local TV shows and emcees at various events.

Dan, who was selected as one of the four best radio personalities of 1974 and '75 by Billboard magazine, has a very sensitive disposition. "You gotta have friends," he says, "'cause those are the people you use and take advantage of." Here are some of Dan O'Day's lines:

You want to hear something silly? A friend of mine says I'm too sensitive. That's ridiculous. Kind of hurts my feelings, though.

Eventually I'd like to get out of show business and enter politics. I'm hoping to join the Carter Administration as a Usually Reliable Source.

I'm going to write a letter to President Carter saying I'm behind his energy conservation plan 100 percent—just as soon as I find a place to plug in my electric pencil.

One of my best friends is a big-time disc jockey. He's the only guy I know who carries his tongue around in a leather case.

The last station manager I worked for was the kind of guy who, if you were drowning, would reach out a hand—and in it would be a joy-buzzer.

Actually, he willed his body to science. Science is contesting the will.

My wife belongs to a really weird religion, the Orthodox Bureaucrats. They believe that when you die your soul goes to Washington, D.C., where it gets lost in all the paperwork.

I can identify with Rodney Dangerfield. I don't get no respect either. Yesterday I called my answering service to see if I had any messages, and they told me it was none of my business.

At my wedding I asked the best man to sign the marriage certificate as a witness, but he said he didn't want to get involved.

My father was an inventor. He stayed up nights trying to find a cure for insomnia.

My neighbor is in the hospital. He had just beaten me in a video game of "Pong" on his TV and made the mistake of trying to jump over the net.

My doctor has found a solution to the rising cost of malpractice insurance. He's installed one of those insurance vending machines you see at airports. For 50¢ his patients can buy $50,000 worth of protection per checkup.

Of course there are always people who try to take advantage of the system. One patient bought the insurance and walked into the office with three sticks of dynamite under his tongue.

All my life I've wanted either to work in the Pentagon or be president of a large corporation. My psychiatrist says I have a Military Industrial Complex.

I once cut my own country record. It wasn't a hit, but I liked it. It was called "She's Only Been Gone Seven Days, But Already It Seems Like a Week."

Sometimes my wife is so emotional. She once sent me a valentine that said, "My love for you will always fluctuate!"

Did you know that kids in school are allowed to use pocket calculators while taking a math test? When I was a kid I had to get the answers the old-fashioned way—I had to get 'em off my shirt-sleeves.

The way I look at it there's nothing wrong with being mediocre as long as you're good at it.

Ready for a clean sweep are six members of the Atlanta Mini Maids, dressed in their striped-apron uniforms.

Wearing white coats are Mrs. Leone Ackerly, head of the organization, and husband William, its vice president.

You Can Have Your House Cleaned in a Jiffy

by E.D. Fales Jr.

ATLANTA, GA.

Housework haters, take heart. Help is on the way. It takes the form of flying squads of expert sweepers, vacuumers, dishwashers and bed-makers who scour your house faster than Hercules cleaned up the Augean stables.

These high-speed housework teams, a big success in Atlanta, are starting to spread to other American cities, providing relief to harried housewives, working women, the elderly and others, and at the same time creating jobs for dozens of willing workers.

One of the leading entrepreneurs of the broomstick blitz business is Mrs. Leone Ackerly, 26, who says she got the idea when she was unable to find a houseworker to help clean her own home, where she lives with her businessman-husband and three daughters. After repeatedly calling job agencies to no avail, she decided to become a maid herself.

"I saw a business opportunity if housework could be streamlined," she says. Mrs. Ackerly quickly found a number of friends and neighbors who were delighted to go into business with her. Donning aprons, they began hiring out by the hour, bringing their own equipment along. One hauled golf clubs out of her car to make room for a vacuum cleaner and a couple of wash-buckets.

Today, after four years in business, Leone Ackerly is still cleaning up. There's a one-week waiting list to get her Mini Maids, she has branches in Georgia and Florida, and she plans to open offices in several northern cities.

Plan ahead

The secret of her success, she says, is scientific planning and no-waste execution. If you dial her for help, you'll find not one but four Mini Maids at your door promptly at the appointed hour. Under a team-leader's direction, they cut cleaning time to a fraction, zooming through a house or apartment in perhaps half an hour before rushing off to the next client.

Mrs. Ackerly contends that most women spend far more time than needed in doing their chores. The moment her Mini Maids hit the scene they begin work. One heads for the kitchen, another for the bathroom, still others for bedrooms and living room. Everything needed goes with them, around their waists and in small pails. Not a step is retraced. They circle around each room methodically, left to right, cleaning, polishing, dusting, tidying up. Then suddenly they're gone. "Our girls," says Mrs. Ackerly, "do just about everything maids used to do, and a lot faster."

The cost? The Mini Maid bill may range from $10 for a two-room apartment to $50 for a seven-room house. The average charge, Mrs. Ackerly says, has been running around $19.50 for a one-day-a-week visit by a four-maid team. Each team cleans an average of seven homes a day, although some manage more. The pay usually works out to about $18 to $20 a day for each team member, with $25 for the leader.

Professional cleaning services have been available in many localities of the U.S. for years. For example, Service Master, a national organization headquartered in Downers Grove, Ill., has been in the business of supplying and training help since 1946.

But with more and more women leaving their houses to hold daily jobs—and with the shortage of domestic workers of previous eras—the team-cleaning service concept is spreading, and increasing numbers of newcomers are plunging into the field.

In Boston you can have your home cleaned by Harvard student teams. In Berkeley, you can get University of California students. In Chattanooga, Tenn., the wife of a college dean—trained, incidentally, by the Atlanta Mini Maids—will bring a squad around.

One-person 'teams'

In Denver, Paul Hollins gave up a management job to launch two teams because he saw good money in housework. Two of his workers, for two hours, cost the customer $30. Not all services are multiperson. For $5.25 an hour, Chicago's Merry Pop-Ins still sends one woman or one man. Service Master also still prefers one-person "teams." Al Lebel's Maid for a Day service in Waterbury, Conn., will send out either one or two persons to each job.

In San Francisco, Dr. Michael Kacino, a retired psychologist, set up house-keeping services on a one-person basis after first trying it himself.

"We specialize in old-fashioned methods," Kacino says. "To scrub, we get down on hands and knees. To wash windows, we still use plain water and vinegar and newspapers. People like it."

With this concept, Kacino calls his service Grandma's Housecleaning. An average three-hour job costs $18. So successful has Kacino been that he's recently opened a carpentry division to provide quick and expert service for such matters as fixing broken windows, patching gutters, repairing roofs and performing similar chores.

'Can be interesting'

But it's the high-speed household-technician team concept pioneered by Leone Ackerly that some observers think offers the most promising new wrinkle in housework. Mrs. Ackerly believes she may be bringing about a lasting change in the traditional concept that domestic cleaning is a menial chore performed by persons of poor education who can't do anything else.

"Housework in teams the way we do it can be more interesting than office or factory work," she declares. "There's nothing shameful about it. It has dignity."

GENE HACKMAN stars as private eye Harry Moseby, and Susan Clark is his unfaithful wife, Ellen, in the mystery movie "Night Moves," which airs at 9 p.m. Friday on Ch. 2.

MYSTERY THEATER — KNX, 9:06 p.m.
Sunday — "Tomorrow, Cloudy and Cold." A para-was not the happy and wholesome, clean-living person he appeared to be.

What happened to bring about the change? Why, Jones said, he experienced a spiritual rebirth. He is a born-again Christian.

"It is difficult to explain what happened," he said. "Words are not adequate. It was more a spiritual thing than an intellectual thing."

THE REBIRTH occurred in a hotel room in Cherry Hill, N.J., when Dean was rehearsing for a summer stock production of "1776." He had been drinking heavily and was extremely depressed. Life seemed meaningless, not worth continuing.

Weeping, Dean dropped to his knees on the floor of his hotel room and started praying. After many hours, he said, his prayers were answered and he was touched by the Holy Spirit. He found peace.

Since that life-changing experience, Dean said, he has given his life to God and he has been happier than he ever was before.

"If He asked me to give up my money, I'd do it," the actor said. "It hasn't happened, but I'd do it."

Jones had thought that achieving stardom and making money would bring happiness, but it did not. "There are a lot of people like that in Hollywood," he commented. "They're successful in their careers, they make big money — and they're miserable."

Booze and women didn't bring Dean what he was looking for, either.

He often was so depressed, he said, that he would recklessly drive his psychologist changes a young man into a person whose moods, instead of being affected by the weather, affect the weather.

Monday — "The Therapeutic Cat." A wealthy man on the verge of a breakdown is told to get a cat and imitate it. He does and becomes so fond of the cat that he decides to leave his fortune to the feline, much to the consternation of his son.

Tuesday — "The Haunted Mill." A doctor who thinks that belief in the supernatural shows a weakness of will is convinced to go on a midnight visit to a run-down old mill, supposedly haunted.

Wednesday — "The Red Circle." A woman is visited by an old and dear friend who, she later discovers, has been dead for three weeks.

Thursday — "A Tale of Two Worlds." A young actor, written out of a soap opera, threatens to kill the producer — or himself.

Friday — "We Meet Again." A detective's wife refuses to believe the suspected murderer her husband has tracked down is guilty — she was once engaged to him.

Saturday — "Fan Mail." An actor who kills his wife on a television soap opera is murdered in real life when it appears, in the TV story, he's going to get away with the crime.

ADVENTURE THEATER — KNX, 7:06 p.m.
Sunday — "Treasure Island." Based on Robert Louis Stevenson's first novel.
Saturday — "A Coat of Many Colors." Based on the biblical story of Joseph.

and Paul also play some of the fairy tale characters. "I'm the grandmother of Little Red Riding Hood and get eaten by Cleavon Little, as the wolf," Dean noted.

Guest stars besides Little include Ruth Buzzi as Queen Astrid, Arte Johnson as Sefish and Mean, Teri Garr as the Frog Princess, Clive Revill as Rumpelstiltskin and Chita Rivera as the Gingerbread Lady.

Jones, Sand and a number of the guest stars get to display their singing talents, as Oscar-winning lyricist Sammy Cahn and Tony-winning composer Mitch Leigh have written 14 new songs for the two-hour show.

DEAN'S TV background includes starring parts in three series, "Ensign O'Toole" on NBC in 1962-63; "What's It All About, World?" on ABC in 1969, and "The Chicago Teddy Bears" on CBS in 1971.

He has completed work in an upcoming NBC movie, "When Every Day Was the Fourth of July," in which he plays a Jewish lawyer defending a man unjustly accused of murder in 1937. The film is being considered as the basis for a potential series.

And the "born again" Christian actor has just recently been selected to portray ex-President Nixon's Watergate collaborator Charles Colson in the movie version of Colson's book, "Born Again," with shooting due to begin in Washington next month.

Although Jones has starred in several of the most popular movies of the past decade, he's looking forward to some more dramatic-type roles, and believes his "best movie" is still ahead.

Regardless of which direction his career takes him, his fans hope the popular actor will live happily ever after.

BIANCA AND MICK JAGGER: THEIR MARRIAGE IS "VERY MUCH ON COURSE"

The Sage Speaks

Mick Jagger, the Rolling Stones' lead man, was asked recently if he thought rock musicians could progress into middle age with any sort of dignity.

"Judging from Elvis," Jagger said, "I think not. No, rock 'n' roll music is for adolescents. It's adolescent music. It's a dead end. I think the whole history of rock 'n' roll has proved that."

Jagger insists that, despite what appears in print, his marriage to Bianca "is very much on course. Somehow," he adds, "the public doesn't seem to like it if we stay together. They seem to prefer couples who are fighting."

Correction

Dr. John Hembree of the University of Tennessee's College of Dentistry takes exception to an item concerning dental students we ran in this column in July. At that time, in citing a study, "The Effects of Dental Drill Noise on the Hearing of Dentists," we said dental students at the university suffered a significant loss of hearing within three years from using high-speed drills.

Not true... about students. "The results of this study [written by M.A. Weatherston, Ray E. Melton and William W. Burns]," it says, "indicated that exposure to dental drills at this particular dental school does not necessarily damage the student's hearing sensitivity during the three-year program... The results do show, however, that continued exposure over a period of years will cause irreversible hearing loss as found in the faculty."

Dr. Hembree agrees that "members of the faculty that were in the study did demonstrate some loss of hearing." But he adds, "High-speed noise was not implicated because the changes could be attributed to the age of the faculty participants."

Girl Matador

If you haven't heard of her already, you soon will. Her name is Maribel Atienzar. She is Spanish and 17 and known to bullfight fans as La Niña Torera, "the baby bullfighter."

Maribel has been swirling a cape since 14, thus far killed 35 bulls. At first her mother objected to her becoming a bullfighter. "It's more fitting for your brother Palo," she said. "Bullfighting is my life," Maribel insisted. She made Palo her manager, is touring Spain where she is booked into corridas as La Niña.

Marry in Haste

Greg Allman, the rock star whose band raised thousands of dollars for Jimmy Carter's Presidential campaign, recently told Viva magazine how he came to marry Cher Bono in the first place.

He and Cher had been friends for only four months when "one Sunday morning I woke up, and she said, 'I got this Lear jet and Nevada ain't too far away. Why don't we get married?' And I said, 'I don't know if I'm ready to get into this, but OK, let's do it.'"

As soon as he and Cher were married, however, it dawned on Allman—who used to be a hefty drug-user—that he really didn't love Cher, in fact had never loved her and "was sorry that I had done it. We came home from the wedding, got off the jet, and I was gone for two days." But Allman wants his fans to know that "I ain't putting her down or anything like that. She was just as sorry that we'd done it."

One child later, Cher and Greg Allman find themselves in a nerve-racking, unstable relationship. Moral: Never marry in haste—or at least wait until your head has cleared from the bash the night before.

Fybate Folds

Fybate Lecture Notes, a note-taking service near the University of California campus in Berkeley, has gone out of business.

For more than 40 years, Fybate was a fixture from which students could buy class notes for $5 or $10.

Tom Winnett, who owned Fybate since 1950, says, "It was the cheap copying machine which did us in. A couple of students would buy our notes, then copy them on a Xerox or another machine. Our class notes were copyrighted, and it was illegal to copy them, but who could stop it?"

Fybate used to hire students who had previously taken the course to write the notes, and it paid professors who permitted the practice a royalty of 80 percent of sales.

Since the demise of its note-taking business, Fybate has switched to producing trail guides under the name of Wilderness Press.
